The Methodist Council of Brazil, which was granted autonomy by the General Conference of the Methodist Church last May, held its first general conference last month and elected as bishop Rev. J. W. Tarboux, who served as a missionary in Brazil for thirty years, but who has resided in Miami, Fla., for the past nine years. This is another movement toward the extension of self-government in foreign lands and will inspire others in State and Church to give autonomy to people who are calling for their independence as they are in India and other foreign lands. The trend of intelligence in religious and political matters is toward self-control, independence and democracy. The ideal toward which all forms of government tends is intelligent self-control of the individual and institutions.

RELIGION IN A TELESCOPE.—

In a recent sermon, Rev. H. Percy Silver, of the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, New York City, declared that "we cannot possibly find peace at the end of a telescope. We can find it only in what Jesus revealed, in what He found in God. There we find the strange power of our faith, the intimate relationship between God and man. Today we should get ourselves into the frame of mind where we can understand the God who may give us peace and contentment and who will give more than we desire and deserve." This should remind us that God is in His world, in human experience, enriching, inspiring, ennobling and uplifting life here and now. "The kingdom of God is within you." He should become Lord of your life and spirit, and He should be crowned within with a coronation of consecration.

THE CHURCH IN CHICAGO.—

According to figures in the new Year Book of the Chicago Church Federation, recently published by Walter R. Mee, general secretary, Chicago's Protestant Churches spent during the past year $12,539,222 on new Church buildings and other religious structures. The increase in membership in the Churches of the city during the year amounted to 65,000 during the evangelism campaign conducted by the Church, stimulated by federation activity, which culminated with the Easter service. The entire Protestant Church growth, including the campaign of evangelism, totals an estimate of 100,000. If this result can take place in the city of Chicago by systematic effort, something similar could take place in other cities and even in rural districts if an evangelistic campaign were planned and pushed for similar results. The evangelist work of the Church is vital to its growth, and training for Christian service should follow in the Churches.

CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN ANNUAL.—

The first Congregational-Christian Year Book since the merger of the two denominations shows a membership of 1,052,924, which is 8,110 more members than were shown in the combined membership of the two fellowships for the previous year. Arrangements are being made for the first meeting of the newly united denominal body in the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches, in Seattle, Wash., next July. In the meantime, many steps toward the completion of the merger have been taken. The foreign mission work and the periodicals of the denominations were merged last spring. The home or national mission work will be completed and begin operation January 1, 1931. Sectional and State mergers which have already been consummated include the formation of the Ohio Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches, the Indiana Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches, and the Southeastern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, representing Churches in eleven States from Delaware to Florida and west of the Mississippi River. The total enrollment in Sunday Schools is 789,427; in young people's organizations, 161,039. This army of Christian young people, trained for Christian service can revolutionize the work of the kingdom in one generation, if they will.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. D. P. Barrett, writing from Ponce, P. R., advises that both his daughter, Alice, and his son, Palmer, who graduated from Elon College, are now in Porto Rico, teaching; the former in the high school in Ponce, and the latter in Guayama, out fifty miles from Ponce. Another daughter, Miss Mabel, who graduated from Elon, is also on the island and has been teaching as supply in the Ponce city schools.

"The Church has always been the means of supplying strength, inspiration and courage with which to bravely face the future. Shall we not deem it worthy of our most loyal attendance and support? Let us not put the Church off with the crumbs of our time and pocketbook, but rather give of the first fruits of our efforts." The above is a notation from an active and efficient Church treasurer to the individuals of her local Church.

Rev. T. N. Lowe, Portsmouth, Va., is closing up his fourth year as pastor at our Elm Avenue Church. At the close of the year, Bro. Lowe writes: "The work is going forward nicely, and we are looking for the best year in the history of the Church. We had last Sunday, October 5th, the largest Sunday School in the history of the Church. We have some of the best people here to be found anywhere, kind and generous. Look and see us grow." From the Portsmouth Star we print the following: "At the fourth quarterly conference, held at the Elm Avenue Christian Church last week, Rev. T. N. Lowe, who is completing his fourth year as pastor of the Church, was unanimously called to the Church for the ensuing year, and accepted with appropriate remarks."

The Mission Board was in all-day session at Suffolk, Va., Tuesday, October 7th. There was a falling off of receipts to missions during the past year over that of the previous year, possibly owing to the general financial depression. It has been truly said that when economic depression comes and the people are faced with the necessity of cutting and economizing, they usually cut and economize on their giving to the Church and to benevolence. The Church is the first to suffer in time of financial depression. The board was enabled only to meet its obligations in work already begun, both at home and abroad, and could not undertake any new projects or new plans for work in the home or foreign field. The Southern Convention voted in its last session that, for the coming biennium, we raise $50,000 per year for missions, one-half to home and one-half to foreign. The board is anxious to carry out this request and decision of the Convention, and steps are to be taken and plans laid for giving our people the opportunity of making this increased donation to missions this year. With such an increase, the board will be able not only to assist in projects already under way and in helping to support missionaries now on the field, but will be able to initiate new projects and the support of others who give their time to the work of kingdom-building.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bland, near Walters, Va., was the scene of a very happy and joyful occasion Sunday, September 28th, when their children and grandchildren were present in honor of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. A bountiful dinner was served, picnic style, on the spacious lawn. Their children, seven in number, are as follows: J. T. Blank, Marengo, Va.; Logan Bland, Portsmouth, Va.; W. H. Bland, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. J. E. Bradshaw, Colosse, Va.; J. H. Bland, Lacrosse, Va.; Mrs. L. E. Duck, Franklin, Va., and Mrs. Vernon Vaughan, Victoria, Va., and there are thirty grandchildren.

During the afternoon a number of friends called to congratulate the happy couple. There were many useful and appropriate gifts. Bro. and Sister Bland have lived at their present home for these fifty years and have prospered in their endeavors. Their aim has been to serve their community, and they are held in high esteem by all who know them. They have been life-long members of Mt. Carmel Christian Church.

GEORGIA CONFERENCE.

The 1930 session of the Georgia Christian Conference has passed into history. The Conference met last Tuesday morning, October 7th, with the Church at Oak Grove, near Chipley, Ga. There was a fine representation of both ministers and delegates. One or two Churches were not represented by delegation, but had their reports on hand.

Considering the depression in the South, this was the best Conference that has been held in the State of Georgia for the Christian Church. The reports were fine, the discussions were timely and to the point. The resolutions committee presented some very thoughtful resolutions. The memorial committee presented to the Conference a very fine memorial of Rev. H. W. Elder, and also of Bro. J. H. Floyd. This scene in the Conference was very impressive.

The Conference was royally entertained by the Church and community. The whole congregation enjoyed a treat the second day at noon. It was announced in Conference that Bro. Atkinson, of Jacksonville, Fla., had shipped to Oak Grove Church a hundred pounds of fresh fish. These fish came duly to hand and were nicely dressed and cooked by Bros. Myhand and Tucker, of the community—and then the feast! Every one seemed at his best, and fish went to their intended lodging-place. A resolution of thanks was voted to Bro. Atkinson.

The fellowship of the Conference was fine, every thing was harmonious, the same officers were elected for next year, and the work of the kingdom, as committed to our Church in the State of Georgia, moves forward into the future with good prospects for a successful year.

LYNCHBURG CHURCH.

The United Christian Church, Lynchburg, Va., began a series of revival meetings on Sunday, October 5th, to continue through October 19th. The pastor, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, is doing the preaching, and the Higgins sisters, who are from Pleasant Ridge Church, in Guilford County, N. C., are singing. They were with us last year, and the people of the city flocked to hear them sing. They have not forgotten them here, and at three services Sunday we had good crowds.

The Sunday School put on a rally-day program, suggested by the Christian Education Department of the Southern Christian Convention, which was well received. In the afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock, we had a musical program of one hour, and all the congregation was asked to visit some one before the night service and invite some one to the services or speak to them about their soul's salvation. At the night service the pastor preached on the subject, "The Might of Right," using as his text, "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

On Monday night the subject was, "The Broken and Unbroken Nets." Each morning at 7 o'clock there will be held a prayer service in the basement of the Church, under the leadership of Mr. C. A. Brooks. The prayers of the Christian people are earnestly requested. Will you, kind reader, think of us and pray for us each evening during the meeting as we gather at 7 o'clock for our prayer service and during the service hour?

For several weeks prior to the meeting the regular Wednesday evening prayer services have been in charge of the young people's Christian Endeavor Society, and each Friday evening the Billy Sunday Club has held a cottage prayer meeting. On the last Wednesday evening before the meeting we had a consecration prayer meeting, at the close of which all those present formed a prayer circle and the pastor led us in a consecration prayer.

In closing, will tell you something of the singing of the Higgins sisters. Those of you who know them can picture them as they file into the Church for the evening services—Sallie, Mary, Allie and Catherine. Not being a musician myself, I am unable to tell you all about the clearness of tone, melody and harmony of their voices, but I can say that I have never heard any quartet that equals them. If you have not heard them, you have missed a lot; and if it is convenient for you to visit us during the meeting it will be worth your time and trouble.

Again we ask you to remember our campaign in your prayer at any time, and especially as we meet each evening at 7 o'clock during the service.

W. T. Dunn.

NOTICE.

Any Church or Churches not having called a pastor or contemplating a change, and desires my services, I shall be glad to consider the same. I am open for full time. D. D. Nash.

Box 791, Hopewell, Va.

NOTICE.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference will meet with the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., on Friday, October 24, 1930. It is earnestly desired that each society will strive to meet the requirements of the "Standard of Excellence," and make this the banner year of our work. Mrs. Ray Clarke Tillinghast, of New York City, who has just completed a trip around the world, will be the speaker and tell of her contact with the women in foreign lands.

Mrs. L. W. Stagg, Sec'y.

CONFERENCES MEET.

Eastern Virginia Conference will meet with the Church at South Norfolk, Va., Wednesday before the first Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference will meet on Tuesday after the second Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M., at Long's Chapel, Alamance County, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference will meet Wednesday after the first Sunday in November, 1930, 10:30 A. M., with Hank's Chapel.

Eastern North Carolina Conference will meet with the Catawba Springs Christian Church, Wake County, N. C., on Tuesday after the third Sunday in November, 1930, at 10:30 A. M.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

WHITEHALL, GA.: The Congregational Church at Whitehall, near Waycross, Ga., has recently given the building a general renovating, and since that has organized a Christian Endeavor Society. A Sunday School is now being organized. Good work. There is a splendid group of young people here which will make things go.

REV. ARTHUR P. VAUGHN, D. D., of Avon Park, had a sermon printed in "The Pulpit" published by the Christian Century, and also accompanying it was his picture. The sermon was one of high order and presented a very interesting point of view. Dr. Vaughn's friends in Florida were pleased at this honor and recognition which he received.

BRISTOL, GA.: At Antioch Church, near Bristol, a new Christian Endeavor Society is organized. This is a Church organized nearly forty years ago by Rev. G. N. Smith, who recently resigned this pastorate. Rev. W. C. Carpenter, pastor of a Christian Church, is the new pastor and is bringing new life and vigor to this country Church which serves a fine community of wide-awake people. They have a progressive group of strong young people.

BAXLEY, GA.: Years ago, Mr. Baxley gave a large lot to some early Congregational people, upon which to build a Church. They did so about two miles from the city named for Mr. Baxley. They call it Friendship Church. Rev. G. N. Smith, who organized this Church thirty-five years or more ago, is still the pastor. Miss Annie Campbell, full-time worker for south Georgia and pastor-at-large, visited this Church October 5th. Mr. Sweet preached the sermon. Following this a Sunday School was organized, with a fine list of officers heading it up. Looks mighty good.

FLORIDA CONVOCATION.

The annual Convocation of Florida Congregational ministers was held at the Seaside Inn, Daytona Beach, October 6-9th. The attendance was large, considering the limited number of Congregational ministers in Florida. There were twenty-six ministers in attendance, with a total attendance of thirty-seven. The group lived together at the hotel, where the meetings were held, and enjoyed fine fellowship and a splendid program.

Rev. J. Delman Kuykendall, D. D., of Coconut Grove; Rev. E. A. King, D. D., of Miami Beach, and Rev. W. R. Kedzie, D. D., of Chicago, secretary of the Congregational Foundation for Education, were the speakers, and the devotional periods were led by Rev. Walter Metcalf, of Tampa. Dr. Kedzie first presented the work of the foundation, which was discussed under his leadership, the topic being "Congregational Leadership in Education." He also delivered a scholarly and inspiring public lecture at the Daytona Beach Church on the subject, "Conflicting Ideals in Modern Life."

Dr. King's course was upon Mexico, from which he has recently returned, having been a member of the Mexican Seminar, under the leadership of Dr. Hubert Herring. Dr. King's lectures were full of information and keen appreciation of Mexican problems and conditions. His lecture on "Religion in Mexico" was particularly informing. He delivered a lecture at Daytona Beach Church on "Rambles in Mexico," illustrated by 150 new slides which he had made since his return.

The heaviest part of the program was a series of five lectures by Dr. Kuykendall on "Religion in an Unfolding Universe." The five sub-topics were as follows:

1. "The Cosmic Machine."
2. "The Riddle of Consciousness."
3. "The Behavior of the Human Machine."
4. "Is Man Self-sufficient?"
5. "The Mystic Breath of Life."

Dr. Kuykendall has made a very thorough study of the modern scientific philosophies and such movements of thought as mechanism, behaviorism, humanism. He carefully and with deep insight analyzed these movements of thought, and while deeply sympathetic with the scientific and philosophical spirit, he traced the disastrous effects upon human conduct and faith. Dr. Kuykendall developed the foundations for faith in God as the absolute essential for the good life which humanity seeks. The thoroughness of Dr. Kuykendall's scholarship, the searching analysis of the effects of currents of thought upon streams of conduct, the deficiencies of those philosophies which leave out the finer phases of human mysticism, the absolute candor of his search for truth, and the simplicity and human interest of his literary style combined to make this course a remarkable production. There was the universally expressed desire that it should be produced as a book, and the prophecy that it would rank among the best treatments available on this subject.

Rev. C. Arthur Lincoln, of Daytona Beach, was elected convener of the convocation, and Rev. Ralph Krout, of New Port Richey, clerk. Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, superintendent of Florida, led the discussion of the promotional plans for the fall and winter season. The committee appointed for the planning for next year's convocation consisted of Drs. Kuykendall, King and Rev. Chas. W. Pusey, of West Palm Beach.

SOUTH GEORGIA ASSOCIATION.

The meeting of the South Georgia Association of Congregational and Christian Churches stands out as a very significant affair. It was a concrete example of actual union of these two denominations. Several Christian Churches were represented by delegates and minister. Rev. Mr. W. C. Carpenter, Christian minister, was present and took a large and significant place as leader on the program. His wisdom and his spirit were much depended upon.

The entertaining Church, Union Hill, Pearson, Ga., was interesting in itself. It was organized nearly forty years ago by Rev. G. N. Smith, who was present at this meeting and shared helpfully in the program and business. The hospitality of the people, the splendid noon-day meals served on long tables, picnic style, each day, and the open homes for delegates at night made everybody happy. It was a great meeting, and much good will result.

The reports of the Churches showed that more Sunday Schools are being organized than ever in recent times in these Churches. Better business methods are being put into the work of Churches. Pastors' salaries have not been too well paid, but signs of improvement are apparent. An educated ministry caught the ear of the association, and it will be increasingly the will of the people themselves to have well-trained ministers brought to their attention. The association went on record as favoring a three-year course of study to be given under the auspices of the State Conference for those desiring to be licensed to preach in south Georgia.

Another forward movement was the appointing of a committee to draft constitution and by-laws for the United Congregational and Christian Association of South Georgia. This seems to be the first time in the South this has been done. Resolutions were also adopted, urging the State Conferences of both the Congregational and Christian bodies to hasten the full and complete organization of a United States Conference.

The closing sermons were delivered by President Henry C. Newell, of Piedmont College. They were inspiring and furnished a fitting close of what many called the greatest association they had had in south Georgia for a long time.

ATLANTA SEMINARY FOUNDATION.

The Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation is now beginning its second year at Vanderbilt University. The relation is ideal and is working out to the advantage of both the foundation and the school of religion. The foundation has enrolled three new students, one from the Christian group and two from the Congregational. The school of religion shows an increase this year.

Dr. O. E. Brown, dean of the Vanderbilt School of Religion, suffered a paralytic stroke during the summer, but is gradually gaining strength. Dean-emeritus Tillett is acting dean during Dr. Brown's illness.

Dr. W. J. Campbell, president of the Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation, with Mr. Thompson, a fellow of the school, are taking care of Dean Brown's courses in Church history.

To the regret of all, Dr. William E. Barton has been taken ill at his summer home in Foxboro, Mass., and will not be able to take up his work in the school of religion this term. Dr. Campbell is teaching his courses in practical theology. Because of the illness of Dr. Barton, the Collegeside Church is without a pastor, the pulpit being supplied from the faculty of the school of religion.

RESOLUTION ON UNITY.

The following resolution was passed by the South Georgia Association at its recent meeting:

Since the south Georgia Congregational and Christian Churches have been fully united for one year, and all of our relations have been happy and harmonious; since from our experience, so far, we have had no reason to regret and every reason to be proud of this action; since the State Conferences of both the Congregational and Christian Churches of Georgia are to consider the matter of completely merging all of our interests at their next sessions; be it, therefore,

Resolved, That we, the South Georgia Association of Congregational and Christian Churches, do urge our State bodies to complete the merger as speedily as they think it is expedient.

Done by order of the South Georgia Association of Congregational and Christian Churches.

Dan Pearson, Moderator.
Miss Bessie James, Scribe.

How strange it is, and yet how common, for the father to desire a character and destiny for his son different from his own! The man of war desires his heir to be a man of peace. And how strange, also, and yet how nearly inevitable, that the father's sins should entwine themselves with the life of the child that he loves best?—Henry Van Dyke.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

X.

London, Friday, July 11, 1930.

It is glorious, when convalescing in a hospital, to be allowed to receive and entertain visitors. How hungry the heart is, any way, for companionship—real, genuine fellowship! Let one be removed from his joy for a season, and the heart leaps with delight when it is permitted once more to indulge. This morning a Rev. Dr. Patterson, of Northfield, Mass., a perfectly delightful and companionable preacher, whose acquaintance I made three years ago, came in for a delightful visit. Patterson is a royal soul, a really lovable heart, and I just had to place my arms about his neck as he told me with word of mouth, and showed me from the expression of his face, how happy he was to see and be with me under such conditions. Dr. L. E. Smith, of Norfolk, and my good Dr. Wyllie, of London, are visitors this morning. Dr. Wyllie is so composed and complacent that he takes possession of his patients and of the situation and makes one forget all about being sick or weak. The three large vases of rosebuds that my "Congregational Friends" sent me yesterday morning, opened overnight and are in the full glory of their color, size and fragrance this morning. If one cannot enjoy a sick-room when one is getting better, with the sweet recollections of friends, far and near, with the presence of every comfort and token of esteem and delight, then one must have a callous heart and little sense of gratitude, indeed.

I read a book yesterday and this A. M., entitled "The Spanish Farm." It is a sordid romance woven into a story of life on the farm in Flanders during the World War. It is a war story from the side of natives—women and elderly men and maidens—who stayed on the farm and worked while shells burst and cannons roared in the distance. They despised the war and received only its knocks, its wounds and its impoverishments. It hardened their hearts and made many despise those who were responsible for the war, as well as the poor, deluded soldiers who were having to fight it out and die in the war. This is rather a dreary story for an invalid in bed to read, but it gives an angle of the war that this scribe had never noted before.

As I pen these lines in my diary, I am seated on an open veranda from which I can see the rich foliage and the trembling leaves on the large maples and lindens. The trees were never so beautiful and so thrilling to look upon as now. I am kept in an uneven and very happy frame of mind, not knowing which is the more glorious, the fragrant air from the nearby flower gardens, the shimmering rays of a favorable and friendly sun, the trembling delicate green foliage of the trees and shrubbery, or the smiles and pleasantries and the solicitude of the good nurses and the cheering words of the kind physician. All of these, and more than these, enter into the life and experience of one who is convalescing in a hospital. I am entering it in my diary that, next to the Church and the school-house, I guess the most necessary and helpful institution on earth is the hospital. Strange that many people dislike a hospital when, of all institutions known to man, this one is dedicated to the relief of human suffering and to the restoration and happiness of the human family. How glorious it is also during convalescence and when undisturbed to think of your many friends and what good times you have had with your friends and how many pleasant days and months and years one has enjoyed through life. One can think not only of present but of past friends, of escapades, happy incidents of former years, joyful events that now live in memory and only ask for a little leisure, that they may come back and refresh the mind as they loom large and beautiful before you.

I am wishing right now that I could write out even in the pages of this diary some of the thoughts I have had of my many friends, now far, far from me, as I have had the leisure and the privilege of thinking of them in this London hospital—relatives, co-workers, neighbors, associates in Church and social life—but it would keep a stenographer busy for a month to write even very briefly the thoughts that have flashed through my mind as I have mentally enjoyed their presence in this sick-room. And then, if they were written out, somebody would be saying that I was delirious and had brain-storms; I was excited with fever when I was writing about them, which is not so. The sick-room has its compensations, and some of the richest, happiest days of this writer's life have been spent in this or in other hospitals of blessed memory. Sickness has its compensations. It occurs to me to write it in my diary that it would not be out of place, if we only knew it, to extend our congratulations instead of indulging so much our sympathy to those who are confined for a season to a hospital. A time of enforced rest and idleness lets one take stock of the real assets and the rich experiences of life, and, above all, gives one the quiet and coveted opportunity of real, fascinating and genuine worship of the true and living God and of giving to Him the praise, thanksgiving and supplication of the heart.

Just as I had finished entering the above line, our always smiling porter came with a tempting luncheon on a wide silver tray and placed it on a dainty table spread with spotless linen by my side. This luncheon was served in a silver dish, partitioned in the middle. On one side are vegetables deliciously cooked. On the other, a small stew of beef, with baked tomatoes and sauce. There is a dinky little glass bowl with a milk—"cooked clabber," I guess. Now, one vicious-looking knife with a yellow handle, two large forks (one silver, the other yellow), and the inevitable two spoons (one large enough to serve a small family with one helping). I am still wondering why these great spoons and this outlay of weapons with which to negotiate a modest meal. Evidently some custom sacred to the English heart and handed down by tradition prevails in this place. We are the creatures of custom, and the things we are accustomed to, do not seem strange, however inconvenient and odd they may be. I guess English invalids understand the custom and know why, and so take no notice of these oddities.

At Sea, Saturday A. M., July 12, 1930.

I bade farewell to nurses, the doctor and the matron at 29 Tavistock Square, at London, at 9:25 A. M. today. They were all very pleasant, and I told the matron that here was a house of good cheer, pleasant smiles and quick, willing service. She replied that she would have no other sort in her hospital. Dr. Smith and I drove for forty-five minutes in a taxi, as rapidly as it could negotiate these crowded streets, to the dock on the Thames River, where the "Minnekada" is anchored. This taxi trip was exceedingly trying to one who was just emerging from a hospital, and it was indeed a relief to reach the ship and find a large, airy bedroom to which I was assigned, and an easy bed with large fluffy pillows and spotless linen. Mine is a wide, airy, outside room, and my mind is already made up before our ship swings from her moorings that I am going to have one good time in this great room with its large, inviting windows, its airy spaces, and its invitation to be comfortable.

I was much attracted by London Churches as we drove the distance of the whole city to reach the docks. These Churches are of stone, they are ancient, they are solid, they are restful, they are reassuring and worshipful to look upon. Evidently much of the solidity and stability of the English race grew out of and is a part with and is exemplified in their strong, stately stone houses of worship.

Our good ship, "Minnekada," sailed out of her port, at 11:45, so quietly and smoothly that one could hardly discover she had unloosed from her moorings and was headed for the English Channel and the open sea. At 5:15, while I write, we are passing through the English Channel, with Dover to our right and looming with composure and dignity in the distance. In bed, from 1:30 till 5 P. M., today I read some, in a wonderful book entitled, Twice-Born Ministers," by a Dr. Shoemaker, an Episcopal minister of New York. I must own and master this book. It is a real message for the heart and gives one an insight into what one real, consecrated minister of the gospel can accomplish. A man is only a very small part of himself even, until he identifies himself with God and lets God speak through him to His world. This Dr. Shoemaker has laid his life on the altar and mighty works do manifest themselves in his ministry. I wish all of my preacher friends and other friends who care could enjoy this book, some hundred pages of which have filled me with delight.

I have just read in the Congregationalist and

Herald of Gospel Liberty, issue of June 26th, Dr. Frank G. Coffin's address in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. Dr. Coffin ascended to heights of eloquence and depths of thought and breadth of vision in this address such as will inspire any mind that reads it. It is wonderful in its comprehension and expression of the Christian-Congregational merger. I silently and devoutly pray God's blessings on this article now given to the world in print and on our good Dr. Coffin, who seemed to be inspired as he conceived and wrote and delivered the address as now printed. Time cannot measure, eternity alone can reveal the worth and the blessing of such an utterance.

Our good ship is to stop at Cologne at 8:30 tonight, they tell us, but I anticipate being in the embrace of Morpheus long before that hour, since the breezes are cool and the briny atmosphere is sweet and soothing, and our good ship has the disposition to quiet the nerves and restore strength to weakened bodies. We are to be in the English Channel till Sunday P. M., some twenty-four hours out from London, and then on the open sea for nine days, with our faces turned homeward and heavenward. How glorious and good it is to realize that, with returning strength and 3,000 miles of sea to enjoy, we are at least homeward bound. J. O. A.

THEIR PRIMARY PURPOSE.

Editor Johnson of the Biblical Recorder, on the eve of the annual meeting of the Baptists of North Carolina, writes editorially:

"The primary purpose the fathers had in mind in organizing the Baptist State Convention was the evangelization of the world, in so far as the Baptists of North Carolina had to do with that world-wide task." That was, indeed, a most noble and holy purpose, really the very purpose for which our Lord founded His Church, viz: to evangelize the world; to give His gospel to a world in need.

Editor Johnson traces by decades the gifts of the convention from 1830 to 1920, inclusive. In 1830 the Baptists of North Carolina gave to missions, home and foreign, $340.66, and to education $174.06. In 1920 they gave to missions, $170,146.70, and to education, $98,223.05. All that was given to missions and to educational institutions is included in these figures of 1920.

It is well for the Church and for the followers of our Lord to remind themselves again and again of the primary purpose of the Church in the world, that primary purpose being none other than that of giving the Holy Gospel to the whole world. All other things are and should be secondary and a means to the accomplishment of the great end and objective in future, viz: world-wide evangelization. No Church ever gets very far in prestige, in power and in progress until it makes this primary purpose of the founding of the Church its primary purpose. The significance of the Church is manifest and its place in the world is revealed when and as it gives itself to world-wide evangelization in the name and for the sake of our Lord. J. O. A.

CONTINUING EVANGELISTIC EFFORTS.

In the South, summer-time is the season of revivals and evangelistic meetings. In the country Churches the evangelistic meeting is a fixed and definite part of the summer program. This would appear to have certain definite advantages, in that the entire community, both churched and unchurched, has come to expect these fixed seasons of evangelism.

Those who have labored much in such meetings have heard, more times than they can remember, people saying, "It seems a pity to close the meeting now, when people are just beginning to take an active interest." This writer cannot recall ever having been in an evangelistic meeting that had completed its work. There were times when it was apparent that little more could be accomplished at that time; but always there are certain individuals in whom people are interested and for whom many prayers have been offered who have not been won for Christ.

It is perfectly evident that a protracted series of meetings cannot be continued indefinitely; but when the meetings have stopped, the work ought to go on. Every Church ought to have an evangelistic program that extends throughout the entire year. Such a program would not do away with the necessity for special seasons of evangelism. On the other hand, it would intensify the need for such occasions, and would prepare the way for and make for the success of such seasons when they are held.

Sometimes one can sense a feeling on the part of those who are not professing Christians that the interest which is being manifested in them is not a genuine and whole-hearted interest. The preacher is forced to say so much about the necessity of personal work and the responsibility of the Christian to do such work, that the person who is not a professing Christian has occasion to feel that Church members are acting out of a sense of fulfilling their duty, and not from a sense of deep personal interest in the spiritual welfare of the one whom he is seeking to win.

It ought to be possible for every Christian to take such an interest in the salvation of friends that, without ever appearing to nag at them and without ever making any public display, let such friends realize that nothing lies closer to the Christian heart than the desire that they should know Christ. No mechanical plan and no carefully mapped-out program can meet this situation. Only an abiding love for people and a passion for the salvation of souls can make one equal to the needs of such a task. Superficial efforts will not avail. One must keep very close to the heart of God and in intimate contact with the hearts of those whom one would reach for Christ.

It would seem also that here is a very fruitful field in which the Sunday School can render a very valuable service. The average unconverted individual is not half so shy of the Sunday School as he is of the Church. The Sunday School is the finest recruiting agency for the Church that can be found anywhere. The figures to to the number coming into the Church through the Sunday School bring a fine sense of satisfaction. But it would be far more profitable if the Sunday School were constantly seeking for those whom it might introduce to the Christ and to His Church.

It is not possible to outline any definite plan whereby the evangelistic work of the Church can be made continuous. Every Church offers its own individual problems. Every individual Christian must find his own part in this most important field of Christian service. It is for the local Church and the individual Christian to seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit in meeting the responsibility for this task. S. C. H.

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL LIFE.

Moral philosophy must be distinguished from spiritual life. The Decalogue is the moral law, but regeneration gives spiritual life. Moral life and spiritual life are as distinct as day and night, but spiritual life is the greater. Moral reform has its roots in spiritual experience. The rich young ruler was a moral man and had observed the commandments from his youth up; and the Pharisee commended himself to God by indisputable marks of moral excellence, yet the publican went down justified rather than the Pharisee.

Moral reform means the reconstruction of moral sentiments and practices. The Lord sent Jeremiah to the potter's home to see that the potter made another vessel out of the clay that was marred in his hand, and showed him that the same could be done with Israel as a nation. We are living at this time in the midst of reconstruction, of reform, in commercial, political, social, educational, and religious life. To reform is to reconstruct as a house. The architect designs improvements, the contractor remakes the old house into a new home, a new store, or a new Church, and it stands forth as a reformed building. Old material is removed, new material is put in its place, and a new building or machine is the result. Machinery is all the time undergoing change. New inventions and new plans enter into old conditions, and things are made better. Reform is both negative and positive; it subtracts from and adds to life. Road-building reforms roads. The drunkard leaves off his drink, becomes a sober man, a better husband, and a better father and friend and citizen. We have had some reforms in our day.

1. In the United States mail. Fake stocks, lottery adventisements, obscene literature, business duns on postal cards, personal threats are all barred from the mails. There have been great reforms in the mail service of this country.

2. Profanity in public places, buying votes at elections, spitting on sidewalks, speeding on the streets in cities, and in many ways old practices are being changed and improved, or reformed.

3. Prohibition of the liquor traffic is one of the great reforms—now nation-wide, and it will be some day world-wide. Carrying concealed weapons, making cities more sanitary by requiring owners of property to clean up their lots. Cities prohibit the raising and penning of hogs on back lots, and this used to be common in towns.

The Panama zone was almost a graveyard before the canal was dug; but it was soon converted into a zone more healthful than the United States. They reformed that whole zone. Moral reform is not spiritual life and must not be substituted for it. A sober man is not, by that alone, a Christian; but he is in better condition to become a Christian. The eighteenth amendment does not make all citizens sober, but it makes the nation sober, and that will ultimately make all good citizens sober. The government has as much right to prohibit the manufacture, sale, and use of alcohol as a beverage as it has to prohibit the Louisiana lottery from business and the wrong use of the mails. W. W. S.

JESUS ALONE.

I have looked the whole planet over and I see no man but Jesus only who is able to take away the sin of the world. I have sat at the feet of the world's religious leaders, and I have seen all the great religious in their homes, and I know that it is Christ or nobody. He has no competitor in the field. No one else has the slightest chance of winning the homage of the entire human race. More and more He is to me what He was to Saul of Tarsus—"the Image of the invisible God." More and more He is to me what He was to John the Beloved—"God made manifest in the flesh." More and more He is to me what He Himself claimed to be—the eternal Son of the living God. To know Him is indeed life eternal. To work with Him in establishing on this earth the kingdom of righteousness and peace and joy—this is what makes my life more and more worth living. —Charles E. Jefferson.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A unique banquet was given at the Elliot Hotel on Tuesday night, October 7, 1930, in honor of W. W. Ballard and Otis S. Smith, proprietors of the drygoods house and business known as Ballard & Smith. It celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the firm's business in Suffolk. It might be called the golden jubilee of their association in business and their service for the community, for Suffolk was only a small town in 1880, when Ballard & Smith opened business. Two big fires, one in 1885, which destroyed the business part of the town, known as Washington Square; the other, in 1888, destroyed the same section, which had been rebuilt with splendid structures, only one of which remains; that is the building erected and used as a store by James R. Baker, a great retail merchant, who passed away at the age of thirty-five. Out of these two big fires, Ballard & Smith started again and kept on until fifty years had been covered with success.

The unique banquet mentioned above was conceived and carried out by the employees of Ballard & Smith. There were the two heads of the firm, twenty-three employees, making twenty-five; then there were ten others, including the daughter of Mr. Ballard, and the son and daughter of Mr. Smith, and the wife of Otis S. Smith, Jr., and invited guests, making a total of thirty-five, all seated at one long table decorated with old-fashioned candelabra, pink candles, crystal cases with pink carnations, dahlias and roses, and favors were small caps and pink baskets filled with salted peanuts.

James Babb was toastmaster, and the invocation and benediction were pronounced by this writer. The principal address was delivered by Miss Daisy Nurney, who represents the Virginian-Pilot in Suffolk. She reviewed the history of the firm and Suffolk briefly for the past fifty years. She praised the high standard of business maintained by the firm, and expressed good wishes for their future prosperity. Walter W. Ballard responded in a beautiful address, thanking Miss Nurney for her fine address and the employees for the beautiful banquet, which expressed their loyalty and good will. Captain Otis S. Smith, Jr., made a short speech, expressing appreciation for the banquet and for the honor to the firm which it expressed. He requested a continuation of this good will, and closed with a toast to Ballard & Smith. On behalf of the Ballard & Smith employees, Dr. W. W. Staley presented to Mr. Ballard and Mr. Smith hand-painted miniatures in handsome gold frames as a special token of their loyalty and good will. In addition to the lovely decorations and the thirty-five seated at the table, an appetizing supper, such as Mr. L. P. Hill serves, was enjoyed. Original songs were sung by the happy company at intervals, with John Shepherd Brinkley at the piano. "Love's Old Sweet Song" was rendered as a solo by Arthur Herrick. Before the close, James Richards, colored porter for many years, arose on the side of the dining-room and made a real heart talk, expressing his appreciation of the consideration he had received by the firm.

Ballard and Smith have for fifty years stayed in the store and worked with the clerks, and that has cultivated a feeling of friendliness that this great banquet expressed. If all employers and employees co-operated in this spirit, strikes would be unknown. When this firm first began business they sold other goods than drygoods, and they guaranteed what they sold. They sold a barrel of flour to a man, who used half of it, brought the barrel half-full back, and demanded another; and they gave it. That is the key to their success.

ELON LETTER.

It is the fashion now-days to go to college, and this fashion has necessitated a re-examination of the purposes and program of the college experience, both from the standpoint of the educator and of the educatee. One of the most popular themes today for discussion in books and magazines is college education. I have just examined a bibliography entitled "Studies in Collegiate Education," and find listed 1,040 titles, most of them books.

Manifestly, therefore, we are living in what we may aptly describe as a transition period in higher education. Whenever those who are engaged in any particular profession are satisfied as to the ideals, principles and objectives involved there is a drying-up of source material. It is when a profession or department of learning or of life experience is unsettled or uncertain, which also means growth, that we find a flood of discussion in books and periodical literature. It should also be said in this connection that such a situation is most hopeful. We always achieve in dynamic rather than in static situations.

Four years ago I had a remarkable experience with a group of seniors here. I took snap judgment on them and asked them to write out immediately why they were in college. They had had three years of college experience, and if any group of young people on our campus were capable of giving a worth-while answer to this question, certainly these seniors were. They passed in their answers in written form, and I made a careful study of them. I found that eighteen separate and distinct reasons had been given by this group of seniors to this question, ranging all the way from "the desire to serve myself and my fellowman" to "getting an A. B. degree." Similarly, that year four hundred and eleven freshmen in the University of Nebraska gave reasons for being in Chicago, ranging all the way from "to make a living" to "to find diversion."

If these 1,040 books and periodicals listed in the bibliography to which I have referred should be examined, there would be far more than thirty-seven reasons given for going to college. In the midst of such a multiplicity of aim and purpose, freshmen may be pardoned for not having a definite reason for seeking the opportunity of a college career. In fact, it may be said that our inability to know definitely what our purpose is when we enter college may be an asset rather than a liability. It means that we are open-minded relative to the future issues of the experience upon which we are entering—a situation which offers opportunity for growth and development.

One of the most amusing books that has been written on education, from the administrative standpoint, is a volume entitled, "College or Kindergarten," by no less a dignitary than Dean McConn, of Lehigh University. I say the book is amusing, and it would be if Dean McConn did not intend that it should be taken very seriously. His institution has been flooded with students in the last few years, and the most of them, he has learned to his dismay, cannot be fitted into the educational program of Lehigh. He, therefore, recommends that what he calls "the kindergartners in higher education" should be separated from the serious-minded students who have really come for an education, and that for these kindergartners there should be established a "gentleman's college," in which special emphasis will be given to social, athletic and cultural activities, with a minimum of study of the lighter sort. He is of the opinion that those who elect this type of education should be charged for it all that it costs, plus a profit, and that the public—by which he means endowment funds and gifts of generous-hearted friends for denominational and independent colleges, and public taxes for State institutions—should not be expected to bear the burden of the cost of this type of education. These kindergartners, or these candidates for the "gentleman's college," will never amount to very much except in their own estimation, the Lehigh dean thinks, and yet he has learned, as he confesses, from experience that occasionally one of these fellows, after he has gone through four years of higher education kindergarten experience, will become a real man, educating himself.

For the other type of student, Dean McConn would inaugurate what he describes as "the real college," in which intellectual discipline and consistent study will be central. A very small percentage of those who now flock to our institutions of higher learning, in Dean McConn's estimation, will be candidates for this type of institution; but he does not hesitate to record it as his judgment that this small percentage will control the destinies of the world and that the public should be induced to offer, at its own expense, so far as may be necessary, to these highly endowed persons the very finest opportunities for intellectual development. Such persons often need assistance in securing an education, because they come from humble homes, and the public which would profit by their lives should willingly assume the cost, thinks Dean McConn.

There may be a great deal in the suggestion of Dean McConn, but, as I have said, educators generally have taken the book as supplying a few hours of amusing diversion, as a sort of sarcastic parody. We may, however, be headed toward just such a situation as that, for no one is able at present successfully to prophesy what will take place in the next ten years in higher education in this direction or in any other.

THE FIGHT AGAINST PROHIBITION.

By Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D.

The most subtle, the most treacherous, the most insincere fight against a reform measure that mankind has ever known is now being waged by the liquor interests of the world against prohibition.

The reason we have prohibition is that the saloons in America demonstrated that the liquor business should no longer be regulated or tolerated by a decent society. The saloon put itself out of business. Hundreds of officers were kept busy trying to make the saloon-keepers observe the law, all to little avail. The saloon corrupted politics, debauched leaders in both the judicial and legislative branches of government, and made against efficiency in industry and against happiness in the home. We should never forget those hideous days of the legalized liquor traffic which fastened itself like a gnawing cancer upon our body politic.

Prohibition is the culmination of years of moral protest on the part of the high-minded men and women of the nation against a business which respected not the mandates of the government or the welfare of society. Prohibition from the beginning has been a moral issue—the interest of the strong for the weak, the interest of the socially-minded men and women in individuals who were injured, harassed or defeated by the curse of alcohol.

These socially-minded people saw the havoc that drink worked in the personal lives of men and women, the corruption it worked in politics, the inefficiency it caused in labor and production, and the harm it worked upon every phase of life it touched.

Realizing the benefit of total abstinence to the individual, and knownig the benefit of prohibiting the employees of any industry from drinking during working house, these individuals believed the nation would profit in happiness and efficiency as well as in national honor if it would free itself from the trammels of the liquor traffic and prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicants. They believe that if prohibition practiced within an industry was a benefit to the industry, that prohibition practiced within a nation would be a benefit to the nation.

Their conviction was sincere, and their logic was convincing. Hence, the majority of the voters of the United States, over ten years ago, voted to crystalize these ideals into law, and the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act are thus the result of years of temperance education, agitation and legislation. The time has now come when it is to be proved whether that law or any other law effected by the majority of voters shall claim and demand the respect and allegiance of a defeated minority. If not, then the validity and hope of a democratic government hangs in the balance.

The enemies of prohibition who were not good sports have flaunted the law from the beginning. They have ignored it, broken it, ridiculed it, and encouraged others to violate it. They realized that they could not gain their objective and have the law repealed by any moral argument; so they have been seeking opportunity to make it a political issue. One of the leaders of the Association against the Eighteenth Amendment boasted that the Church people could never be beaten in their defense of prohibition until the issue was thrown into politics, and that then the Church people, blinded by partisan prejudice, would forget their religion and the moral issue of prohibition and the fight against prohibition would be won. These enemies of prohibition have prompted the pernicious insinuations that ministers are untrue to their calling who preach on the merits of prohibition, and thus bring politics into the Church. God save the Church from mixing into politics, and God save our nation if the ministers do not lead the way in mixing some genuine religion into the politics of the day. We do not want to let politics get into the Church, but the life of the Church and the life of the nation depend upon the Church getting into politics, for irreligious men and women will have their way in politics as long as religious men and women stay out. The prohibition issue has been brought into the political arena by its enemies, and now its friends are compelled to defend it there.

The Church people of every denomination and thousands of high-minded men and women outside the Churches see the subtlety of the wet propaganda and the wet manipulations to bring prohibition into the political arena, and by the tens of thousands, and the hundreds of thousands the Christian fathers and mothers of our nation are declaring that they shall put principle before party in this fight, religion before politics, and that they absolutely will not vote for any candidate for public office (county, state or nation) who is not pledged to support prohibition, the noblest social experiment our nation or any nation has ever made, an experiment that has in ten short years proved its merit and indicated its possibilities. regardless of the continued fight, opposition and misrepresentation of its enemies.

The Christian people of America have not forgotten "the pit from whence we were digged"—the horrors of the legalized liquor business. Nor will they permit the prayers and the sacrifices and labors of their God-inspired fathers and mothers who labored down through the years to give our nation prohibition to be repudiated. They realize that the liquor business is fighting for its very life. But the friends of prohibition are fighting for the life of the generations yet unborn. They are fighting for God and for the honor of their nation. The enemies of prohibition have the money on their side—great corporations willing to spend millions in the fight in order to try to change the law and have a tax on liquor so as to save their tens of millions in income tax. But the friends of prohibition have on their side the prayers of the departed hosts who labored and fought against King Alcohol and have gone to their reward. They have God on their side. Does anybody suppose that the wets are holding prayer meetings or offering prayers to God to help them in their fight! The mere suggestion of such would be blasphemous. "If God be for us, what difference does it make who is against us?" Friends of prohibition, from now until election day—and on election day is your opportunity to fight for prohibition, for youth, for home, and for country. This is your opportunity to show your colors and your courage.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Mighty Master of mankind, how marvelous is Thy power to enfold and hold. We thank Thee that human abnegation is strength divine; that looking, leaning, loving, self-loss only is gain. We pray Thee, Father, stay our minds, compel our bodies, seal our beings. O God of mercy, hold us close, keeping Thou our feet to the lowly path by which to grow the soul must strive for others. For Jesus' sake, that the world may live and not die, bring Thou the Church under the suffering of His cross. This day, each day, more burden our plea, more grace, O God, to unburden to Thee. In our Saviour's name. Amen.

THE GUEST BOOK.

A sample "Guest Book," with full instructions as to its use, has been sent to every pastor, so far as we have their names and addresses. If any pastor has not received one, we shall be glad to send a copy. If there are Churches that do not have pastors and the Sunday School superintendent or the Woman's Society president will write for one, it will be sent if they will carry out the excellent plan for its use.

The period for entertaining the daily guests in our homes is October 13th to November 9th. The number of actually signed "at home" cards will determine the number of "Guest Books" that will be sent to each Church. We should like to place one in every home, but send them only upon request.

Miss Lucy M. Eldredge says: "One of the finest new features of our united program will be the "Guest Book." It will come as an interesting novelty, which will grow more fascinating day by day as we read the stories of men and women who are representing us in the world program of Congregational and Christian Churches. It presents in story and picture men and women of Christian spirit and real achievements whom we are glad to welcome as guests and friends."

If the books are to reach you in time for distribution, so that you will be ready for the guests October 13th, your signed order will need to be in the General Convention office by September 27th. Parcel-post packages require time.

Mrs. Athella M. Howsare, president of the Woman's Mission Board, says: "I am delighted with the "Guest Book" and the plan for its use. The Woman's Board desires to enter into hearty co-operation with our pastors in introducing the "Guest Book" into all the families of our Church."

Every Church should keep the signed cards on file for future reference.

NEWS NOTES.

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Bethlehem Christian Church has just completed a most successful year's work. They have met all the Conference requirements and gone over the top with their financial report. They observed the world's day of prayer for missions with a special program under the leadership of their spiritual life superintendent, and this proved to be a very impressive service. Mrs. C. W. King is the president of this thriving society.

Through Miss M. V. Griffin, leader of the Willing Workers' Society of the Windsor Christian Church, we learn that they have a wide-awake group of children to work with. During the year they enrolled ten new members, and they have a record of which they can be proud, in that they all kept their dues paid up regularly. They had birthday offerings every month and these proved to be very interesting. They studied the book, "Jumping Beans," and gave the pageant, "Won't You Walk Into My Parlor?"

The Young People's Missionary Society of the new Lebanon Christian Church, Surry County, Va., recently rendered a most interesting program, consisting of music, Scripture readings and short talks. Among those taking part in the program were Mesdames O. M. and O. V. Cockes, Misses Virginia and Frances Cockes, Miss Louise Pittman, Myrtle Price, and Luray Edwards. A special mission collection was taken.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

We have now come to the phase of the liquor fight that corresponds with the slavery controversy between the years 1855 and 1860. The problem is not so sectional as was that of slavery, and, in spite of the predictions of the "wets," we shall not come to civil war. We are in, however, for five or ten years of intense bitterness in the struggle. The liquor traffic and its apologists never have had any scruples, and we do not expect them to have. It will be a battle of educational methods and of votes and the liquor forces will be beaten in the outcome.

We may expect to have a great many people who, for one reason or another, will turn back to the weak and beggarly elements of State control. This country cannot exist half "wet" and half "dry" any more than it could exist half slave and half free.

There are indications that the "drys" are beginning to wake up. Leaders of women's clubs and of a number of other women's organizations in States of the Middle West are joining with the W. C. T. U. in beginning a new educational campaign to make public the facts about prohibition and about the control of intoxicants. It will be a good day when our ministers and our Churches forget their grievance against the Anti-Saloon League and get busy on the job of education for a "dry" America. Some of us seem to think that the fact that the Anti-Saloon League hasn't always done what we wished it to do, furnishes an alibi for the fact that we are asleep at the switch. A lot of us are allowing the sacrificial labor of Christian leaders of a hundred and fifty years to go for naught. Let us get busy.—Ex.

GETTIN' RELIGION.

(Old Man Bill Jones" requests, if we publish his article, we do so just as he sent it—grammar, spelling, and all the rest. There seems to be history, sincerity, and a bit of common sense and good intention in what he writes, and so we take him at his request and print it—"spellin'" and all—as he desires.—Ed.)

When I was a boy people got religion very differently from what they do nowadays. Back in them days people couldn't get in the Church unless it was pretty certain they had religion. Following the big meeting, usually held in August, every year, a date was set, generally on Saturday before the next regular Sunday appointment, when all the converts who wanted to join the Church were required to report for examination. The preacher and the deacons sat as a sort of jury to pass on their eligibility. Each candidate was asked how he knew he had religion, how he felt when he got it, and now that he had it what he expected to do with it—how he expected to live in the future, etc.

I'll tell you it was a pretty stiff examination and it made a fellow feel like he was really joining something. Those who were not too timid were asked to stand up and tell their experience, just how it happened, how they felt when the Holy Ghost came upon them, etc.

No question about it, if a fellow didn't have religion, he found himself in a very embarrassing situation, before those old brethren got through with him. There was a lot of praying in these experience meetings for the new converts. In fact, it was a very serious occasion. The future destiny of human lives was under consideration.

The only way you could get religion back in them days was to go to the mourner's bench. There wasn't any other way. They've done away with the mourner's bench these days. There ain't any any more. I think they made a mistake too when they did away with it. The only thing you have to do now to get religion and join the Church is to sign a card and present yourself for membership at some fixed time, and you're a full-fledged member almost before you know it. I have known people to join the Church in recent years who didn't have any religion at all. Even those who voted to take them in were doubtful about it. In fact nobody seemed to care much. The membership roll was being increased and that was sufficient.

The time that it took to get religion back in them days depended upon the individual. I have known it to take some nearly a week. Big meetings usually lasted for one week, and if a fellow didn't "pull through" by along about Friday everybody begun to get interested in him and wonder what was the matter.

It was generally considered that the longer a fellow stayed at the mourner's bench and the more mourning he had to do, the more genuine his case of religion when he did get it.

Back in them days there was a lot of shouting in these big meetings too. They're about done away with that also. I understand there's some little of it done now out in back-woods country Churches, but I'm sure it wouldn't work in the big city Churches. In fact, in some I don't believe it would be allowed. Back in the old country Church near my home, when I was a boy, I remember as how, along about the middle of the afternoon, sometimes the preacher would have to stop his sermon the people would get to shouting so.

And as the mourners began to "pull through" one after another everybody seemed to get happy. Such times as they used to have at that old Church during big meetings! As a boy it made an everlasting impression on me. Getting religion back in them days meant something, but I'll tell you, I don't think much of these new modern methods. Why, if they were to have a big meeting (they would probably call it an evangelistic campaign) in a certain big city Church where I have attended and some of the sisters were to get happy and go shouting up and down the aisles, like I used to see my mother do, I'm positive it would break up the meeting. The boys and girls especially would look on in amazement and wonder if these good women had suddenly gone crazy.

One reason why we hear so much these days about the Church losing her influence and power is, there are so many people in it who haven't any religion—never have had any. Their lives, past and present prove it.

We're living in a fast age anyhow. People do things these days they wouldn't have thought of doing back in olden times. Why, when I was a boy, if a Church member was caught dancing, or got drunk, or got flirty with some man's wife or some woman's husband he or she was called up for trial before a regular session and unless some very satisfactory explanation could be given, with a promise never to repeat the offense, they got expelled, and no foolishness about it.

Yes, what the Church needs today is more religion, "undefiled before God and the Father" the genuine kind. There may be different kinds, but "the old-time religion is good enough for me."

OLD MAN BILL JONES.

THE MILK IN THE COCONUT.

In 1928, the presidential year, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment spent $117,453.18. Of this the Du Ponts paid over $60.000, and sixteen multimillionaires put in $247,544.28, or more than half. What for?

In 1929, John J. Raskob, the national chairman of the Democratic party, flipped in $30.000, the Du Ponts coughed up $65,000, and E. S. Harkness, the railroad magnate, put $30,000 on the plate. What for?

During the months of January and February, 1930, just before the big hearing on the anti-prohibition bills in Congress and the Literary Digest poll, the Du Ponts loosened up for $60,000, while Raskob and Harkness each kicked in for $17,500. What for?

A short time ago, when one man subscribed $10,000 per year for five years to advance prohibition, the wet press snorted with alarm and bellowed with rage at the threatening power of big business in national politics. But when these wets put in $30,000, and more, year after year, the same bootleg press kept mum as a mummy, lest some one would ask, what for? And there must be a reason.

Have these men such alcohol appetites that they spend these wads of wealth to get back their booze? No; not that. Have they a deep, deathless devotion to the cause of personal liberty about which they rant? No; not that.

Yet there is a reason—but you never would guess it. It is taxes!

These fat boys hate to pay taxes. It gives them a pain!

They like to live in a country where they can make money a-plenty, but they want the less fortunate "mass" to pay their taxes for them, while they live in opulent splendor by the side of which Solomon in all his glory looks like a tin-horn flop.

Proof? Certainly! Evidence out of their own mouths!

In the lobby investigation by the United States Senate, 1930, this dialogue between Senator Caraway and William Stayton, founder and president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, is recorded:

Caraway: "And he (Du Pont) thought that if you could get the eighteenth amendment repealed he could lift $10,000,000 taxes off his corporation?"

Stayton: "That $10,000,000 taxes would be lifted from that corporation. Yes, sir."

Caraway: "That would be a strong consideration?"

Stayton: "I should think so. Yes, sir."

So there's the milk in the coconut!

Are they strong for temperance? So they say, but they never wept for a drunkard before. Are they shocked at the lawlessness of the liquor traffic? They claim to be, but they never cared when it was worse, and they purposely stimulate lawlessness and violence to make wet sentiment.

Do they want to shift legitimate taxes assessed against their swollen billions of wealth onto the appetites of alcohol addicts? They confess that to be their motive.

The propaganda of the wets will continue to whine for "true temperance" and bewail the lawlessness which they themselves help to incite. But under official investigation they admit that their true purpose is to unload their taxes by the re-establishment of the legalized liquor traffic, with indescribable hell of horrors.—W. G. Calderwood, in Christian Advocate.

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3⅜x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lessosn IV—October 26, 1930.

World's Temperance Sunday.

Golden Text: "Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self-control in all things."—1 Cor. 9:25.

Lesson: Gal. 5:13-26.

A temperance lesson, especially in its application to the matter of alcoholic liquors, is very much in season, for there is a great deal of propaganda on behalf of the "wets" just at this time, and there is a great deal of activity on the part of various organizations to create disregard and disrespect for the eighteenth amendment and to undermine the whole prohibition effort. One of the most unfortunate aspects of the whole situation is the amazing amount of misinformation which the "wets" are broadcasting, and the loose thinking that is done by so many people who ought to know better. One thing is certain—the prohibition question has not been settled, and there is a great need for creating sentiment in its favor, and for developing a social conscience against the whole liquor traffic.

All the wets are practically agreed on one point—they say they do not want the open saloon back. Even the most ardent "wets" say that, and say it with emphasis. They do this because, in the minds of many people, it makes their cause more plausible. Many people, because of this seemingly moral indignation of the wets against the saloon, think that these wets are not such a bad crowd, after all. Now, the wets are shrewd when they fasten the evils of the liquor traffic on the old saloon, but they are not fair and they are not truthful; for while it is true that there were many evils associated with the open saloon, the whole problem lays much deeper. The trouble was not peculiar to the saloon; it was inherent in the liquor traffic itself. No system, no conceivable system whereby people can get liquor in a so-called legal way will ever change the fundamental aspect of liquor. Liquor stands condemned on many counts before the bar of common sense, the testimony of history, and the judgment of God Himself. It has been, is, and always will be an arch-enemy of mankind. There is nothing good that can be said truthfully in its behalf.

As Dr. Staley so pungently put it in a recent letter in The Sun, its most powerful arguments eventually resolve themselves into the matter of the love of money, which is the root of all evil, and the matter of personal indulgence. The unfortunate thing about the whole matter is that the argument is usually conducted along the lines of personal liberty; but personal liberty is so caricatured that true personal liberty would not recognize itself. The plain truth of the matter is that those who insist upon personal liberty as related to the matter of liquor are rather insisting upon personal indulgence in a thing that is a menace to all that is finest and best in life. Because they can take a drink or let it alone, they want to satisfy their self-indulgence without any regard for their weaker brother or any concern as to whether they cause him to stumble.

All this is not to say that there are not many brilliant people who are in favor of liquor, and even good people. But those who are opposed to the outlawry and the annihilation of liquor either have not thought the thing through or they are being actuated by desires and motives that are unsocial. There is no constructive, humanitarian, uplifting achievement to the credit of liquor. It is destructive, divisive, devilish. It is not amenable to law. It must not be tolerated. It must be fought to a finish.

Now, all this has point for those of us who feel that liquor is wrong. There must be a thorough and a long campaign of temperance education. We are not going to be able to do much with the old crowd—they are going to have their liquor. We may not be able to do as much as we would like to do with the present young crowd, but even at that there are many young people who stand on the right side of the question. But we can begin to teach and to train a generation that will move the race forward in its age-long effort to rid itself of this curse which has no place in a civilization which is based on the principles of the kingdom of God.

We are not to be fooled by the front-page stuff on the wet newspapers. We must not be discouraged by the present disregard for law and order. And we must not be indifferent or lax in the present crisis when the situation calls for renewed work and giving and prayer.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Miss Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, October 26, 1930.

Topic: "Making America Christian."

Opening Song: "Love Divine" (two stanzas).

The work of making America Christian was begun years ago, with the work of our early fathers. Theirs is a noble sentiment as expressed in the hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers." Let us make this hymn the theme of our meeting tonight.

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Christ is the center of the plan of a Christian nation. We can do our part in this task of Christianizing America only as we have known Him.

Hymn: "I've Found a Friend."

Only as we live Christian lives can we hope to win the confidence of those around us who are not Christians and lead them to the Christ. Let us ever keep in mind the beautiful words of this song we sing together now.

Hymn: "I Would Be True."

Scripture: Mark 5:1-20.

Find in the following paragraphs the questions you want answered in the meeting and some of the thoughts you want presented.

In discussing ways of making America Christian, we must ask ourselves a few questions. A few years ago America was termed "Christian America." Have we lost the title? How? Did we ever deserve it? Why? If America is not Christian, what will make her so? What can we do to help make America Christian? "Business that is Christian" and "Business that is not Christian" might well be contrasted in the meeting. Discuss the trend in modern business to introduce the principles of Christ. Will the Golden Rule (Matt. 7:12) work successfully in business?

The writer of these notes has had the privilege of visiting Henry Ford's plant in Detroit, Mich., and the National Cash Register Company, in Dayton, Ohio. These two establishments, too, try to provide adequately for their workers. Mr. Ford does this through an adequate wage, short working hours, and community improvements for his workers.

The story of the National Cash Register Company is "a really true" fairy story—except there were no fairies! Some "bad boys," sons of the employees of the N. C. R., used to spend their spare time playing ball on the back lot of the factory and chasing cats (can and all) through the back yards of the factory workers' homes. One day they discovered that it was fun to see how many window-panes they could knock out of the factory windows. Of course, the owners tried to put a stop to the matter; but, alas! the more they tried, the more miserably they failed. Then some one hit upon the idea of giving the boys something to do—challenging them to use their time advantageously. The boys "fell" for the plan. Soon they were rivals in planting and keeping gardens. Cleaning up backyards was a part of the plan of gardening, for tin cans and rubbish had to be removed before vegetables and flowers could grow.

Years have passed since those days. Now the section of Dayton where the employees of the N. C. R. live is one of the prettiest residential sections of the city. Everybody caught the enthusiasm of the boys. Homes were improved and shrubbery planted. Now everything is beautiful and clean. A large auditorium, with a pipe organ, called the "N. C. R. School," affords a place for educational movies, lectures and community sings for the employees of the National Cash Register Company.

Shall we introduce Christian teaching in our public schools? Our nation was founded upon the principle of separation of Church and State. How is it possible to teach Christianity in our schools without teaching denominationalism and sectarianism? This is being done in several of our cities. Are you in favor of week-day religious instruction in the public school? Why?

Compare the power of "special evangelistic meetings" and the power of the Sunday School in making America more Christian.

What is the real task of the Church in making America Christian?

For the closing part of the program, have the salutes to the American and Christian flags, which have been placed in a prominent place in the front of the room before the meeting.

Salute to the American flag: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible with liberty and justice for all."

Sing the first and last stanza of "America."

Salute to the Christian flag: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Saviour, for whose kingdom it stands; one brotherhood, uniting all mankind in service and love."

Sing one stanza of "Stand Up for Jesus."

Sing the third stanza of "Love Divine."

Mispah.

Rally Day offerings from the Churches are already coming in to the treasurer of the Board of Christian Education, Mr. C. H. Stephenson, 121 Fayetteville Street, Raleigh, N. C. It is hoped that every Church in the South will try to send a generous offering to the treasurer of this Board. This will be necessary if the Board is to be of its greatest usefulness to the Church. Limited funds means a cut in the work. The Board has always made it a policy to spend as little money as possible to get its work done. It has proved itself very efficient in the use of the funds entrusted to it.

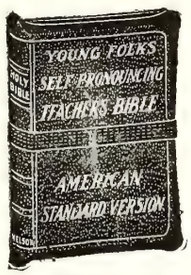
AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.



These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

THE JOY-STAR.

"When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy."—Matt. 2:1-10.

Rightly were those men of the East called magi, or wise men. They hitched their wagon to a star. They had learned that star-gazing is the most profitable of human occupations. They discovered that heaven has richer gifts than earth.

What the Christmas star was, whether it was a new sun or a comet or a remarkable coniunction of planets, matters not; it was a divine signal in the sky, a sure token to the wise men of God's wonder-working on earth. They were glad and eager to drop all their secular business and make it their one business to discover God's meaning in the sign.

Therefore, the star became to them a joy-star, though to others it was nothing but an astronomical phenomenon, a mere event up above them. It passed over their heads and their hearts as well. They gazed, but the wise men rejoiced. And if we are truly wise, we shall look at the Christmas star after the fashion of the magi. We shall read in it God's handwriting, a personal message for us. It is the message so often on the lips of Jesus Christ, "Come, and follow me." It beckons, it allures, it commands, it goes before and we walk where it leads. Ah, blessed is such following, the one supremely blessed act of our mortal life!

Prayer.—Messiah of the holy star, Thou accredited of heaven, be our Guide through life, our Leader through eternity! All earthly lights are but the flickering and illusory gleams of the marshes. Thou alone art the Light of life. Show us the way, Thou Star of stars. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE WORD AMONG US.

"And the Word became flesh, and dwelt among us."—John 1:1-14.

Jesus Christ was and is the Voice of God. He is God's Speech—His articulate, breathing Speech. He is God's Reason, God's Logic, as the Greek word in the original might well be translated. Jesus Christ is to us all that God's mouth would be, if it were speaking to us in our room.

What a marvelous privilege is this into which the world came at Christmas! We call the radio perhaps the most important, as it certainly is the most surprising of all the advances of science; but what is it when compared with that Word of God which has been speaking to us now for nearly two thousand years? Straight out of heaven it came, and its message is not of commerce or politics or art or literature, but of eternal life and endless peace and joy and power.

Prayer.—Full of grace and truth is Thy voice, O loving Word of God! Grant us the hearing ear and the understanding heart. Grant that we may be children of the Word. Grant that Thy comfort and commands may sound in our lives forever. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MAGNIFYING GOD.

"My soul doth magnify the Lord."—Luke 1: 46-55.

What a daring sentence is this which opens Mary's "Magnificat," so called from its opening word in the Latin translation! Think of magnifying God, making God great, increasing the infinite one! Surely this is a tremendous thought to put into Christmas.

And yet it is a very true thought; for God has given to man the terrible power of shutting God out of his life, and every such exclusion narrows God; at the same time God has given man the glorious power of admitting Him to his life, and every such admission enlarges God, magnifies Him.

Let us keep Christmas by taking the Lord into our lives, even as Christ was taken into Mary's life from the brooding of the Holy Spirit, and as Christ came into the life of the world through the Bethlehem birth. Nothing can so magnify us as thus magnifying the Lord, and nothing can so magnify the world.

Prayer.—We praise Thee, O God, that Thou hast gives such grace and power to men. No other honor and glory is t obe compared to this of receiving Thee. Come into our hearts, Eternal Father, and abide! Through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

THURSDAY.

HIS NAME.

"Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for it is He that shall save His people from their sins."—Matt. 1:18-23.

Joshua, Jesus, "Jehovah of Salvation"—the most significant and blessed of all names! Named by a messenger of God, named to Joseph the son of David, shall He not also receive the same name from us? For we do not call His name Jesus unless we receive Him as the one who shall save us from our sins.

No one can enter into the real spirit of Christmas that does not enter into the real spirit of the atonement. If we see in Christ the loving Father coming close to men and bearing their burdens, most of all their heaviest burden of sin, then we know what His coming meant, and we truly interpret Christmas.

Prayer.—Thou art our salvation, blessed Jesus. Thou hast given us the gift of gifts, freedom from the evil that has had dominion over us, entrance unto the light and liberty of the children of God. For this we bless and praise Thee, world without end. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE SHADOW OF THE ROCK.

"A man shall be as a hiding-place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest, as streams of water in a dry place, as the shade of a great rock in a weary land."—Isa. 32:1-8.

The prophet heaps up all images of comfort and safety, of protection and peace, as he foretells Jesus Christ. He names the most dreaded perils of the East, the sirocco, the tempest, the drought, the burning heat of the torrid sun. The Messiah shall be a refuge from all these. He shall guard us from all dangers, keep us from all distresses. His children have no want and no woe.

Therefore, if we have want and woe, we are not His children. Let our plenty be the test of our Christmas, our contentment, our satisfaction, our complete happiness. When the Christmas birth takes place in a life, all blessedness is born to it.

Prayer.—Yes, dear Lord, Thou dost mean all this to us; Thou art more than all this to us. No image from the natural world can picture all that Thou art to our spirits. In Thy advent all delights have come to us, all fears have passed away. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE SECOND ADVENT.

"This Jesus, who was received up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye beheld Him going into heaven."—Acts 1:1-11.

Our celebration of the first advent looks backward, but it should also be a time of looking forward to the second advent. Christ's second advent is a theme of deepest interest to every Christian. It is a matter of profound importance, for He may come tomorrow.

In exteriors, this second coming will be a complete contrast to the first. Then He came as a helpless Babe, but He will come next as the Ruler of all things. Whoever is wise will prepare for His coming, and will watch for it unceasingly. There is no better time to make ready than this season of the first advent. We make ready by driving from us every evil, with His help. He will prepare us for His coming.

Prayer.—It will be a happy task, Lord Jesus, to make ready for Thy second advent, Thou and we together. Form Thyself in our lives, we pray Thee. "Be born in us again." Fashion us according to Thy will. Then we shall look forward to Thy appearing with no fear, but with exceeding joy. Amen.

SUNDAY.

JOY TO ALL.

"And the angel said unto them, be not afraid, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people."—Luke 2:8-14.

Joy to all the people. Great joy to all the people. How is this, when so many celebrate Christmas with little joy, and so many do not celebrate it at all?

In the first place, the angel did not say when His prophecy should be fulfilled, and a thousand years are with the Lord as but one day, and will be so regarded by us after we have come to be at home in eternity. And in the second place, who is there in all the world today who is not happier because of the Bethlehem birth? He may not be conscious of the source of his happiness, but it can all be traced back to Christ.

The noblest civilization of all the world is Christian. The highest impulses and most blessed ideals of the world are Christian. The best hopes for the future were born with Jesus Christ.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, we rejoice in Thee. Our Saviour, we have great joy in Thee. Blessed Redeemer, we shall have greater and ever-greater joy in Thee as the centuries roll. For Thy Christmas is a growing feast, and of its blessedness there is no end. Amen.

NOTICE.

The annual session of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference meets with the Liberty (Vance) Christian Church on Friday, October 17, 1930. We are expecting a large delegation present, and if there are those desiring entertainment for the night, please notify me. We urge all ministers to attend, realizing that it is you who can create a real missionary spirit in your Church. Your presence will be an inspiration to us, and, we trust, the Conference a help to you. Come.

CONFESSION AND FORGIVENESS.

"If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins."—1 John 1:8-9.

What is sin? Sin is easier to describe than to define. There is a story of Calvin Coolidge going to Church, and Grace said, "Where have you been?" "I've been to Church." "What did the preacher speak about?" "Sin." "What did he say about sin?" "He was against it." So each of us ought to be against it.

The three hardest words in the world for us to say are, "I have sinned." Yet they are the truest words that we have ever spoken; for all of us have sinned or fallen short. It was so with the following: the prodigal son (Matt. 27:4), and Judas also sinned, and I have sinned.

We account for the universal sins of man on basis of the weakness of the flesh and the strength of the devil; for every man is two men. The old nature and the new. Old man Adam and old nature which is weak, we have inherited the Eden scene. There is a constant warfare in us; a new life struggling against the old, as the house of David against the house of Israel.

Many there are who have sinned who do not seem to regret it, and they talk about how mean they once were. Let no one tell another of his wrong-doing, lest he do it in humility, and never let the devil pat you on the back and say, you did me a good turn in those days.

Our text tells us that we are to confess our sins, and that unless we repent we shall perish; hence, "He is faithful and just to forgive us of our sins." But we must confess our sins before Him. But here again we come face to face with that which made a mistake in our lives. There is a wrong way of confessing our sins, as the Bible tells us of men who wrongly confessed their sins, so that we might profit by their cases, as is shown in the case of Pharaoh.

Pharaoh was King of Egypt, and God sent Moses to tell him that he must let the children of Israel go out of Egypt to the promised land. Moses stood before him and gave the message of God, and Pharaoh mocked him and said, who is God that I should obey Him? I am a king myself; leave here, I will do as I please with these slaves. They shall turn my mills. Then Moses went away and Pharaoh was the victim of many plagues, such as the water turning into blood, and finally the first-born of every family was taken, and Pharaoh saw his mistake and sent for Moses and told him that he had sinned and told him to ask God to stay these clouds of wrath and trouble that were falling on his people. Pharaoh said, "I have sinned and I relent; I will change my ways." So Moses prayed and the clouds were raised and the sunlight came over Egypt and he started to the promised land with the children of Israel. Then Pharaoh sent his men to capture him and bring him back, with the children of Israel, so that they could grind at his mills again; but Moses escaped through the Red Sea.

In telling this story, it illustrates the fact that so many of us are willing to confess our sins when in a tight place and make all kinds of promises, and yet soon forget the promises we made and go back to sin again.

A minister friend of mine, at close of prayer-meeting one night, arose and asked to say a word. He told how ill a certain man was, and that five doctors had been in consulation all day and he had just left the bedside and came to Church for prayer-meeting, saying, "I believe in prayer and that God can stay the hand of disease." The doctor said that when they told the sick man that he was soon to die, he said, "I am not ready to die. Isn't it Wednesday night? Then go to Church and tell the people to pray to God to spare my life so that when I get well I might come back to Him and be one of His servants, which I pledge to be." Every head was bowed, and the man was made well again. Next morning the doctor phoned that everything was all right; that the tide had turned. Soon the man was up and on the streets again, and when the minister came back and saw him walking the streets one Saturday and asked him, "You are going to be out for Church tomorrow?" "No, not yet; I'm not entirely well, and I have to go to the office to catch up on some of my letters, but I will come soon." But he never came—the man dropped dead. "He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy." Just another case of a man who confesses his sins under pressure, but later forgets his confession.

WET PROPAGANDA.

If prohibition ever loses out in America it will be because of the indifference of the ministers and members of the Church. That indifference has been noted by the liquor forces, and they are taking advantage of it to the limit. Every conceivable scheme is being carefully worked by that crafty organization the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment for misrepresenting facts and making things seem what they are not.

Some of the shrewdest newspaper and magazine writers in the country are now engaged by that organization and its allied interests to furnish to the press propaganda material. They spare no pains to carry their point and mold public opinion against prohibition and the enforcement of it. A typical example is seen in the recent announcement of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York that he favors the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. This has been broadcast to the world as a great piece of news. The fact is, it is no news at all. Whoever heard of Franklin Roosevelt being anything else but wet and favorable to anything that would bring legalized liquor back to New York, the most un-American State and city in the Union.

Governor Roosevelt's statement that he is opposed to the return of the saloon is all bosh. What he and ex-Governor Al. Smith both would like to see is the cross-rail, the sawdust, the plate-glass, the screen-doors, and the rest of the paraphernalia that goes to make up a full-rigged whiskey-shop. When Roosevelt became governor, with his hand on the Holy Bible he swore to support the Constitution of the United States and enforce the law. From that day to this he has repudiated that oath, has refused to support at least a part of the Constitution, and has allowed saloons (which he now says he is opposed to) to run full-fledged in New York City and elsewhere throughout the State. In a very statesman-like way he says that so long as the eighteenth amendment is on the books he believes it should be enforced. The very idea! What has he done to enforce it? He has a poor way of practicing what he preaches.

The casual reader coming in contact with some of this liquor-press propaganda would probably remark: "Well, it looks like the whole country is turning against prohibition. Now, here comes out Governor Roosevelt of New York saying that he favors the repeal of the eighteenth amendment." The wet press of the country, including the Associated Press, would proclaim this announcement of this great man as one of the outstanding events in democratic history. The trouble with Roosevelt and the other liquorites of New York State is they are just not willing to abide by a law almost unanimously passed by the other States of the Union. They want their liquor and they are going to have it, even if it means the disregard of all law to get it. This is not unexpected for New York, made up as it is of a larger percentage of foreigners than any other State in the Union—men and women who care naught for American ideals and institutions.

Governor Roosevelt made this announcement thinking, probably, that it was well-timed, since he is considering the presidency; and it is! It gives the dry Democrats of the South in particular, as well as the ministers and Christian forces of the Churches throughout the country, time to line up, and, in the next campaign, teach him the same lesson they taught Al. Smith in the last. The matter of settling this much-discussed question of prohibition belongs first and last to the Church, since it has to do with the destiny of the nation and the welfare of coming generations.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The children had a real treat last week. The Carolina Theater, of Burlington, put on the Byrd expedition picture for three days and nights and extended a cordial invitation to all the Orphanage children to attend free. Of course this is an unusual picture and one that we seldom have an opportunity to see, and one that is very interesting from beginning to end, and educational. We had a good friend in Gibsonville, two miles away, who has a very large moving van. He proposed to take the children if we would pay for the gasoline. His truck carried about seventy children, and we carried the others so all could take advantage of this opportunity of seeing Byrd's trip to the south pole. They were thrilled from beginning to end and have talked agreat deal about it since seeing it. But all reached the conclusion that they would rather see the picture than to make the trip to learn of the things they saw in the picture.

We are very grateful to the Carolina Theater for this courtesy, and also to our good friend Mr. Petigrew, of Gibsonville, for taking so many of the children for us. People are good to us, and it makes our work more pleasant.

We had a potato-digging picnic last Saturday. This picnic was a boys' picnic. We carried all the boys, little and big, to the potato field, and plowed out, picked up, and stored 380 bushels of potatoes and we are not through digging yet. We counted it a day's work and quit at 5 o'clock.

How about the Thanksgiving offering in your Church? We want every Church and Sunday School to take a part this year. We need the assistance of all the Churches and Sunday Schools so much this year that we believe all will take a part. We are counting on all to take an active part. Remember the Orphan children in your Orphanage.

"BY THE WORD OF THEIR TESTIMONY."

Say what you will about education, development, character-training, you have never said the last word about the Christian life until you have mentioned the direct working of the Spirit of God on the soul of man. As that is the most mysterious, so it is the most fascinating of all personal adventures. The psychologist may explain until he is blind—sometimes it does not take long—but every Christian knows that when "the Spirit Himself beareth witness with our spirit," it is an experience more vivid and wonderful than any other can be. The describing of these moments is not easy. Words are poor stuff for such employment. And yet this is precisely the exercise which in all ages has attracted the heart and the mind of men. Testimony is a perennial and ever-potent evangelism.—Western Christian Advocate.

THE LESSON ROUND TABLE, 1931. Edited by Richard D. Dodge. Cokesbury Press; $1.25; pp. 396.

Last year the Cokesbury Press began this publication edited by Dr. Dodge and contributed to by an outstanding group of religious leaders. The venture proved such a signal success that they have continued the publication for its second year. There are decided advantages in having a Sunday School commentary that presents such a splendid array of Christian and scholarly delineation. The impact on the mind of those who use this textbook must be a constant source of inspiration. It is one of the best commentaries on the improved International Uniform Lessons.

THE CHURCH AND ADULT EDUCATION. By B. S. Winchester. Richard R. Smith, Inc.; $1.50; pp. 181.

One of the things that we have learned in recent years is that adults are educable. We should have known this all the time, but for some reason it had escaped our attention. We are grateful to Dr. Winchester for insisting that adults can learn.

Dr. Winchester undertakes to be quite practical by insisting on four areas of adult experience which he describes as the hot spots of consciousness which he treats as home religion, racial issues, civic relationships, and international relationships.

Part three of the book utilizes the educational possibilities of the Church at work, and deals with the practical measures of program-building and leadership training.

MUSIC AND RELIGION. By S. A. Hunter. Abingdon; $1.75; pp. 231.

Dr. Hunter conceived the idea of asking fourteen leading American preachers to join him in preaching on some phase of music and religion. The fifteen have treated fourteen themes and have treated them inspirationally. For one thought, the reader will be grateful—that Jesus sang. Here is music raised to its rightful place of service in the realm of religion. It is a book not merely for musicians and ministers, but for all.

BEREA CHURCH.

As it has been quite a little while since I have had anything to say about the work of this Church, in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Yet I am impressed just now to tell THE SUN readers something of the progress we are making as a Church, especially for the past two years. Rev. J. F. Morgan has just finished his fifth year with us as pastor. During this time, it seems that our Church has gotten along more smoothly than ever before in general Church work. Last year, for the first time since we have been a Church, the treasurer reported six weeks before the convening of the annual Conference that all bills had been paid up, Conference apportionments in hand, and one hundred and ninety-three dollars in the treasury. When I heard that I said, "Amen." Yesterday evening, while assembled in our last conference for the present year, with a membership present that more than doubled any number being present in any conference for a number of years. The treasurer again made his report, which was better than last year, because, said he, we have more money in the treasury than ever before at the close of the year, with all bills canceled, and he commented on the many good things the Church had done this year.

For the past two years we have had some heretofore somewhat inactive members to come to the front and take up the work, and with their push, energy and good will displayed, have just made things hustle. We have never had a finer brotherly spirit manifested among the members than now. And the co-operation and sweet fellowship between pastor and people will surely make success. I don't know whence cometh this gracious relationship, unless the brotherhood has become more possessive of the Christ-like spirit than formally, or that Bro. Morgan is possessive of some peculiarity of divine magnetism that just encircles his parishioners and brings them within his loving embrace and just holds them there until they respond to his and the Master's will. Any way, be as it may, we are getting along fine. With good wishes for THE SUN.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGRETATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

BRANSON.

H. T. Branson died at his home September 15th, after a long spell of illness. He was the loving father of eighteen children, of whom five sons and six daughters survive. Funeral services were held at Holly Springs Church, conducted by Rev. H. B. Barger, assisted by the writer. May the good Lord bless the bereaved family.

B. H. LOWDERMILK.

LEE.

If words of love and appreciation from hearts of friends could add honor and glory to the memory of one whom we have loved and lost, then we would ask that it be given us to somehow convey to others the esteem in which we held our dear friend and neighbor, Mrs. W. J. Lee, who quietly went away to her heavenly home on September 6, 1930. "Cousin Jennie," as she was known to so many of us, was a woman of rare and beautiful character, admired and beloved by all who knew her, and our Berea Church and Driver community do sincerely mourn our great loss.

While we know that we shall always miss her sweet face and gentle leadership in the Sunday School, Church services, and in every line of religious activity (for she was vitally interested and concerned), yet we are grateful for her long and useful life, in which she glorified God, in helping to bring peace and joy and hope to many other lives.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we submissively give her into the arms of Jesus, whom she loved and served so well, and that we remember her words and deeds to enrich our own souls.

2. That we express to her family our deepest sympathy in their bereavement, and may the Holy Spirit comfort their hearts.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be recorded on the pages of our Church register, a copy sent to the family, and a copy published in The Christian Sun.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Mrs N T F

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

GEORGE WASHINGTON CELEBRATION.—

The citizens committee to co-operate with the Federal commission in the George Washington bi-centennial celebration has appointed a committee on religious observances, of which Dr. Charles S. Macfarland is chairman. The committee includes also as members Bishops W. F. McDowell, J. E. Freeman, W. T. Manning and W. F. Poling and other representative leaders of the Protestant faiths. With this array of intellectual and spiritual lights on the committee, the religious aspect of the celebration will receive sufficient attention to give it the national and international recognition that it deserves.

CHARITIES AND CHURCHES.—

The late Senator James D. Phelan, of California, in his will disposed of nearly four million dollars to charities and Churches. In more than one hundred bequests, practically every charity institution in San Francisco, irrespective of creed or color, was included. Of course, the larger portion of these bequests went to Catholic Churches and institutions, as Senator Phelan was a devout Catholic. This should be challenged to some of our wealthy Protestant senators to will some of their wealth to institutions and Churches of their faith. There could be no finer memorial to the name of public servants than such bequests that go on living and serving Christ and humanity for all time to come.

"MODERN YOUTH."—

At a recent banquet given by the Commonwealth Club, San Francisco, Prof. Harry A. Overstreet, of New York, spoke on "Modern Youth," and among other things he said that young people today "are disillusioned about the significant thingc of life because of too much dogma and lack of intelligence which has been used in the past." He thinks that there is developing today a pioneering, critical type of mind that is checking up the old dogmas and analyzing the old facts. This, he says, "accounts for the lack of certainty regarding ideals in regard to marriage and the family, politics, industry, education and religion." Such an attitude on the part of the younger generation will lead to an empirical study of these great questions and result in a better understanding and a better adjustment to these fundamental institutions. Everything is being subjected to scientific and experimental investigation these days, and in the hands of our aspiring youth the outcome will be wholesome and helpful, progressive and creative, neither dogmatic nor dominating.

SLEEPING IN CHURCH.—

Extracts from the Church records dating back to the seventeenth century reveal some strange facts. Our forbears, in September, 1651, tried to tackle the problem of sleeping in Church thus: "The session taking into consideration the great sleepiness in Church, occasioned by the women keeping their plyds (plaids, shawls) about their heids in tym of devyn service, does therefore appoint intimatoun to be maid the next Lord's Day out of pulpit that the women would lay down ther plyds about ther shoulders and does ordain the beddell (beadle) mediately after the ringing of the third bell to seeze them doun."

This remedy was certainly not efficacious, for in May, 1656, the matter again comes up, this time with a threat to confiscate the cloak for the worshiper's sin: "The session perceiving that the women's keeping their plaids upon their heads and faces in time of sermon is occasion of sleepiness, as also that they who sleep cannot be distinguished from those who sleep not that they may be wakened, therefore they appoint that such be not used hereafter under pain of taking their plaids from them." People were not better in the "ye goode ole days" than they are now. The world is not growing worse.

RELIGIOUS FORUMS.—

Great themes are being discussed and studied in religious forums and convocations as never before in our generation. Recently in a religious forum in Boston, under the auspices of one of the colleges, a broad field of fundamental subjects was discussed. Prof. Hermon Herrel Horne, of New York University, gave a critical study of the character and limitations of the philosophy, of John Dewey. Prof. Kirtley Mather, of Harvard, discussed "The Impact of Modern Science Upon Religion" in three addresses—"The Search for God," "Freedom in a World of Law," and "The Life Everlasting." Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, of the Federal Council, gave the Hazen lectures on "What it Means to be a Christian," leading up to the social implications Christ's teachings. Dr. Raymond Calkins, of Cambridge, Mass., dealt searchingly and tenderly with "the religious ilfe which must underlie the minister's message." Dr. Charles C. Merrill discussed "The Minister's Adventure with Jesus." Such studies in convocation and religious forums would suggest that the minister of today needs to become more thoroughly prepared for the ministry, needs thorough grounding in academic subjects, scientific knowledge, theological training and spiritual insight. He must be a leader among leaders in every field of thought.

BOSTON'S TERCENTENARY.—

September 17, 1630, there were a few score settlers in Boston; September 17, 1930, there were millions of citizens and spectators in this city to celebrate. There were seventy-five radio stations hooked up with the outside world. The mayor of old Boston in Lincolnshire was a guest in new Boston at the most wonderful spectacle possible. Messages were sent to all parts of the world by radio to cement the bonds of friendship forever between the old and the new world. They sent messages of good cheer and good will and brotherhood to friend on the other side of the Atlantic. They unveiled a memorial of enduring granite and bronze to the men and women who by their courage and fortitude founded the Massachusetts Bay colony. Great throngs at night watched the illuminated parade of floats depicting the city's history from the days of the Norsemen. The North station auditorium was filled to its capacity of 20,000 to hear Mayor Salter, of the English Boston, and others. A pageant on the common, "The Soul of America," Friday evening appropriately closed the week's celebration; but the commemoration of the 300th anniversary will go on through the entire year and throughout the entire State. Every city, town and hamlet and every Church has its celebration. The contribution of this city to the life of America is worthy of such a memorial and such a celebration, for cities like great persons, have great characters and great spirits.

DR. ZWEMER.—

Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer is known as "the modern apostle to the Moslem world" because of his long and successful missionary work among the Mohammedans. He made the opening address at Princeton University at the beginning of the fall session. In his address he maintained that the Christian minister must acquaint himself with other religions than Christianity, with their "elements of truth and beauty," so that he may adequately preach "Jesus Christ who is altogether truth and beauty." He asserted that the purpose of missions stands sure, and its accomplishment is certain, because it is the carrying out of a God-given commission. Nevertheless, he said, sympathy with and understanding of other religions is the means whereby the missionary and preacher can begin his evangelistic work with any hope of success, for they all contain broken lights which gathered up in the intense light of Christ, who is the Light of light, and the unique and supreme manifestation of God. Dr. Robert E. Speer gave the charge to Dr. Zwemer as the new professor of missions at Princeton. There were representatives of fifty seminaries and colleges at the opening service. This great event is a commentary on the necessity of great preparation for the ministry and missions. We of the Christian Church should have a chair of missions and more adequate provision for the preparation for the ministry than we now have in our colleges in order that our ministers may be prepared to measure up to the demands upon them in this age.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. B. J. Earp has been quite successful in two special revival services in the Valley of Virginia. In the meeting at Palmyra Church there were ten additions, and in that at Mt. Lebanon there were fourteen additions.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree stopped at the publishing office of THE SUN last week, en route to Charleston, S. C., where he will be stationed during the coming year. He was accompanied by his brother-in-law, Mr. Franklin, of Florida. We were glad to have them both.

Dr. Frank Jenkins, chairman of the board of trustees of Piedmont Junior College, filled the pulpit at the Richmond Church last Sunday at both morning and evening services. To know Dr. Jenkins is a privilege and a pleasure. Piedmont Junior is most fortunate in having him to serve.

Generous rally day offerings from our Churches will make possible leadership training schools in many of our Churches this winter, progress in the work the young people of the Convention are trying to plan and undertake, and bigger and better Churches because of the giving of the gift and the results that will come back to them in the form of service rendered by the Board of Christian Education.

The Portsmouth Star contains, in its issue of October 16th, an account of the final Conference of the Church year of the First Christian Church of Portsmouth, the news item stating that Rev. H. C. Caviness, pastor, was re-elected unanimously for the coming year, and that he accepted the call. The year closed with the several organizations and auxiliaries of the Church in the best condition they have been in during the twenty-nine years since the organization began. Every organization of the Church not only met its monetary goal, but in every instance exceeded the amount expected of it. In an editorial in reference to Bro. Caviness, the Portsmouth Star says: "All are delighted that Rev. H. C. Caviness will remain in Portsmouth as pastor of First Christian Church."

There are some copies of the New Testament and Psalms in the office of the field secretary of the Board of Christian Education which are for distribution in our Sunday Schools. A friend of boys and girls provided this gift for them. Each boy and girl, upon their tenth birthday, should be given one of these testaments by their Sunday School teacher. Our Sunday School teachers are hereby asked to write to the Board of Christian Education, Waverly, Va., for a copy of the New Testament and Psalms for each of her pupils whose tenth birthday is drawing near. This offer will hold for some time. Please see that the boys and girls get their Testaments. The Sunday School teachers themselves must write for the books.

THE SUN LETTER.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN in Every Home" is the slogan of the circulation manager. The fall of the year is here; cotton and tobacco going on the market, money will be more plentiful. It will be a real good time to subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and a most excellent time to renew.

THE SUN is needing money badly, and it is depending on the members of the Christian Church for its support. Subscribe if you are not taking it. Renew if you are in arrears. THE SUN needs money to pay bills.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Circulation Manager.

CONFERENCES MEET.

Eastern Virginia Conference will meet with the Church at South Norfolk, Va., Wednesday before the first Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference will meet on Tuesday after the second Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M., at Long's Chapel, Alamance County, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference will meet Wednesday after the first Sunday in November, 1930, 10:30 A. M., with Hank's Chapel.

Eastern North Carolina Conference will meet with the Catawba Springs Christian Church, Wake County, N. C., on Tuesday after the third Sunday in November, 1930, at 10:30 A. M.

WESTERN VIRGINIA CONVENTION.

The Western District of the Virginia Christian Endeavor Union will hold its convention in Woodstock, Va., on November 1-2, 1930. The Western District includes the counties of the Shenandoah Valley and all C. E. Societies there are urged to be well represented.

The convention promises to be a splendid one, and among the speakers and leaders are Mr. Stanley B. Vandersall, superintendent C. E.; Mr. W. Roy Breg, Southern secretary of the International Society of C. E.; Mr. C. E. Barfield, president of Virginia State C. E. Union; Mr. W. H. Baker, treasurer of Virginia Union; and Mr. Floyd Haines, State social and recreational superintendent.

The district registrar is Miss Catherine Bauserman, Woodstock, Va., and all registrations should be sent to her as soon as possible. The registrations are 50 cents for the young people's convention and 25 cents for the junior and intermediate convention.

Special mention will be made to societies having 100 per cent registration, and an award will be made to the society sending in the most registrations.

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER THE TEST.

For some time I have had a desire to write a letter to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, but because of my age and the busy life I live I have failed to do so. I am now in my seventy-fourth year and have been in the active service of the ministry for fifty-one years. I have organized several Churches here and in south Georgia and have ordained about thirty ministers and have baptized more than twenty-five hundred people in Georgia and Florida. I have been pastor of one Church for more than forty-five years; another for thirty-seven years, and another for thirty-three years; and the longer I live, the more I enjoy the work, but I am retiring from the active ministry November 1st of this year. I am originally from Duplin County, N. C., and having lost my parents in early life, I found it hard to make any show in life. I came to Georgia quite a young man, and associated myself with the best people I could find. I was just a young minister when Drs. Scoven, Hall and others organized the South Georgia Freewill Baptist Association; an association that has always been liberal in its views and far from fostering sectarian prejudices. I have all my life believed in the fellowship of all Christians, and I have preached and practiced it. I have never known any other test of Christian fellowship than Christian character, and it has always been a source of pleasure to me when I happened to meet a minister who was possessed of such congenial, Christ-like spirit, and I have been made to rejoice in these last days by copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN sent me by Rev. A. R. Flowers to know that there is a brotherhood who has stood for these principles through many years. I feel that the kingdom of Christ on earth has suffered much harm from the lack of brotherly love and Christian affection among His followers. I hail with joy the thought of a coming day when we can have a united brotherhood of all Christ's followers on earth.

Surrency, Ga. JOHN A. BLANTON.

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

GEORGIA STATE CONFERENCE will be held with the Macedonia Church, at Braselton, Ga., October 27-29. This Church held a great home-coming day service on October 19th.

CORAL GABLES, FLA.: On a recent Sunday, seventeen new members were received at this Church, making a total of sixty for the year. The Church has set one hundred new members as its objective this year.

ALBEMARLE, N. C.: The latest report is that about twenty or more new members have been added to the Church by the active pastoral work of the pastor, Rev. George Penn, plus two weeks of special service carried on by him and his father. It is a good report. Any others like it?

DR. W. T. McELVEEN was recently called to Atlanta Seminary Foundation and Vanderbilt School of Religion to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. Wm. E. Barton. Dr. McElveen declined the call, having decided to remain as pastor of the United Congregational Church at Atlanta.

REV. EVERETT H. SPEROW, pastor of the Church at Columbia, S. C., is happy in that his men have organized a splendid group to put on a song service every Sunday night entirely independent of the minister. He is a most earnest and devoted worker. In connection with his Church work, he is studying in the University of South Carolina. Mr. Sperow is an enthusiastic student.

REV. GEO. N. EDWARDS, pastor of the Circular Church, Charleston, S. C., is president of the City Ministerial Union and is called upon for frequent special services in the city. He is a leader in the missionary and religious education work in the Carolinas. He is in his fifth year as pastor of this historic Church, which will soon observe its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary. The Church has reached a regular apportionment of $6.00 a member.

REV. C. ARTHUR LINCOLN, at Daytona Beach, was recently made the subject of a column editorial in the Daytona Beach News-Journal. Mr. Lincoln is head of the Family Welfare Association of the city, and the editorial stated that his leadership in that work "placed him easily among the city's foremost builders." The editorial was an exposition of Mr. Lincoln's philosophy of welfare work as given in an address before the Rotary Club.

DEMOREST, GA.: Rev. H. B. Mowbray, the pastor of the Union Church, has the assistance of Prof. C. Lyle Percy, of Piedmont College, and two student workers in carrying on the missionary work of the North Georgia Association on the larger parish plan. In this way the large college constituency has pastoral leadership and an extensive program of Sunday School extension, Church vacation schools, parish visitation and inspirational service is made possible.

STAR CHURCH, which has always been considered part of the academy, will resume its services November 2nd, and will hold services the morning of the first Sunday in each month. A great fellowship united service is planned for December 7th, when it is expected that Dr. J. O. Atkinson or Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor of Burlington Christian Church, will be the speaker. It is hoped both may be present. This promises to be one of the greatest fellowship meetings of the Carolinas of the autumn. Rev. S. M. Penn is pastor of the Star Church.

SALISBURY is the first Church in North Carolina to report "over the top with both mission and home budgets for 1930-'31." The strong program of stewardship teaching put on by the pastor, Rev. Wm. T. Scott, has brought results unequaled in the modern life of this Church. Miss Joy Grigsby, a member of this Church, presented a beautiful flag of North Carolina to Mrs. Hoover when the President and Mrs. Hoover passed through Salisbury on the way to Kings Mountain. Mrs. Hoover received the flag graciously and wrote Miss Joy a beautiful letter from the White House.

COLUMBUS, GA.: The Rose Hill Christian Church, beginning with October 10th, started with a new year's program of work. When our delegates returned from our State conference, it was with new courage and interest. Immediately they advocated putting on an up-to-date program, which was received by the Church, and now they are putting it into effect. The finance committee is pushing the campaign, and seeing every friend of the Church, as well as the members. The trustees are also carrying on an extensive program of repairs on their buildings. The attendance and interest is still advancing and the outlook is hopeful.

OXFORD, GA.: The Sardis Church, at Oxford, held an all-day meeting on Sunday, October 5th, in the interest of Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work. The meeting followed out the suggestion of Rev. W. C. Carpenter, president of the State organization, Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, Georgia-Alabama Conferences. The meeting especially considered Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work in all its phases. Dean J. C. Rogers, of Piedmont, gave an address on "God's Value of Trained Youth." It was voted to hold these meetings quarterly in the north Georgia District, and the next meeting will be held with Macedonia Church, at Braselton, Ga.

UNITED CHURCH: The United Church, Raleigh, N. C., rejoices in the recent action of the Caroleigh Christian Church in voting to unite in fellowship with it. The Caroleigh Church is a fine small Church, located about two miles south of Raleigh. It has recently held revival services, at which the pastor-at-large preached once and Dr. Kirbye several times. The result was the growth of a larger fellowship and the uniting of the two bodies. The Caroleigh Church will still maintain its services practically as a branch of the larger Raleigh United Church. This is a good example for many smaller Churches, Congregational and Christian. With the national bodies united, as they are, it will be the genius of smaller divisions to come together in organic form just as rapidly as local minds and conditions will permit.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.: Under the leadership of Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, Pilgrim Church has gone forward in a notable fashion. When Mr. Raymond took charge of the Church, February 1, 1927, the membership stood at one hundred and seventy-three, and it is now three hundred, making a net gain of seventy-three per cent. The budget for 1930 is $7,595, and the missionary apportionment has trebled, reaching $821 in 1929. The minister's salary has been increased twice, the indebtedness on the Church property decreased, the Church remodeled and beautified, and a new pipe organ installed at a valuation of $4,000. The Church, under Dr. Raymond's leadership and preaching, is attracting an increasing number of people, who are forward-looking, religiously and community-minded, and the city newspapers give large space to the pastor's sermons and the Church activities. Dr. Raymond is president of the advisory board of the Southeast.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE.

The new year at Piedmont College was made significant by the welcoming of the new president, Dr. Henry C. Newell. Dr. Newell was already familiar to and with Piedmont College, having been acting president at one time. He was given a royal welcome by the student body and the faculty. Dr. Howell takes up the work which Dr. Jenkins has made so significant through the years. He will build on the foundations of loyalty and sacrifice and the achievements of Dr. Jenkins' presidency, and under his leadership it is believed the greater dreams for Piedmont will be achieved.

The college opens with a freshman class of one hundred and six, and with a total student body of two hundred and thirty-four. There are few changes in the faculty of the college. The Congregational Church of Demorest gave a reception and entertained for the benefit of the students and faculty soon after the opening of the college.

COUNTRY LIFE ACADEMY.

The meeting of the trustees at Star, October 11th marked another advance step in this school. It was the first time for many years, at least, that the student body, faculty and trustees have met together. They all sat about the tables in the dining-hall, where a splendid dinner was served by the faculty and students. Dr. Edward F. Green introduced Rev. M. J. Sweet as director of ceremonies, who in turn introduced the principal of the school, and the other members of the faculty. Mr. Sweet then called on each trustee for a short talk. There were some very happy speeches made by such men as Prof. Cook and Prof. Boshart, of State College; Lawyer Pool, attorney for the academy, living at Troy; Rev. W. T. Scott, of Salisbury, and Rev. S. M. Penn, of the Star Greater Parish, and others. Two students expressed appreciation.

It was reported that conditions of the academy are in better shape than had been in evidence in several years, one trustee going so far as to say, "best he had ever known." President Green gave evidence of success in his seeking for funds. Although only about half as much money could be raised as in former years, still by cutting down in many directions, the high standard of the school work has not been lowered. The number of students is quite as large as at the beginning of other years, and several other students are waiting for financial conditions to improve, when they will enter.

NOTICE.

The Committee on Education of the Eastern North Carolina Conference will meet in the lobby of the Bland Hotel Monday, the 10th of November, at 11 o'clock, Raleigh, N. C. Any one wishing to come before the committee may meet us there.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XI.

S. S. Minnekahda, Sunday, July 13, 1930.

Our good ship has brought us safely out of the English Channel after we had passed Cornwall, to the right. It was the last of England to be seen. I slept fine last night in my large, comfortable room on deck three. It has six beds in it, and if I tire of one, another is inviting. I am still thinking that about the best friend one has, especially in time of sickness and convalescence, is a real, genuine, good bed. It is strange that we do not have better and more comfortable beds, since we spend more time in bed than we do at any other one place on earth. By the usual ruling, one is supposed to take eight hours out of each twenty-four for sleep and rest. Add to this regular eight-hour stay in one place, other times of rest and relaxation, and we have almost one-half of our time from the cradle to the grave in bed. If there is a place that we should seek to make comfortable, it is that on which we sleep. Well did the psalmist say, "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures." One often rebels at having to stay in bed, but the fact is that it is a wonderful place for fellowship with happy meditations.

The management of this steamship company, having learned of my illness, was generous enough to give me a room for six without any extra charges. He evidently wished me to have ample spaces for convalescence and the other delights of the days. They brought me tea at 7 this A. M., and I trust the folks at home will do me this way when and if I get back. I like tea in bed an hour before arising. I am evidently very close kin to the English. And then they served a deliciously cooked breakfast at 8. I see right now that the other passengers on this boat are going to be jealous of me, and will often cast a green eye of envy in my direction because the orders are that my tea and breakfast be served each morning in bed and that I be allowed to enjoy relaxation, reading and rest there until at least 11 A. M.

Dr. L. E. Smith and Dr. F. G. Coffin are excellent traveling companions. Out of sympathy for me, they drop in during the morning. Fact is, I sympathize with them because they are not being served as beautifully and bountifully as I am. Smith was very nervous this morning and needed sleep. He has enough trials and hardships of a great pastorate to make two men nervous, but he might as well take it moderately out at sea, since jumping about over the boat will run no errands in his dealings at home.

Arising at 11 this morning, I chanced by the large chapel and heard singing. I went in. I really heard a splendid sermon on "Sin." The text was Rom. 7:19, "When I would do good, evil is present." The preacher, a Presbyterian minister from Tampa, Fla., declared that sin is always present. He recently took a fourteen-year-old boy into his Church. He asked the boy if he was a sinner. The candid reply from the chap was, "I lie occasionally—that's all." He then asked his Church officials, each one of them, if they were sinners. They replied that only occasionally. Finally, one of his elders, being a sturdy Scotchman, answered, "Sin is constantly with me in thought and in deed." "That Scotchman was right," replied the preacher. "Really what the boy and the other Church officials meant by making the reply was that they identified sin with crime. Since they were not criminals or caught up with, they did not feel that they were sinners except occasionally. The world is full of sin," declared the preacher; "and sin is the one problem that man has to deal with throughout life." The services were very sweet and comforting. The hymn-singing was splendid and beautiful.

This boat has a most singular sort of captain. Instead of running his ship, he runs the passengers. He presided at this Church service—introduced the preacher, made everybody welcome, and announced that he would have services of some kind every day, and that the passengers might expect to hear messages of moral and spiritual benefit. He allowed, in public utterances, on his ship discussions on all topics except politics. He would not invite any man to hold a public meeting who would discuss politics. He insists that Dr. Coffin and Dr. Smith shall hold services, and Dr. Coffin very graciously consents.

At noon of this quiet Sabbath Day, out on deck with overcoat and steamer rug snugly tucked about me, I lift my heart in gratitude and praise to Him who created and ordained the Sabbath. How good, sweet, sacred and quiet the holy Sabbath is on board ship far out at sea. The Sabbath is a wonderful institution. God ordained it. God is in it. Man never organized, created or built an institution of like merit and worth. God made the Sabbath Day holy. It's a joy to the heart to realize that in moments and hours of this holy day God is seeking to speak to us, and if we will keep the quiet hour, we may easily hear and understand the still small voice that speaks to the soul and gives the holy aspirations.

UNITY OR UNION.

There has never been so much spoken and written about union, good will and peace as at the present time. And there has never been so great necessity for the practice of these virtues as at the present time. The intermingling of men and women in so many relations and places almost require place and good will. There is such a necessity interchange of ideas and material products that business could not prosper under conditions of discord and ill will. The more progress there is made in civilization and the increased intercourse carried on between races and nations, the greater the necessity for good will, good treatment, and peace. Christianity requires union, good will and peace, and the fact that these increase shows that His gospel is doing its work; not to extend it, ought and might be enough to prove that the Prince of peace is working His way into the heart of humanity, and the Church is His agent to carry forward this work.

In the prayer of Jesus He prayed for unity, "That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me" (John 17:21). Jesus, it seems, was praying for unity, not union. It was spiritual unity for which Jesus prayed. But one thing seems just as plain: that where there is spiritual unity there will be union. There may be union without unity, but there cannot be unity without union. Husband, wife may take the vows of union at the marriage altar, but there is not always unity; and unity is the spirit that determines happiness, usefulness and success. This furnishes a review of what is called union between the Christian and Congregational Churches. If it is union and nothing more, conditions will be worse than they were before the Piqua and Seattle conventions. If unity really existed and is maintained in the future, the union of these two denominations will make both more spiritual and more useful in the kingdom of God.

What both bodies must do is to pray for and strive after the real Spirit of Jesus Christ. If money, numbers, prestige, or self-interest enter into the equation, the result will be a hindrance to Christianity and the Protestant Church. A great opportunity presents itself for teaching a great lesson to other denominations. They are looking on, and neither denomination was ever so liable to make harmful mistakes. If ministers make the union an opportunity to get into more prominent pulpits, or to receive larger salaries, it will reduce their opportunities and capacity for doing good. The publishing interests and educational institutions must not make money or business the prime factor in their thought, purpose and plans. Married life may mean, and often does mean, self-denial, sacrifice and hardship, but if the union is built upon and maintained by unity in love and service the home is a success and a blessing. The greatest of human life is in the marriage relation, and the greatest test of the sincerity and character of these two Churches will be in their new relation. Seattle will be the marriage altar, and subsequent years will prove the Christian value of their union. The unity and union will not prove their value in increased numbers, larger financial activities, and a greater name, but in faith, humility, consecration of talents, time and money, to the supreme cause of helping to save a lost world. The model is Jesus, and the example is the sacrificing spirit of the apostles who went forth to preach Jesus Christ and Him crucified. The thing that has made the Christian Church has been its faith, its humility, its smallness, and its loyalty to spiritual convictions and the word of God. W. W. S.

THE EUCHARIST, OR THE LORD'S SUPPER.

By Rev. J. H. Ralston, D. D.,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

The Lord's Supper is a subject that should receive more attention from the Church than it is receiving, apart from the special occasion for its consideration just now when the Roman Catholic Church is holding its great Eucharistic Congress in this city. The words in 1 Cor. 11:26-29 have not lost their primitive meaning. To be told that the eating of the bread and the drinking of the cup unworthily is to be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, should be sufficiently impressive in itself, aside from any exhortation that a Christian should examine himself as to his participation in the sacrament—something that is in these degenerate days almost entirely ignored. It is not to the credit of Protestants that their participation of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, is in the appreciation of the act itself, far below that of the fairly intelligent Roman Catholic.

Why is this Eucharistic Congress being held? Simply because that in the Eucharist we have the centralizing of the principles of Catholicism, everything in the entire system revolving about that sacrament. In appearing in the American republic, Romanism does not hesitate to risk its greatest appeal for the consideration of men. It becomes a veritable ne plus ultra.

Place of the Eucharist in Catholicism.

Let us notice carefully what is claimed by Catholicism for the relative importance of its doctrine of transubstantiation: "Of all the sacraments instituted by the Lord, the blessed Eucharist is the holiest, the most august, and most admirable. What the sun is in the world, and what the heart is in man, the blessed Eucharist is in the Church of Jesus Christ. It is the central mystery towards which all religious ceremonials of the Church converge. It is the greatest, most wonderful and most divine of all her mysteries." (Abriged Course of Religious Instruction.)

"After the words of consecration are pronounced over the bread and wine, our Lord Jesus Christ, true God and true man, is truly, really and substantially contained under the outward appearances of the bread and wine, the whole substance of the bread being changed into His body, and the whole substance of the wine being changed into His blood, and we understand also that it is not the body and blood as they were in this world, but as they are now, glorious and immortal in heaven." (Doctrinal Catechism.)

"The species or appearance of the bread—the color, form, odor and taste, are mere accidents, the substance is the body and blood of Jesus Christ." (Abridged Course of Religious Instruction.)

"Hardly has the priest said the words, 'This is my body, this is my blood,' before he bends his knee and adores the Host, which he holds in his hand; then he raises it, that the faithful may see and adore it together with the angels; for this Host is Jesus Christ in person, descended from heaven and adored by the angels who accompanied Him." (Abridged Course of Religious Instruction.)

"In order to show due honor to the Blessed Sacrament, the Church exposes it for public adoration, gives benediction with it, carries it reverently about in solemn procession, has established feasts and confraternities as an emblem of adoration and love, and a lamp is kept burning day and night before the altar where the Blessed Sacrament is reserved in the tabernacle." (Full Catechism of the Catholic Religion.)

Authoritative Statements of Catholic Doctrine.

Council of Trent, Session 13 Canon 1: "If any one denieth that in the sacrament of the most holy Eucharist are contained truly, really and substantially the body and blood, together with the soul and divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, and consequently the whole Christ; but saith that He is only therein as in a sign, or in figure, or virtue, let him be anathema."

Council of Trent, Session 13, Canon 2: "If any one saith that, in the sacred and holy sacrament of the Eucharist, the substance of the bread and wine remains conjointly with the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, and denieth that wonderful and singular conversion of the whole substance of the bread into the body, and the whole substance of the wine into the blood—the species (accidents) of the bread and wine remaining—which conversion, indeed, the Catholic Church most aptly calls transubstantiation, let him be anathema."

Council of Trent, Session 13, Canon 6: "If any one saith that, in the holy sacrament of the Eucharist, Christ, the only begotten Son of God, is not to be adored with the worship, even external, of latria; and is, consequently, neither to be venerated with special festive solemnity, nor to be solemnly borne about in processions, according to the laudable and universal rite and custom of holy Church; or, is not to be adored, and that the adorers thereof are idolaters, let him be anathema."

Council of Trent, Session 21, Canon 2: "If any one saith, that by those words, 'Do this for the commemoration of me' (Luke 22:19), Christ did not institute the apostles priests, or did not ordain that they and other priests should offer his own body and blood, let him be anathema."

Protestant View of the Eucharist.

Protestants are not a unit in their view of the Eucharist, or Lord's Supper, at least in expression, although they deny the idea of transubstantiation unitedly and strongly.

Erasmus, the Swiss reformer, saw nothing in the bread and wine but symbols of the body and blood of Christ. There was no eating and drinking of the body and blood of Christ.

Lutherans to the present time have a doctrine of the presence of Christ in the sacrament that is known by the term "consubstantiation." The Augsburg Convention and Formula Concordiæ agree in saying that in the Lord's Supper the body and blood of Christ are truly and substantially present, and that together with the bread and wine they are truly distributed and received. The words of Christ, "This is my body," are to be understood only in their strictly literal sense, so that neither the bread signifies the absent body of Christ, nor the wine the absent blood of Christ, but so that on account of the sacramental union the bread and wine truly are the body and blood of Christ. The body and blood of Christ are received not only spiritually through faith, but also by the mouth, not after a capernaitish, but a supernatural and celestial manner by virtue of a sacramental union.

John Calvin's personal view of the Eucharist was expressed in this way: "There is a certain efflux from the glorified body of Christ which comes upon the faithful recipient, and the symbolic body and blood have wrought its own special effects, and so Christ is present." In 1549 Calvin, for the purpose of uniting all branches of the Reformed Church in a common doctrine as to the Lord's Supper, wrote what is called the "Consensus Tigurinus." In that document the following is the doctrine of the Lord's Supper:

"We, therefore, repudiate as absurd interpreters those who urge the precise literal sense, as they say, of the customary words in the Supper, 'This is my body, this is my blood.' For we place it beyond all controversy that these words are to be understood figuratively, so that the bread and the wine are said to be that which they signify. And verily it ought not to seem novel or unusual that the name of the thing signified be transferred by metonomy to the sign, for expressions of this kind are scattered throughout the Scriptures; and saying this we assert nothing that does not plainly appear in all the oldest and most approved writers of the Church.

"Moreover, that Christ, through faith by the power of His Holy Spirit, feeds our souls with the eating of His flesh and the drinking of His blood, is not to be understood as if any commingling or transfusion of substance occurred, but as meaning that from flesh once offered in sacrifice and blood once poured out in expiation we derive life."

Among the English confessions in which the doctrine of the Protestant Church concerning the Lord's Supper is treated, we may quote from the Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England:

"The Supper of the Lord is a sacrament of the redemption by Christ's death: insomuch that to such as rightly, worthily, and with faith receive the same, the bread which we break is a partaking of the body of Christ, and likewise the cup of blessing is a partaking of the blood of Christ. . . . The body of Christ is given, and eaten in the Supper only after an heavenly and spiritual manner. And the means whereby the body of Christ is received and eaten in the Supper is faith. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was not by Christ's ordinance reserved, carried about, lifted up, or worshiped."

As to the doctrine of the Westminster Confession of Faith, we may quote: "The outward elements in this sacrament, duly set apart to the uses ordained by Christ, have such a relation to Him crucified as that truly, yet sacramentally only, they are sometimes called by the names of the things they represent, to-wit: the body and blood of Christ, albeit in substance and nature they still remain truly and only bread and wine.

"Worthy receivers, outwardly partaking of the visible elements in this sacrament, do then also inwardly by faith, really and indeed, but not carnally and corporeally, but spiritually receive and feed upon Christ crucified and all the benefits of His death: the body and blood of Christ being then not corporeally or carnally in, with, or under the bread and wine; yet as really but spiritually present to the faith of believers in that ordinance, as the elements themselves are to the outward senses."

These formulas of faith touching the Eucharist are practically accepted by all branches of the Protestant Church today. The Second Helvetic Confession, the Heidelberg Catechism, the Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England, and the Westminister Confession of faith "all agree—

"1. As to the 'presence' of the flesh and blood of Christ. (1) His human nature is in heaven only. (2) His person as God-man is omnipresent everywhere and always, our communion is with His entire person rather than with His flesh and blood. (3) The presence of His flesh and blood in the sacrament is neither physical nor local, but only through the Holy Spirit, affecting the soul graciously.

"2. As to that which the believer feeds upon, they agreed that it was not the 'substance' but the virtue or efficacy of His body and blood, i. e., their sacrificial virtue, as broken and shed for sin.

"3. As to the 'feeding' of believers upon this 'body and blood,' they agreed: (1) It was not with the mouth in any manner. (2) It was by the soul alone. (3) It was by faith, the mouth or hand of the soul. (4) By or through the power of the Holy Ghost. (5) It is not confined to the Lord's Supper. It takes place whenever faith in Him is exercised."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The annual meetings of the board of trustees of the Christian Publishing Association and the General Board of the Christian Church, in Dayton, Ohio, October 14-16, 1930, were full of interest and dealt with problems vital to future plans and purposes in the new relation of the Christian and Congregational Churches.

Facts and figures contained in reports and statements made by competent and anxious members of the board of trustees revealed two sources of encouragement. The merging of the Herald of Gospel Liberty with the Congregationalist had reduced the loss on the Herald of Gospel Liberty to the C. P. A., and if this continues in the future, the publishing house will have a better chance to make progress and profit in its business. That will depend upon how promptly and unanimously subscribers renew their subscriptions to the paper they are now receiving, known as the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty. Subscribers can help their publishing house and the cause they love by renewing when their subscriptions expire.

A most gratifying condition was revealed by the reports from Manager Radabaugh and President Sims by the fact that in spite of the hard times the house had made an encouraging profit for the year. It is hoped that the merger of the Sunday School publications will decrease losses, if it does not increase gains. All things considered, the past year was good and the future has some hope.

The meeting of the General Board had many questions dealing with the union of the Congregational and Christian Churches and the conditions that may arise after the meeting of the two bodies, as a "united Church," in Seattle, Wash., beginning June 30, 1931. The General Convention of the Christian Church and the National Council of the Congregational Church will hold a joint session and try to work out the union so that they can thereafter carry on the work as one body.

The General Board was concerned about problems that may arise, after the Seattle Convention, in the raising and distribution of money for various Church enterprises. This included, especially missions and ministerial relief. The conclusion was reached that in many respects the Churches in local and in Conference work already going on the Christian Church will function as it has done, though many questions provoked discussion that cleared the future of problems likely to arise. The Church papers and the Sunday School literature will, it is hoped, move forward with increased usefulness and success. One thing was manifest in all the discussions, and that was the spirit of brotherly kindness and a common desire to work out the will and purpose of Jesus Christ. No spirit of selfishness or division marked the resolutions or discussions. President F. G. Coffin, General Secretary Warren H. Denison, and Editor Hermon Eldredge had done much constructive work in the new field of progress, and many members of the board showed by their discussions of the new questions that they had made prayerful study of this great question of union and the work to be done.

The Christian Church, by its unsectarian name and attitude toward other denominations for 136 years; by the publication of the first religious paper in the world—Herald of Gospel Liberty; and the opening of the first co-educational college at Yellow Springs, Ohio, in 1849, has quietly and unconsciously insinuated the Christian spirit into Protestantism that has filled all denominations with the spirit of unity and resulted in this union of the Congregational and Christian Churches. We await the result with hope.

ELON LETTER.

There is good authority for believing that the college exists to impart information, to develop power, to supply culture. Institutions have been founded with each of these three major concerns as their objective. The vocational or professional schools, whether of undergraduate or graduate grade, claim as the purpose of their existence the impartation of information which will be useful in the very practical concerns of life. Undoubtedly this was the earliest objective of all education which had to function as the passing on from father to son and from mother to daughter of the accumulated experience of living in the form of skills and knowledge. Practical ages such as ours find this objective a very appealing one. The American people are noted for their ability to make progress and to get on in a material way. We have been particularly able to enlarge our natural resources through inventions and discoveries and the application of the knowledge of nature and science to the production of greater values in human living. So amazing has been our progress in a material way that some one has facetiously remarked that "the American has abolished space and multiplied time and he has only one problem now to master—to abolish death." Yankee shrewdness is known around the world.

The liberal arts colleges, however, have been concerned with what has been called discipline. They have accordingly been committed to the pursuit of subjects that were believed to be peculiarly effective in the development of intellectual power. The intellect, according to this view, has been conceived as a sort of sub-station for the generation of power which would be transmitted over intellectual wires to other mental sub-stations and so made useful in achieving the successes of life. Those who have believed in this type of education make frequent mention of what they call "mental muscle." They believe that what are known in educational history as "the humanites," have the ability to generate this power, to form this muscle in the mind. Educators of this type have had small sympathy with any subjects which they consider "easy." They have, as we say, a crush for mathematics, the ancient languages, logic, philosophy, and metaphysics. They believe in these subjects to the exclusion, except for very practical purposes, of all other subjects in the curriculum. Every new subject that has come into the curriculum, such as modern languages, the natural sciences, the social sciences, has had to engage in a life-and-death struggle with those who conceive mental discipline, mental muscle, mental power to be the objective of higher education.

Most of our institutions for women, however, have been founded with the thought in mind of supplying culture. Women were not supposed to be intellectually capable of pursuing the more drastic intellectual subjects, and consequently education had to be somewhat adulterated for their benefit. It is certainly amusing to read some of the earlier discussions with reference to the intellectual ineptitude and inability of the feminine mind. Those of us who are now engaged in the work of higher education have been disillusioned. For now, not only in college, but in graduate and professional schools as well, the question is, Are men able to keep up with the women in scholarship?

This, however, is somewhat afield from recognizing culture as an objective in education. There are those who still seem to think that culture is something that can be imparted from the outside. We know now that culture is the outshining of our personality in action; that it is not a veneer put on from the outside, but a spiritual expression of the inner life through conduct. Books on etiquette fifty years ago had a tremendous sale, but now it is a rare thing even that such a book is published. We have achieved the ability to differentiate between culture and culturine. We know that the genuine article arises as a by-product of the life laboratory of high thinking and righteous living.

We are beginning to feel dissatisfied with all three of these major objectives of higher education, and I would not be surprised if we should ultimately arrive at the conclusion that a real objective for educational development is to be found in the insight and understanding which the pursuit of higher learning offers the student. Not the fund of information we can obtain, not the intellectual power we may be possessed of, not the culture that may shine forth in our conduct, but the ability to meet a situation, to sense its issues, and to understand its involvements—this is certainly a goal toward which higher education should lead.

There have been so many business disasters following the war, causing hardship and suffering to untold numbers of persons that could have been avoided if those who, having the confidence of their fellow-men, acquired also the right to use the accumulated savings of these friends, had really understood the economic consequences that always follow a war. This is what I mean by understanding, the ability to sense a situation, to value its issues and to be prepared for its crises. There were, however, in this country and in the world, a small group of economic leaders who understood thoroughly what to expect. They have succeeded inevitably in making a profit as a consequence of the nightmare of the war. They prepared themselves for the impending crisis, and when it came they went forward to places of command and leadership in finance. The college experience should yield this insight, this understanding of which I speak.

RANDLEMAN.

Our revival at Randleman Christian Church began September 21, 1930, and closed October 5th, with Rev. M. C. Connor, of High Point, doing the preaching from the very first service. The attendance and interest was unusually good. It was said by many to be the best-attended and most interesting revival held there in some years. Bro. Connor brought messages that were applicable to every walk in life, and that demonstrated the gospel as the power of God unto every one that would believe and accept it. Fathers and mothers, sons and brothers came to the altar seeking Jesus Christ and crying out, "What shall we do to be saved?" The Holy Spirit was working among the congregation at all services, and scarcely was a service held without some finding Christ precious to their souls. Especially was the co-operation and presence of the other five Churches of Randleman unexcelled. I believe the spirit of the revival was taken into the lives of all who attended these services.

There were forty-nine conversions and reconsecrations, a number of these being received into the Christian Church; others to go to some other Church. As pastor of the Christian Church of Randleman, I appreciate the work of Bro. Connor in these services more than words can tell, and also the united spirit of the other Churches, as I feel that this revival is a means of drawing us, as brethren in Christ, to a more efficient and effective step toward a united effort to save souls through the leadership of the Spirit of Christ, and that we can better understand one another as different branches of the Church.

An effort is being made by the pastor and leaders of the Church to finance the Church through tithing. We now have several members who are giving their tithes unto the Lord as commanded of Him. We are hoping to bring the number of tithers during next Conference year up to at least fifteen or twenty. Having that as our goal, we are praying the Lord to lead us, and direct our work in such a way that this will be truly realized. Knowing that if a Church gives as the good Lord has prospered it, that blessings to overflow our hearts will be received as promised, brethren pray for us that we may do as the Lord bids, and prove Him by bringing into the Church our tithes.

M. A. POLLARD.

WENTWORTH.

If ever a pastor had a better people to serve than the Church of Wentworth, I know not where it could be. The harmony that exists there is wonderful. The unity of spirit is excellent, and if all do not pull together it would be difficult to find a Church that did. I have never seen a smoother working Sunday School than here, under the leadership of Bruce Brown. The school is in excellent shape, with good enrollment, and the Church congregations have not dropped off as it has in many places.

It is the easiest Church to raise money of any I have ever served, in proportion to membership. We have less than eighty members, but if one will watch the monthly offerings to the Orphanage it will be seen that this Church is doing more in this respect than many much stronger.

The proportional part asked for missions is paid each year before Conference, and I cannot recall a time in fifteen years when the pastor's salary was not paid before Conference, and most of the time an addition made to the amount promised.

For twelve years this Church has pounded the pastor annually, and that on the October appointment. One can see by this act something of regular and fixed work of this Church. An appointment is never missed because of bad weather, which is something unusual in a country Church.

May our Lord richly bless them for the good things recently received and prosper our labors together as may please Him. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity" (Psa. 133:1).

J. LEE JOHNSON.

VANCEVILLE.

We have a faithful group under the leadership of Mrs. H. W. Allen, Marion, La., who for the past eight years have sent their quarterly report to our Vanceville Sunday School, Tifton, Ga. Out of their membership of twenty-five, there are seven on the honor roll for the entire year—Mrs. Vernie McCormick, Mrs. H. W. Allen, Miss Docia Turner, Miss Gertie Mae Allen, Miss Beatrice Canterbery, Mr. Keith Allen, and Durelle Allen.

Mrs. Allen is doing a good work. Pray that the Lord may bless her and may she live to see great results from her labor. We organized a home department again in Georgia last October, and now have a membership of thirty-four, five of which are on the honor roll for the year—Mrs. Fannie Hand, Mrs. Ernie Carpenter and little daughter Edith, Mrs. Cora Hightower and little son Lanell.

The home department paid to the school this year $22.16, and these fifty-nine members have studied most of the lessons, and very, very few of them ever attend Sunday School. Some of our members have moved away, and they study these lessons and send their reports by mail; others are mothers who cannot go, but they teach the lessons to their children at home. One mother, a farmer's wife, has no conveyance to attend Sunday School and is too far away to walk, and how happy it makes us to go into her home and see the interest she and five younger children take in the Sunday School lessons. We also have her little daughter on our Sunday School cradle roll. We have some aged members who are not able to attend Sunday School.

FLORIDA ASSOCIATION.

The three associations of Florida will hold their annual meetings around the first of November, and the plans and dates are as follows: The Southeast Coast Association will be held October 28th, with the Church at Lake Worth, of which Dr. Lillian B. Fulton is the minister; the South Association will meet November 4-5, with the Church at Sanford, of which Rev. John Bernard Root is minister; and the East Coast Association will meet November 5-6, with the Church at Melbourne, of which Dr. George L. Hanscom is the minister. This latter Church will entertain the aessociation in a building so completely rebuilt as to seem like an entirely new Church.

In each of the associations the promotion of the plan of advance and the larger undertakings of the denomination will be stressed. It is expected that these associations will be well attended and will stimulate interest in the program of the Churches for the winter season.

Our business in life is not to get ahead of other people, but to get ahead of ourselves.—Babcock.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(October.)

Mighty Master of mankind, how marvelous is Thy power to enfold and hold. We thank Thee that human abnegation is strength divine; that looking, leaning, loving, self-loss only is gain. We pray Thee, Father, stay our minds, compel our bodies, seal our beings. O God of mercy, hold us close, keeping Thou our feet to the lowly path by which to grow the soul must strive for others. For Jesus' sake, that the world may live and not die, bring Thou the Church under the suffering of His cross. This day, each day, more burden our plea, more grace, O God, to unburden to Thee. In our Saviour's name. Amen.

A PAGE OF MISSION HISTORY.

(Note: At the first meeting of the united Congregational and Christian Mission in Japan, held at Arima, May 28, 1930, Dr. Woodworth, of the Christian Mission, read the following paper, which is printed by request. Because of the historical value of both the paper and the meeting at which it was read, we are sure it will be of interest to all our readers.—Editor.)

In the days of my boyhood, there still lingered among the denominations remnants of the great conflicts which the doughty champions of truth used to prove their own orthodoxy and the heterodoxy of their neighbors. The debates on eternal punishment, infant baptism, immersion, and the futility of creeds and denominations were quite the common thing. My old home, which was a preacher's home, was often visited by one of our Church leaders in these debates in which he greatly delighted. Of course, some of these debates led to such bitterness that denominations were rent in sunder, leading to the formation of new bodies which did not call themselves denominations, but were made so by the logic of events. As you know, I was born into one of these denominations, but under other surroundings I might as well have been a Methodist, a Lutheran or a Mormon.

Of the early men of the Church who stood on a platform which made Christian character the basis of fellowship, there were many who were unlettered. Not a few of them taught that the preacher needed no education, and should preach the gospel without pay.

Thus it happened when our Church awoke from its long sleep and proposed to send a missionary to a foreign land, there was not a single volunteer in sight. Under the circumstances, an advertisement was put in the Herald of Gospel Liberty, and was answered by a man of North Carolina named David F. Jones. This man proposed to come to Japan for two hundred dollars a year. He knew nothing of Japan, but the secretary who sent him out was equally ignorant of the land. The salary of Bro. Jones was increased, but the salary of the mission secretary was little better.

Bro. Jones desired to be sent to the neediest place in the empire, and soon found his way to Ishinomaki, not far from the city of Sendai. He was one of the most indefatigable missionaries that ever came to Japan. He preached nearly every night himself, and so arranged the schedules of his helpers as to place each one at some point five nights in the week, giving them two nights for rest. As the rents in those days were only one or two dollars a month, and Bro. Jones took the cheapest hotels, where a night's lodging cost from twenty to thirty cents, he was able, with little money, to cover a large territory. So there was hardly a village or hamlet in that whole region which he did not touch. He built a Church at Ishinomaki for $225, and that included the price of the land. He built a parsonage for $75, and these buildings were not so bad.

But this good brother had his limitations. He was an autocrat and would allow no gatherings of his preachers, lest they should plot against his authority. He expurgated the Herald of Gospel Liberty before passing it on to his English-reading helpers, lest they should be led astray by false doctrine. He was a Cockney born, putting an "h" where it should not be and leaving it off where it ought to be. When things did not go right, he said, "We must halter them." He could never make the slight distinction between the words for charcoal and sin. In consequence, he was always telling the Japanese if they did not get rid of their bad charcoal, they would go somewhere.

But this man, in spite of any weaknesses he may have had, practically set the bounds of our mission. I think only six places have been opened which he did not begin.

His faith in the verbal inspiration of the English version of the Bible was unique. But he made converts and baptized them meticulously by immersion; any other kind being absolutely worthless. It may be seen that he was obsessed with the absolute correctness of his orthodoxy, a failing to which some of the rest of us might plead guilty. So when I came to Japan six years after he came, and had views somewhat different from his concerning the verbal inspiration of the English version, he felt a call to go to China, where he had always wanted to work. He went, and became a colporteur for the American Bible Society under Dr. Hykes. There was no end to his zeal and activity. As to the language, he could do no more than show the book and tell the price. As the book was large and the price cheap, the Chinaman conceived the idea that he might sell it again at a profit, and bought it. Dr. Hykes admitted to me, when I chaffed him about it, that that was the true psychology of the Chinese mind at that time.

I was in the home of Bro. Jones, in Shanghai, when his wife, Amelia, was in good health. Later she failed in health and returned to America, seeking recovery. As she did not improve, and realizing that the end of life was not far off, she returned to China to be with her husband at the final parting. She died, but Bro. Jones was far out in the interior, his location unknown, so that no means of communication could reach him. In consequence, he did not know of her death until six weeks after the sad event occurred. Bro. Jones had become a Plymouth Brother in Shanghai. As there was another family of the same faith in the city, the missionaries thought this family might desire to give Sister Jones a Plymouth Brother funeral. But when the head of the house was approached in regard to the matter, he strongly affirmed that the views of Bro. Jones in regard to the Bible were all wrong and he would have nothing to do with the burial. So the missionaries buried her the best they could.

Bro. Jones left China and worked on the docks of San Francisco to make a living. Mrs. Woodworth and I visited them twice as we passed through that city, for he had married his first wife's sister. But he was still a preacher. When I proposed to go with him to one of his meetings, he demurred, fearing lest some heresy should creep into the flock.

Whatever his weaknesses, there is no doubt but he was a Spirit-filled man. Judging by the deep religious impression he made on the Japanese, I would count the short six years in Japan as years of remarkable results. If a man is a blazing torch for righteousness, he is bound to set something on fire. He was a little man, insignificant in personal appearance, but he was burning and shining. If he made mistakes, he never denied his Lord, and never wanted to call down fire from heaven to burn up a town. One is reminded of the humbling, yet inspiring passage in 1 Cor. 2: "For ye see your calling, brethren,how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many noble are called. But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the earth to confound the mighty; and base things of the world and things that are despised, hath God chosen; yea, and things that are not, to bring to naught the things that are. That no flesh should glory in His presence."

If all the missionaries who have come to this land had been of the Jones type, having his authority and financial conditions being the same, I suspect there is not a town in Japan which would not have heard the gospel story. Fortunately or unfortunately, we are not like him, and are glad we are not, but he is an example of what a man may do who has a limitless faith and zeal for preaching Christ and His gospel. Sometimes when my own zeal has seemed to flag, the thought of Bro. Jones has come as a rebuke.

The Japanese say that all the missionaries are ordinary men. Be it so. It is largely through the influence of such people as we that there has come forward the army of noble and earnest Japanese pastors who so ably preach Christ and His great salvation.

Two years ago it was my privilege to hear an address by Dr. William Elliot Griffith who, about fifty years before that time, had been in Japan. He tells how Dr. Hepburn, the first medical doctor to Japan, had left a practice of $13,000 a year to receive one thousand as a missionary; how he used to see the heads of a hundred people set up on poles as a warning to evil-doers; how all the faces of the adults were scarred by smallpox! how the mothers brought their babies, sightless because of smallpox, to Dr. Hepburn in the hope that he might restore their sight; how at that time no one wanted to risk his life by becoming a Christian when the edict against Christians was in full force; how there was not a Christian nor a school in the land. But after fifty years he comes again and finds great Christian schools, great independent Churches, the Christian religion with its 300,000 members put on an equality with Buddhism with its sixty millions adherents. And besides these, the great Japanese leaders who would be a credit to any Church in any land. So it was he who said that if a magician had waved his magic wand over this fair land during this period of half a century, the results could not have been more wonderful.

And is it not still true as it was of old when the disciples went everywhere preaching the Word, the Lord working with them and confirming the Word with signs that followed? This is the high honor which we have that the Lord, who has made us co-workers with Himself, is saying to us as He did to Paul at Corinth: "Be not afraid, but speak, for I am with thee and no man shall set upon thee to hurt."—Mission Herald.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

Please permit us to again call your attention to the Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference, to its splendid service, its vision for the future, and to its needs, its dependence upon you for its continuation, under God.

Are you praying for it? Are you sacrificing for it? Are you going to make this the best year the association has known? We believe that you will (Phil. 1:6).

Remember our annual meeting will be held in December, and preparations are being made for a great session. What will your contribution be? "Not because I desire a gift; but I desire fruit that may abound to your account" (Phil. 4:17).

We are asking that every Church in the Eastern Virginia Conference become a member of this organization. The annual dues are only $10.00. "That in everything ye are enriched by Him (Christ Jesus), so that you come behind in no gift" (1 Cor. 1:5-7). That membership be increased throughout the entire Conference. You are a steward of God, and what is required of God's stewards? "It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful" (1 Cor. 4:2). As we think upon the faithfulness of God toward us, through Christ Jesus, the mercies which are ours through the blood of the everlasting covenant, may we not fail Him in behalf of this association, thereby bringing shame to our souls and grief to the blessed Holy Spirit of grace. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption" (Eph. 4:30).

J. O. Atkinson, Sec'y.

REV. H. W. ELDER.

Some weeks ago, at the close of an evening service, Dr. J. W. Manning said to me, "Did you know that H. W. Elder is dead?" This was distressing news to me and came as a distinct shock. When I left for the summer I thought he was doing very well. I knew that he was in a critical condition, but we are always hoping for the best for our friends.

The Christian Church has never in all of its history had a more zealous, a more consecrated, or a more sacrificial member than was H. W. Elder. His Church was always first. He never spared anything—his health, his strength, his money, his all were always for his Church. In the truest sense, his body was on the altar as a living sacrifice. For him, no night was too dark, no hour too cold, no task too difficult when once he had heard the call of Christ and of duty. Day in and day out throughout the years he was serving with a zeal and a passion akin to that of the Apostle Paul himself. He literally burned his life out for the Church and the kingdom. The blessings of the Lord were upon him and upon his labors. As a result of his ministry, thousands of men, women and children were brought to Christ, nearly a score of Churches were organized, and more than a score of Church buildings were erected.

It was through his ministry that I first gave my life to Christ and the Church. To him I confided my call to the ministry, and it was he who consecrated me to the task. For more than a year I lived in his home as a member of the family. He was a father to me in the beginning of my ministry and was true to the end.

The Churches in Georgia and Alabama and throughout the entire denomination will greatly miss this good man of God. His memory will live and his influence will last. May the Lord bless and comfort his children, his brothers and his relations.

"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

TEMPERANCE SUNDAY.

Next Sunday, October 26th, is "World's Temperance Sunday." The subject of the Sunday School lesson in some of the quarterlies is "Making Prohibition Effective and Permanent." I like that; it's definite and to the point. Let us hope that on that day, or as soon thereafter as possible, every pastor will preach a sermon that will ring clear on this very vital subject. Why not have members of the Sunday School sign pledges following the teaching of the lesson. Nothing like getting the boys and girls to definitely commit themselves early in life. Many of us older ones look back to the time we signed the pledge in the temperance society as the beginning of our activities against the liquor business. We haven't been making as much of temperance Sunday in the Sunday School during the past ten years as we should. That's the main reason why we have this fight on now by the liquor forces.

Let's make the most of Sunday, October 26th.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson V—November 2, 1930.

Simon Peter.

Golden Text: "How when they beheld the boldness of Peter and John, and had perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marveled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus."—Acts 4:13.

Lesson: Mark 8:27-29; Luke 22:31-34; John 18:25-27; John 21:15-17.

In spite of all that can be said, one feels that Jesus was different from us, even if He did live in the flesh. And when we think about Paul, we instinctively feel that he was especially gifted, far above ordinary folks like us. But when we think about Simon Peter we are on the common ground of ordinary humanity. There is no wide gulf between him and us. We see in him a reflection as of ourselves in a mirror. And because of this fact, because he was so much like us, we get all the more inspiration by virtue of what he became. Perhaps nowhere else is there portrayed more vividly just what Jesus can do with ordinary folks. Nowhere else do we see more clearly the possibilities of human life when it is touched by Jesus. For it was Simon, the unlearned and uncouth, the quick, impulsive, self-confident, presumptuous and narrow man, who became refined and well trained, courageous, humble, liberal and loving. He who had been vacillating became a "rock." He who had denied his Lord became the one who was leader in his Lord's cause.

When one undertakes to make a character study of Simon Peter in the brief compass of a lesson or comments on the lesson like this, he can only touch the high spots. Perhaps the best way is simply to discuss briefly some of the outstanding incidents in Peter's life.

Peter's Call.

Jesus called Simon Peter while he was busy at his tasks. This rough and ready, out-door fisherman recognized in Jesus his Master. He forsook all and followed Jesus. There was something in the man that responded to the best when the best called. That willingness is one of the first and the most important qualifications for discipleship. God can do wonders with us as He did with Simon Peter, if, like him, we obey the call to the highest.

Peter's Confession.

When Jesus put the great question to His disciples as to who he was, it was Simon Peter who replied, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." This unlearned man, according to the educational standards of that day, had a discerning heart. He saw in Jesus something more than a mere man or a mighty prophet. He saw in Him the "Anointed One," the Christ of God. His reply shows that his heart was responsive to the impulse of the Divine Spirit, for Jesus Himself said that flesh and blood had not revealed that great truth to Him, but the Father which is in heaven. Alas, for the man whose knowledge and learning has blinded him to the supreme fact of Jesus Christ, His person and His work!

Peter's Companionship with Jesus.

There was something promising in this fellow, Simon Peter, for on three occasions Jesus admitted him into that intimate inner circle of three, while the others were excluded. Peter, with James and John, was present at the raising of Jairus' daughter, on the Mount of Transfiguration, and in Gethsemane. This was not a case of favoritism; it was a case of fitness. Jesus knew that Simon Peter had tremendous possibilities for spiritual things, even though they had not come to full development.

Peter's Confidence in Himself.

How self-confident he was! Whatever else others might do, he was sure of himself. He would never deny his Lord. But he did deny his Lord. Let us learn from this incident the truth that when we feel most confident in our own strength we need most the help of God. And who is there of us who has not done the very thing that Simon Peter did?

Peter's Courage.

It was Peter, with his characteristic impetuousness and abandon, who started to fight when the mob came to take Jesus, and who actually cut off the ear of the servant of the high priest. It is quite likely that Peter aimed to cut off his head, for he was just the kind of fellow who would have fought the issue out even if the odds were hopelessly against him. But alas! like so many of us, Peter, though lacking nothing in physical courage, lacked moral courage. In the stress of conflict he could and would fight, but in the quieter mood and under subtle temptation, he denied His Lord.

Peter's Common Sense.

Peter's common sense is nowhere more strikingly shown than in his attitude toward and his action in connection with his failure and his sin. Judas went out and hanged himself. Peter, who had done something just about as bad, when every thing is taken into consideration, refused to be "licked" by his failure. He repented of his sins. He sought another chance. He made up his mind to win at the very point where he had lost. Simon Peter ought to be an inspiration to us at this point. The difference in men is not in the fact that some make failures and some do not, but in the attitude men take toward their failures.

Peter's Commission.

Jesus gave Peter another chance. He always gives another chance. And He commissioned Peter to "feed His lambs, tend His sheep, feed His sheep." It was a commission to look after the interests of the work and the welfare of the group of believers, which was the nucleus of the early Church. How well Peter kept the faith, the early chapters of Acts and traditions tell us.

Peter's Growth.

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Tradition has it that Peter became a martyr. It also has it that when he learned that he was to be crucified, he asked that he be crucified with his head down—he did not feel worthy to be crucified like his Lord. In any event, Simon Peter's name has been made immortal, and in the world of the spirit he shall shine as the stars forever.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic: "Why Support the Eighteenth Amendment? How?"

Scripture Reading: Prov. 20:1, 23:29-32.

Some thoughts and gleanings of the topic, beginning with the—

Quiet Hour Meditations.

Monday (Rom. 13:1-5): Rulers are to be obeyed (verse 3). We should be subject to rulers "for conscience sake" (verse 5).

Tuesday (Rom. 13:10-14): Love is the fulfilling of the law. "But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provisions for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof."

Wednesday (Rom. 14:19-23): Save the weak. Those who are mentally and morally weak do not have as great temptation to drink as they did in pre-prohibition days. Therefore, the wives and little children of such are, in a way, protected from want and other cruelties of the drunken husband and father.

The reason why so many people are calling for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment is that they are not strong enough to say "No" to liquor. What such people need is more faith in themselves and strength enough to say "Yes" to the right thing. "Hast thou faith? Have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth."

Thursday (Rev. 20:1-3): Do you prefer bootlegging today or the saloons of yesterday? Women and children can be on the streets today in comparative safety. They could not in saloon days.

Friday (2 Cor. 6:14-18): Christians are not to weaken because they hear a great deal of talk in favor of the repeal of the amendment which brought about prohibition. They should not be "unequally yoked together with unbelievers." God is to be with us if we stand true for what we believe. But if we waver and half-way agree with the liquor element, how can He give us the blessing of victory?

Saturday (2 Cor. 17:1-6): Citizens may create enough sentiment to cause officers to enforce the laws.

Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, the man who went to the Senate "to work to make America dry," and who has been the leading figure in this great fight, in summing up the result of prohibition after ten years, says: "During this period the American people have made more progress in three fundamental phases of human welfare, to-wit: savings, life insurance and home-building, than in all the 131 years of this republic before the advent of prohibition. So far as the great majority of the American people are concerned, they have traded the smaller liberty to drink intoxicants and to get drunk, for the larger liberty to acquire homes, to save against misfortune and old age, to clothe and nourish their families in decency and comfort."

Henry Ford says: "If we want liquor again, we will have to give up our automobiles and go back to horses and buggies, because automobiles won't go straight unless they are driven straight, and they don't know the way home. The Ford Motor Company, wherever it operates, is on a prohibition basis. We could not run any other way. It is more important that the workmen in our industries should get home sober and with their week's pay than that an irresponsible minority of society drinkers should be guaranteed the 'right' to stock their cellars without embarrassment."

J. G. Penny remarks: "It is my belief, as a business man, that sound business sense dictates support of prohibition. If I were not for the eighteenth amendment on moral grounds, I would be for it on business grounds. Since national prohibition, our business has increased many times over. This increase cannot all be credited to prohibition. But it is the almost unanimous testimony of our store managers that a very large part of the gain has come from the spending by the wives and mothers of these communities money that the husbands and fathers formerly spent over the bars."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

OUR LIVING HOPE OF GLORY.

"I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which should be revealed in us."—Rom. 8:18-23.

Nowhere in the Bible is it promised that Christians shall be free from suffering. In fact, it appears that children of God must suffer. Our souls are fettered in the flesh, and the flesh is full of infirmity. By reason of this, responsibilities and burdens weigh heavy; visions and understanding are limited; we are riveted to one spot on the earth and we are tremmeled by enemies of righteousness; the sins of others, as well as our own sins bring us to sickness, sorrow and poverty. In fact, everything that sin can bring.

But our lesson says that our "expectation waiteth for the manifestation of the Son of God." He that endureth to the end shall wear the crown of life. To be faithful and loyal and true, to "endure as a good soldier," means that, beyond it all, the soul will develop all its faculties unhindered by the flesh and will have dominion over all things. It means that it shall be as pure as the angels of heaven. It means that it shall see all things more clearly and be like Him (Jesus). It means that all creation shall be regenerated, renewed and glorified on that day when all earthly things pass away and "behold all things are new."

Prayer.—Give us, O God, a sure and living hope. In all of life's expreiences, help us to look forward to the glory of heaven, and rejoice in the midst of all suffering. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A CHRISTIAN'S HARDEST LESSON.

"Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also."—Matt. 5:38-48.

Jesus not only taught this and gave it as one of the characteristic traits of Christian living, but He explained it by example in His own life when He was in the house of Caiaphas. "If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; but if well, why smitest thou me?"

It is our Christian duty to deal with our enemies, as well as with our friends, in a manner whcih serves God's interest best, even if it is contrary to our inclinatıcns. Of what account is a quarrel compared to the value of the soul? And two sculs are involved in a quarrel. We bear in our bodies the marks of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is our promise to be careful to wrong no man and to guard against doing that which may aid others to do wrong. "Let no man put a stumbling-block, or an occasion to fall, in his brother's way."

This is a matter which requires great earnestness and self-denial. It might be that a good "licking" would do an offender good. It might not be best to let him "get away" with his meanness. At the same time, we have to prove our sincerity as a Christian, and this may be the very test of our Christianity and self-sacrificing spirit. We must not forget also that charitable impulses in the heart, like the tree springing from its seed, is followed by the corresponding act, and that it can never fail to come to the surface. To take upon ourselves trouble in order to serve those who may persecute us, is hard, but it is good, it is merciful, it is liberty, it is the strong and the honored way; for that which ministers to the wants of others is true greatness. None but Jesus has ever taught this, and none but those who live at His feet may achieve it.

Prayer.—We heartily pray Thee, O Lord, to give us Thy love in our hearts and let our whole lives be in love. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ASHAMED OF OURSELVES.

"When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me, for I am a sinful man."—Luke 5:1-11.

The way of salvation is in the way of humility, penitence and trust in God, from the beginning to the end. To toil all the night and take nothing, and then to be fed with the bread of life and have their boat filled with fishes, seemed to be a part of God's plans to make the disciples realize this truth and thus better prepare them for the responsibilities which were to fall upon them in the winning of souls and in the building up of the Church. It had the desired effect, for Peter became ashamed of himself for his lack of faith and bowed himself down and confessed it.

"At the Lord's word." Isn't that a good motto for us in the doing of things? It is the same thing Christ's mother, Mary, had said do—"Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it." This is a principle of the kingdom which is to be obeyed, whether one be a magistrate, or a teacher, or master, or servant, or whether one is to get anything out of it or not; yes, even though it seems useless. Lend the Lord your ship and He will fill it.

Prayer.—Dear Father, give us the grace to say from the bottom of our hearts, "Lord, at Thy word, we will do it." Take from us all carnal self-confidences and give us a lowly, child-like faith, and make use of us for the furtherance of Thy kingdom. Amen.

THURSDAY.

LOVING LIFE AND GETTING HEAVEN OUT OF IT.

"He that would love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil."—1 Peter 3:10.

"Whoso findeth me, findeth life and shall obtain mercy."—Psa. 8:35.

"If ye will enter into life, keep my commandments."—Matt. 19:17.

In an humble, consecrated soul, joy increases in the things of this life. The greatest joys of life come out of a sense of purity of heart, a security of the ultimate, and through a service to the necessities of others—making others happy. One can enter into all of the natural God-given life of this world and, carrying the above attributes with him, find the greatest joys and happiness.

Prayer.—Dear Lord and God and Father, give us now the mind and strength of Thy Holy Spirit. Give us pure and loving minds and let us, in all our conduct, please Thee, and make us a blessing to mankind. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HEARING AND KNOWING GOD.

"I know a house in which my Savour dweills: His holy Church, the city of God."—Psa. 45:5.

In the lesson above, John describes his first meeting with Jesus. Upon meeting Him, he said, "Behold the Lamb of God." The word was passed along and others followed suit. The only invitation he extended to them was, "Come and see." And as they came and saw and heard His voice, they knew it was the Son of God.

But we—where shall we hear the voice of God? Where shall we find Him? How shall we know Him, so that we can say we have seen Him and that veritably He is the Son of God? "Come and see." Find the place where the Saviour dwells. And blessed is the man who approaches Him, for he shall dwell in His courts and be satisfied (Psa. 65:4).

Do not stand off, holding thyself aloof and criticise. History teaches that to those who have come humbly and earnestly, there has never been but one answer, and that answer is the same that Peter gave, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." This truth is the rock of salvation forever.

Prayer.—Blessed be Thy name, O Lord Jesus. Draw us to Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE EVERLASTING CHURCH.

"Upon this rock will I build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16:13-19.

The "New Thought Society" of the present day is trying to say that religion, the Bible and the Church is a colossal lie. It only takes a few newborn souls to prove the whole "new thought" mess a paltry stroke of the devil. Christianity and the Church have not been created in loose opinions and dry forgeries, but it has been created in a positive conviction and experience in the Almighty love of the eternal living one. By Him the soul is moved to give itself to Him in life and in death. As truth is immovable, the Church stands immovable against all the powers of hell.

The Church is having a hard time these days. It has always had a hard time. There are enemies within its gates. There are disloyal children, and few there be that find the way; but there is no doubt that it will weather every storm, however violent it may be. The sword of temporal power and the pen of mighty intellects are alike powerless in their attack on the camp of God. "God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early" (Psa. 46:5). And by the grace of the Spirit, we also shall remain in the camp. If the enemy could gain control of our conscience, we would be undone; but in Jesus we walk in the light of God. Our duty is that when we feel the venomous fangs of the serpent, we must make use of the power which the Lord has given us, and experience the quickening of the Blessed Spirit.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, give us the light of Thy Spirit, that we may believe in Thee unto righteousness and confess Thee unto salvation. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A WEAK MAN MADE STRONG.

"Go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say . . . and I will teach thee what thou shalt do."—Ex. 4:10-15.

This was God's promise to Moses. The result of Moses' trust in the promise was his later life as liberator of Israel. It was this same trust that made David the psalmist. It made Peter and Paul apostles. It made Elijah the voice of the Lord to Israel. It made Mary the mother of Jesus. It made Eunice the teacher of Timothy. It made Mark, Luke and John evangelists. It made Paul the giant of the apostolic Church. It made Luther a reformer. It matters not who one may be, trust in God disposes of life in such a way that he becomes a master. It directs the course of life to a place where God would have one go, and it gives a certainty that one has been appointed to His work.

Prayer.—Grant, O Lord, that we may see Thee, hear Thy voice, and know Thee, and know the certainty of Thy way. Forgive us of all of our faithlessness and draw us to Thee forever. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

Rev. Joseph W. Fix, Preacher.

REVERENCE.

"Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." —Ex. 3:5.

A half-truth is harder to down than a whole error. Many high-minded people who would stoutly oppose a saying that is manifestly erroneous are easily deceived by the plausibility of half-truths. Among the half-truths that have worked no little injury to our spiritual appreciations is the oft-repeated statement that our old distinctions between things sacred and things secular are false. All of this, we are told, is a bit of pietism that has no place in a world where God is imminent. It is dinned into our ears from pulpit and platform and press that all things are sacred and that it were high time we were getting rid of our imaginary distinctions. "The ballot box is as sacred as the Communion table," a certain minister made bold to say.

There is a sense in which all things are sacred. God is everywhere. "If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy right hand lead me." All things are God's. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof." God's universal presence and ownership give a touch of sanctity to the whole of His creation and to all of man's engagements—one's daily vocation, his pleasures, his fellowships, and his most trivial duties.

But one must not be hasty to conclude from this that life is on a dead level and that all things are equally sacred. In the matter of sanctity there is an ascending scale. The nearer one approaches the things that are associated with the vital concerns of the human heart—its joy, its agony, its need, its aspirations—the holier is the ground on which he stands. A home is more sacred than a shop. A grave is holier than a garden. A Church is dearer to an awakened heart than a town hall. Moses, alone with his sheep on the slopes of Horeb, was no doubt impressed with the presence of God in nature. But when he heard God speaking to him directly out of the burning bush, and concerning his heart's interest and his life's mission, that spot became holier than any place on earth. He needs must take his shoes from his feet.

Every one who has a sense of spiritual values, approaches the places and things of the heart with a chastened, restrained spirit. This is reverence. It is the mark of spiritual culture. In the realm of the spiritual, it is what good manners are in refined society. And not only is it a mark of spiritual culture; it is also a requisite for spiritual perception. The deeper things of God and the soul are hidden from the irreverent. Not a little of our spiritual dullness is a result of our loose familiarity with holy things—the Church, and worship, and the Bible, and the sanctities of the Christian faith. Fools may rush in where angels fear to tread, but fools do not see the wonders that are plain to angels' eyes.—Walking with God, by C. J. Harrell, Norfolk, Va.

THE FIGHT AGAINST PROHIBITION.

II.

By Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein

Pastor People's Church, Dover, Del.

The fight against prohibition expresses a heartless and an unsocial attitude of mind. It ignores the purpose and objective of prohibition, to make it impossible for the man to get drink who is unable to resist the temptation; to take the temptation of drink away from youth; to remove the stench of the saloon from the nostrils of society; to protect the interests of the home where fathers squandered their pay check for drink at the corner saloon instead of spending it for food and clothing; to promote efficiency by sobriety among the industrial classes; to make life safer for all against the menace of drunkenness—in short, to wipe out the curse of the licensed liquor traffic with all its multiplicity of evils. The prohibition reform is a social reform purely in the interest of society. And the fight against prohibition is thus an unsocial attempt to oppose the welfare of society for selfish purposes. The wets declare that their opposition to prohibition is based on its failure to make conditions better than were those it sought to remedy under the saloon regime.

But the benefit prohibition has been cannot fail to be appreciated by all who are unbiased in their judgment and who wish to see. Drunkenness has decreased more than 80 per cent. The savings accounts of the working-classes have grown almost uncredibly. The enemies of prohibition blame the present unemployment problem on prohibition, quite forgetting that in the past the unemployment problem, such as that of 1892, in the days of the saloon, was far more baffling. Facts are stubborn things, and the facts are on the side of the friends of prohibition.

Compare conditions today in your own city and community with what they were in the days of the saloon. In those days, women and children did not dare to go on the public streets alone on Saturday night because of the nuisance of drunkenness—fist fights, shooting scrapes, with their accompanying deluge of profanity.

There are more than fifteen million school children in America today who have never seen a licensed saloon, simply because of what prohibition has done. The United States government, moreover, is no longer participant in the crime of making drunkards. Prohibition has made the liquor business an outlaw, and thereby given it its proper classification.

Certainly no one is satisfied with the accomplishments of prohibition. But its friends are thankful for what prohibition has done; whereas, its enemies are mad because prohibition has done so much. It is preposterous for the wets to prate about the short-comings of prohibition. Why should people who want more liquor complain about there being too much liquor? They complain one day about there being too much liquor, saying that the prohibition law is a dead letter, and the next day they complain about the prohibition law being too drastic. They say one day that they can get all the liquor they want any time they want it, and the next day they say the prohibition law infringes upon their rights, denying them a personal liberty to which they are entitled. "O consistency, thou art a jewel!" Note this: The people who prayed and worked and sacrificed to give our nation prohibition are still supporting prohibition, whereas the same people who opposed this reform at the time it was effected are the ones who are fighting for its repeal.

Certainly the friends of prohibition are not satisfied with what it has done, but they have faith in its objective and in its possibilities. Neither are any of us satisfied with what the Churches are doing. But who would contend that because of this failure the Churches should be closed? Not less prohibition, but more prohibition is what America needs. And if the enemies of prohibition were sincere in deploring the bootlegging situation they could put the bootleggers out of business in less than three months by stopping patronizing them. The people who break the law are the only ones who can stop the bootlegging by stopping breaking the law.

Heretofore, we have put all the blame on the bootlegger for the violation of the prohibition law, when the fact of the matter is the man who makes an illicit purchase of liquor is even more guilty than the man who makes the illicit sale, because he is responsible for encouraging the bootlegger in his unlawful business, and moreover he makes the bootlegger's unlawful business possible. Both offenders should be punished by the law, for both are enemies of the law.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We trust that our Sunday School and Churches will begin to plan now for a liberal Thanksgiving offering. The Christian Orphanage needs ten thousand dollars for its Thanksgiving offering this year, in order to meet its outstanding bills and buy shoes and clothes for the winter for its one hundred and eight children.

We cannot believe that our Church members would be willing for our little children to shiver in the cold for the want of good, warm, comfortable clothes or go hungry for the want of food this winter.

How are they to have these things if you do not send us the money with which to buy them? If some one in each Church and Sunday School will form an organization and get everybody to work and interested, you will succeed beyond your expectation. I dare say that in every Church and Sunday School there are members who are able and willing to give $10.00, some $5.00, some $1.00, or perhaps more, if some worker who is interested in the Thanksgiving offering would but go to see them and tell them that you want to raise a splendid Thanksgiving offering this year because the Christian Orphanage is in need. I knew a little four-year-old girl in a certain town a few years ago who would go uptown with her mother and while the mother did her shopping this little girl was asking people to give her a donation to help the little children at the Christian Orphanage, and it was a joy to them to help her. She made them happy because she gave them an opportunity to help the fatherless. They made her happy because they helped her to swell the amount to send the orphanage. The little four-year-old girl sent us fifteen dollars in the name of her Sunday School and was happy because she was helping others. We have many little boys and girls in our Sunday Schools who could do the same. Plan for your offering and then work to your plan. But somebody must take the lead!

THE GUEST BOOK.

The heads of the united Churches in China and in South India, the Rev. Dr. Ch'eng Ching-yi and John V. Chelliah, are among twenty-eight distinctive missionary workers whose activities will be the subject-matter for reading in over 250,000 Congregational and Christian homes during the four weeks beginning Monday, October 13, 1930, and ending Sunday, November 9th.

The activities of each of the twenty-eight missionary workers furnishes the subject-matter of the reading for one day when he will be a "guest" in all the homes. The demand for the "Guest Book," the publication containing the stories about the workers, has exhausted an initial edition of 225,000, and supplementary editions of 31,000 have been printed. A similar "Guest Book" was first used last year, when an edition of 200,000 was exhausted before the time to begin the reading arrived. The "Guest Book" is published by the denomination's Commission on Missions, the workers being selected on account of their distinctive achievements. Twelve in the 1930 book are workers in foreign countries and sixteen in this country. They were selected from 9,000 full-time employed workers.

Sixteen denominations are merged in the Church of Christ in China, of which Dr. Ch'eng Ching-yi (last name in Chinese style being first) is moderator. Its communicant membership of 160,000 comprises one-third of the Protestant communicants in China. Dr. Ch'eng is also secretary of the National Christian Council of China, in which nearly all the Protestant bodies are represented. The council has mapped a program for a five-year forward movement to start next year.

Mr. Chelliah is moderator of the South India United Church, in which four denominations are merged. Negotiations looking to a larger merger with other bodies, including the Anglican, are in process. Mr. Chelliah is vice-principal of Jaffna College, Ceylon.

A third foreign national among the twenty-eight workers is an Armenian, Lout Levonian, professor in the school of religion, Athens, Greece, and a fellow of Pembrook College, England.

Jennie F. Pratt, a social worker and kindergarten teacher of Italian parentage at the immigrant station, Ellis Island, New York City, is among the missionary workers selected from this country. Others from this country include the Rev. Dr. George W. Nash, president of the Yankton College, South Dakota; Rev. Paul Leeds, for thirty-seven years a worker among Indians at Kinder, La., and Rev. Wilbur I. Bull, organizer and pastor of united or "larger" parishes among the rural Churches of Maine.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

WHAT IS RELIGIOUS EDUCATION? By A. J. William Myers. National Sunday School Union; $1.00; pp. 112.

Dr. Myers, in this book, as in his "Teaching Religion," has the conviction that the curriculum is properly the experience of the learner in terms of the racial experience, but he lacks the courage of his conviction. He speaks of the pulpit's experience as the unifying factor, but he is content with saying that "the curriculum attempts to present life situations." Why present, if that is what we begin with? Again he says, the curriculum should conduct the "pupil step by step through the typical and significant experiences of his own life." The hands are Esau's hands, but the voice is Jacob's voice. The curriculum is the pupils' experience or it is not; that is to say, it is experience-centered or material-centered. It can't be both nor a compromise.

JESUS PRAYS. By Walter E. Bundy. Bobbs-Merrill Co.; $1.50; pp. 121.

Dr. Bundy has recently published two books—"The Religion of Jesus" and "Our Recovery of Jesus." The sections of these books on "Jesus and Prayer" have attracted such wide interest that in this third book the author has collected those comments and revised them. Here is a book that sanely presents the prayer life of one who was in constant fellowship with God. You will lay it down with two convictions: that prayer is natural to the soul, and that it is not to be scheduled. It is a book you will read more than once.

THE NEW HYMNAL FOR AMERICAN YOUTH. By Augustine Smith. The Century Co.; $1.55 each, $85 per 100; pp. 368.

This book is a revision of the "Hymnal for American Youth. It is an advance over the former book in the larger provision it includes. The material for worship is derived from biblical and extra-biblical prose and poetry. The responses, the unison readings, the prayers, the litanies, and calls to worship are all most satisfactory, and add greatly to the book's value. Those who are acquainted with H. Augustine Smith's former work will find this book especially valuable and far in advance even of his former excellent productions.

PILGRIM AND PIONEER. By John M. Canse. Abingdon; $2; pp. 306.

The centennial celebration of the opening up of the great Pacific Northwest is at hand, and this book is written in connection with this celebration. The book tells the story not only of the evangelism of the Indians of the Oregon territory, but the laying of the foundation of a Christian Commonwealth there. It is a scholarly piece of work, well conceived and well executed.

A UNIQUE SCHOOL.

Winona Lake, Ind., is the location of one of America's unique theological schools, featuring summer sessions only, where ministers, teachers, and laymen meet for a period of two semesters of three weeks each during the summer.

This school maintains a very high standard of scholarship, is interdenominational, and is thoroughly evangelical in all its teaching. Work given is applicable to the theological degree of B. D., M. A. (in theology), and Th.B. for such as have the prerequisites.

The faculty for the 1930 session included Dr. A. T. Robertson, of Louisville Theological Seminary; Dr. John A. Faulkner, of Drew Theological Seminary; Dr. Leander S. Keyser, of Hamma Divinity School; Dr. A. T. Howard, of bonebrake Theological Seminary, and the dean, Dr. J. A. Huffman.

Courses were given in English New Testament, religious education, Church history, comparative religions, and theology.

At the close of the summer session, a commencement was held, at which six men received theological degrees. The graduates represented four States. Officers of Winona Lake School of Theology are C. E. Sawtelle, president; W. E. Biederwolf, A. M., director; J. A. Huffman, D. D., dean.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGRETATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

MOSLEY.

Lillie Mae Mosley was born June 7, 1892, and died September 22, 1930. She was first married to Waverly Holland Twisdale, and to this union two children were born. After the death of Mr. Twisdale, she was married to Robert Grief Lynch, and one child came to bless the union. After losing her second husband she became Mrs Albert Griffin Mosley.

She first became a member of Prospect Methodist Church, and later transferred to Antioch Christian Church. Mrs. Mosley had been in ill health for many years. Those who have known her through these years are confident that she came to know Him and the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His sufferings, for her last words were those of triumph and joy: "I am going home to Jesus."

R. L. HOUSE.

KNIGHT.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, who doeth all things well, to take from our midst our brother and pastor, Rev. J. W. Knight, to his home and reward above, we, the board of deacons of Mt. Bethel Christian Church, pass these resolutions to his memory. We do hereby resolve:

1. That his presence among us will surely be missed, and his place in our Church and community will be hard to refill, and our sympathy goes to his beloved family.

2. That his guiding hand and influence, even though gone, will still remain with us in memory and his works will continue to live and be among us.

3. That our Sunday School will surely miss his presence and influence.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Church and Sunday School records, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy to The Christian Sun and Reidsville Review for publication.

UNEMPLOYED SUFFERING.—

For the first time, the total of Germany's unemployed has passed the three-million mark; the total now being 3,088,000 who are out of work. Of this, something less than 2,000,000 receive some form of unemployment insurance, while the rest are obliged to shift for themselves. Social workers predict that there will be much suffering during the winter. This condition is natural in the wake of war, and until the troubled waters of society have settled back to pre-war conditions in the economic world, we cannot expect a normal situation in employment. The teachings of the price of peace apply to States and nations as well as to individuals.

RED CROSS ON WAR.—

At the recent meeting of the International Red Cross in Brussels, the officials declared that another war, if it should come, will inevitably involve all the nations of the world. "Modern methods of fighting," they say, "and particularly by airplanes and gas offensives, will immediately imperil the non-combatant nations and force their participation in the conflict." The Christian forces of the world should mobilize all their moral, religious, and financial resources to prevent another war. It would cost less financially, less in human effort, less in human life, less in suffering, and leave in its wake happiness and joy and human life unmolested.

MYSTICAL RELIGION.—

Under the auspices of the Confraternity of the Mystical Life, in New York City, this month, at the Friends' meeting-house, there was held a Congress for the discussion of the mystical element in religion. Prof. Rufus M. Jones, Prof. James B. Pratt, Prof. Harry A. Overstreet, Rabbi Samuel Schulman, Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, Rev. Herbert Parrish and Gerald Stanley Lee were the speakers. Among the subjects discussed are "Mysticism and the Philosophies," "The Evolution of Higher Personality," "The Physical Technique of Prayer," "The Renaissance of Mysticism," "The God of Mystical Experience" and "Islamic Mysticism." It must have a great meeting with such great scholars and religionists at its head in discussion of such a great theme which is the soul of Christianity. The greatest book on this subject is "Mysticism and Christianity," by Angus.

CHINA'S RULER CHRISTIAN.—

President Chiang Kai-Shek of China has been converted to Christianity and baptized by Rev. Z. T. Kuang in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The officiating minister is a graduate of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Mission University at Soochow. The mission's headquarters is at Nashville, Tenn. China's generalissimo is a youthful ruler, and said that he felt the need of a God such as Jesus Christ. His conversion was a distinct surprise to Shanghai. Only a few intimates, mostly relatives, attended the ceremonies after the chief came from Nanking. Christian circles heralded the baptism with great joy and said it struck a blow at Communism. It will doubtless have a wholesome influence over the National party, which opposes any form of religious teaching in the schools. His wife, his mother-in-law, and other members of his family have been devout Christians for some years, and their influence is supposed to have turned him to Christianity.

LIVE LONGER.—

The famous Rochester, Minn., surgeon, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, has raised the question before the physicians, "What is the use of making it possible for man to be able to live until ninety if his brain dies at seventy?" Dr. Mayo thinks that medical science must teach old people how to live so that their brains will continue to function for the years added to the lives of their bodies. He thinks it is possible that man's life-span may soon be increased to ninety. In India, the life-span average is twenty; in America, it is fifty; but in the seventeenth century it was only twenty here. The greatest barrier to increasing the life-span to ninety is that no cure has been found for cancer, but the best minds in medical science are turning to the study of this subject. Psychologists and neurologists may devote their attention to the prevention of senility and increase the mental span. Christianity applied throughout life would increase the life-span of both body and mind.

OUT OF THE CELLAR.—

"Apparently our architects have hope of developing out of the Gothic a new type of building which will be distinctly American. Many people will be cheered by the news that unless a Church occupies very expensive land, or is perched on a hillside, it is more economical to spread out over the lot rather than to burrow in the ground with a basement. Ecclesiastical cellars are going out of style. It was disclosed that Church building boards were sometimes willing to assist in financing ecclesiastical monstrosities which had been condemned by the architectural bureaus of the same denominations. Some one suggested that the boards were afraid that these Churches might say, 'If you do not help us with our building project, we will keep our missionary money at home.' "—Christian Century.

It will not only be a great saving in cost of building, but a greater convenience to the congregation, more in keeping with the style of modern building for Churches, and better adapted to the needs of a modern program of religious education to have buildings constructed with the floor space on one level.

WAR IN BRAZIL.—

Brazil is considerably larger than the United States in territory, with a population of some 42,000,000, is in a state of civil war. Rebel armies advancing out of the south have captured several important cities and a major engagement on a 200-mile battleline seems imminent. Leaders of the Brazilian revolution declare that their purpose is to prevent the inauguration of President-elect Prestes, to overthrow the present President Luis and his entire administration, to set up a provisional government, dissolve Congress, establish law and order under a provisional government, and then hold new elections adequately protected against fraud. Bad economic conditions, undue authority exercised by the President, and unemployment are thought to be the cause of the uprising. Twenty-seven million bags of the 1929 crop of coffee and 24,000,000 bags of the 1930 crop remain unsold. The price of coffee has been reduced. Seventy-five per cent of Brazilian coffee is sold in the United States. It is estimated that foreign capital is invested to the extent of $2,500,000,000 in Brazil. No man liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. We are all members one of another. When one suffers, all suffer because the whole world is interdependent.

FORUM ON RELIGION.—

In Philadelphia, at the Friends' meeting-house, Dr. Jesse H. Holmes, of the philosophy department at Swarthmore college, was the first speaker at a religious forum. Prof. Brand Branshard spoke on "Is Belief Necessary?" Later Dr. H. J. Cadbury, of Bryn Mawr College, spoke on "What History Teaches About Religion." The last speaker of the month will be Dr. John A. Miller, astronomist of Swarthmore, whose topic will be "Religion Through a Telescope." This year the general subject has been divided into six sections: "Modern Religion and Science," "Modern Religion and Industrial Relations," "Modern Religion and the Problems of Youth," "Modern Religion and the Citizen's Responsibility," "Modern Religion and Law," and "Modern Religion and Human Brotherhood."

Such forums and discussions are in keeping with the trend of present-day religious thinkers. Never before since Christianity was introduced into the world has there been more thought given to religion than is being given at this time. This is a good omen. Christianity has nothing to lose by investigation, discussion, and study by the great thinkers of the age, but everything to gain. It does not fear the light, for it is itself light, and there is no darkness in it at all.

NOTES-PERSONALS

This is Conference month, and the Churches and pastors are busy finishing the year's work and beginning anew.

Dr. L. E. Smith was a visitor at the office of THE SUN for a short while on Monday of this week. We are always glad to have him with us.

Dr. C. H. Rowland, for the past ten days, has been assisting the pastor, Rev. J. H. Dollar, at Reidsville in a series of very largely attended and successful evangelistic meetings.

Dr. W. A. Harper and Mr. S. C. Heindel, who has recently become associated with the committee in charge of the Elon Million-Dollar Campaign, were visitors in Richmond on Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Heindel made a short talk to the Sunday School of the Richmond Church, and Dr. Harper addressed the congregation at the regular morning service.

THE SUN editor, after attending the annual General Mission Board meeting at Dayton, Ohio, went to the meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, in session at Madison, Wis. After January 1, 1931, these two boards will be one in promoting and administering all our foreign mission work. After January 1st, Dr. W. P. Minton, who has been our Foreign Mission Secretary, at Dayton, will become one of the secretaries of the Commission on Missions. Suddenly, we Christians find ourselves, with our Congregational allies, responsible for missionaries and mission work in many lands.

NOTICE.

The North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference meets at Long's Chapel, Alamance County, N. C., on Tuesday after the second Sunday in November. Those contemplating attending the Conference will please notify the undersigned, P. H. Fleming, Burlington, N. C., and state when they expect to arrive and if they will come by automobile or train, and if they will want entertainment. The committee on entertainment would like to have names of those coming and make home assignments before the Conference meets. Those coming by train will be met at Haw River, N. C., any time during the day, if they will notify us when they will arrive. Long's Chapel is on route No. 62. Please let us hear from you.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

MIAMI SHORES, FLA.: This Church has invited Rev. Francis D. White, of Robbinsdale, Minn., to its pastorate, and Mrs. White expects to begin their service with this Church on November 1st. They will be royally welcomed by the people of the Church.

TRYON, N. C.: The Erskine Memorial Church is blessed with the thoughtful preaching, devout spirit and strong leadership of Rev. John Brittan Clark, D. D. Dr. Clark gives a generous share of his time to missionary service in the State and is a real inspiration to all his brother-ministers in the region. He has returned to his Church after a summer vacation spent in the North.

GEORGIA STATE CONFERENCE was held with the Macedonia Church, October 27-29. Beginning Monday evening, the sermon was preached by Dr. William T. McElveen, of Atlanta, Ga. Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, of Washington, D. C., was present throughout the meeting. Dr. Neil McQuarrie led the devotions at each session except Tuesday night when Dr. Mowbray, of Piedmont College, had charge. Dr. D. Witherspoon Dodge preached the sermon at the closing session Wednesday morning.

INTERRACIAL SEMINAR: With other States of the South, North Carolina and Georgia gives hearty welcome to the friends coming with Rev. Hubert Herring, of our Educational Society, on the "Interracial Seminar," visiting many of our cities during November. The complete itinerary is as follows: Washington, D. C., November 11; Hampton Institute, 12; Raleigh, N. C., 13; Atlanta, Ga., 14-15; Talladega, Ala., 16; Tuskegee, Ala., 17; Montgomery, Ala., 18; Birmingham, Ala., 19, and Nashville, Tenn., 20-21.

ROLLINS COLLEGE: The student body at Rollins this year is very cosmopolitan. There are sixteen foreign students from fourteen other countries. The one hundred and seventy members of the freshman class came from twenty-four different States, and the sixty transferred to the upper classes came from forty-four different institutions. There are four hundred and nineteen students entered this year, after turning away more than one hundred qualified applicants. The college finds itself obliged to limit its enrollment and it has adopted as a permanent policy the limiting of its student body.

KEY WEST: Rev. E. Richard Evans, the pastor, writes: "In my sermonizing I am trying to give the people what they need; I am not a popular preacher. I mean in the presentation of my subjects through the daily paper. During the last three months I have had to compete with such sermons as 'In the Lap of a Woman,' 'Heaven-Hell,' 'Crowing Rooster,' 'The Four Aspects of the Ass,' etc. Against them I am matching 'Jesus' Human Contacts,' 'Life-Giving Convictions,' 'Power of Association,' etc." These topics evidently appeal, for the average attendance for the evening services for the quarter was one hundred and seventy-nine.

SOUTHERN PINES, N. C.: Rev. Elmer Willis Serl, D. D., has returned to his service as pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship. This beautiful Church fills a large place in the life of this beautiful winter resort. Besides the dignified, worshipful service and the strong preaching by the pastor, there is the Sunday evening forum which fills a large place in the religious thinking of the community, and there is also educational uplift and community betterment through the Church school and the fine social service and young people's work; the latter especially along the lines of religious drama under the direction of the assistant minister, Rev. Ruth F. Sargeant.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C.: A recent movement of the "Men of the United Church," at Chapel Hill, is significant. It so happens that the pastor, Rev. B. J. Howard, finds it possible to engage in a good service outside the regular Church work, and the Church people have released him from the active pastoral visitation work while they still have the inspiration of his unusually strong pulpit services on Sundays. Realizing that visitation work in any Church is a vital necessity, the "Men of the Church" were called together by two of them —Mr. Tom Roseman and Mr. Grady Leonard. Twelve of them organized what they call "The Men of the United Church." Their first objective is to visit all members of the Church in a friendly way. The "Men of United Church" meet once a month and have dinner together and talk over conditions and needs and results and the future. Another advance step in the Chapel Hill Church is the fact that Prof. Raymond Adams, of the University of North Carolina, has been secured to teach the Men's Class of the Sunday School. The Sunday evening service of this Church is carried on as a student forum, in charge of a student worker, Mr. W. H. Kuralt.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE: The pastor-at-large, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, recently visited Piedmont College and found one of the finest groups of students there. He was the guest of Prof. and Mrs. C. L. Percy. Mrs. Percy is a brilliant teacher of Latin, French, German and Hebrew. President H. C. Newell is more than enthusiastic at the response given to his taking the presidency recently, and says the accommodations of the college are taxed to the limit. Twice as many students would come to Piedmont were there room for them. New buildings are needed and should be supplied. Mr. Sweet talked to a fine group of "World Service" students on Sunday night. It was an inspiring hour to see and hear this strong-minded, forward-looking body of young men and women. He also talked to the whole body of two hundred and forty-one students and faculty at the chapel services. President Newell and the college treasurer took Mr. Sweet over the farm. Here is the life of the treasurer. He is a great farmer. "Rather be the best farmer in the country than be President of the United States," he said. There were beautiful fields of all kinds of vegetables, grown for the college dining-rooms; also some wonderful hogs and cows, and they furnish meat and milk for the college life, so that it is being said the food of the Piedmont students is the best given any body of students in the land. A million dollars could be well invested in this institution.

BRASELTON, GA.: Macedonia Church entertained two hundred guests at its splendid home-coming, October 19th. This is a country Church on a main highway, first laid out by Andrew Jackson in the good old days of old. It is a beautiful site, with a school building just opposite on a sightly hill. Since this school building has been abandoned, the township unit system crowding it out, it is hoped and expected that the property, consisting of four acres, will come into the hands of the Church. In that case, the old building will be converted into a parsonage. At the home-coming, addresses were made by Mr. Braselton, a merchant of the village named for his father; by Mr. Taylor Cooper, an old and honored citizen, some eighty years of age; Dr. Allen, a young physician greatly beloved in all the region round about the Church, and others. Of course, the pastor, Prof. C. L. Percy, of Piedmont College, gave a most interesting and cordial welcome address. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Milo J. Sweet, guest-preacher for the occasion. It may be interesting to some to know that the Macedonia Church is one of a group of five Congregational Churches within a radius of about thirty miles. Three of these are being served by Prof. Percy, and the others by Rev. Carl Parker, at Duncan's Creek, near Buford, and Rev. Henry Eddleman, at Sardis Church, near Oxford. Taken together, this group of rural Churches serve a large community. Prof. Percy serves Trinity, near Duluth, and Liberty, near Bowman, besides Macedonia.

DR. PIERCE'S ANNIVERSARY.

This year marks the tenth anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. Jason Noble Pierce in the historic "Old First Church," at Washington, D. C. During this period, the membership standard has been maintained, the Church roll carefully revised, hundreds who had removed to other places influenced to take letters, and nearly 1,000 new members added. Benevolences have doubled, and the total for the ten years reached $74,199. The missionary program includes the entire support of the medical work at Lu Ho Hospital, Tunghsein, China, under the direction of Edward F. Parsons, M. D., and Marion Tucker, Parsons, R. N. A Congregational home for the aged was established in 1925 and is now housed in a beautiful property. First Church members gave $68,400 in cash and legacies, and then invited three other Congregational Churches to joint ownership. The building fund now amounts to $260,000, with $157,000 in reliable pledges yet to be paid in. The parish is divided into twenty-four districts, with an active committee in each. A weekly fellowship supper, followed by a prayer service around the tables, has a large attendance, and a preaching service at the close in the Church auditorium attracts capacity audiences. The vested choir of sixty, directed by Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl, not only has a large place in the life of the Church and city, but during the late spring gave a coast-to-coast broadcast over the Columbia broadcasting system. Dr. Pierce is known not only as preacher and pastor, but as one whose friendship touch reaches many lives, and his ministry includes the wider service of college engagements and missionary helpfulness.

THE PRAYER CYCLE.

The prayer cycle committee reports that there is an increasing interest in the cycle and that the subscription list has increased from eleven hundred last year to eighteen hundred and eighty this year. The aim is to bring into the daily prayer life of earnest Church members our world-wide program of service. Mrs. Charles H. Daniels is the editor of the "Cycle." We heartily recommend the use of this Prayer Cycle of World service, and those desiring to use it should write to the Commissions on Missions, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York. The "Cycle" is published quarterly for 25 cents per year, or 20 cents a year for five or more copies sent to one address.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XII.

S. S. Minnekahda, Monday, July 14, 1930.

Remained in my large, airy room and in bed till 11 A. M. They turned back our time-pieces thirty-six minutes this morning, which reminds us that we are more than three hundred miles out on the seas, facing the South and home. I had a good night's sleep and feel so much stronger this morning after tea in bed at 7 and breakfast at 8.

About 10 A. M. Dr. Smith and I were talking. A lady school teacher, a spinster of fifty summers, from Iowa, dropped in. Her face was frank and friendly and of good cheer. She said that while she faced the future alone, she felt confident, strong and hopeful. She had a breakdown last year and had been on the continent for the past ten months for her health. She had found it and was now happily on her way home to her work. The conversation turned on Churches. Her mother had been a member of the Christian Church, but had married a Methodist, and so she had known more of the Methodist than of the Christian Church. She declared that in her section of Iowa the Episcopalians occupied the highest social position; the Congregationalists came next; then the Baptists. But the "lower social" strata was the Methodist Episcopal Church, since it worked solely among the poor and the needy of all classes. She had the profoundest respect for the memory of John Wesley, and this respect had been increased since she had been in England, where she had seen a bronze statue of Wesley at Oxford; also at Westminster Abbey, and found paintings of him and his pictures in most of the art galleries of Europe. We talked about Church union, and she could not understand why Protestants of all denominations should not get together. Neither can I.

In the ship's library this morning, a lady, the wife of a minister, was lecturing on her trip just taken to the Holy Land. She said they showed her the rock that Moses struck and spoke to and out of which the water gushed. The stream still gushes from that rock, and below it is the town of Pedro, built in rocks hewed and watered by the stream that Moses struck. How much of this was history and how much tradition, she was not able to discern, but at any rate, the biblical incident has been preserved. She says that Jerusalem is fast becoming civilized, and if any of us in America wish to get local and ancient coloring we will have to visit the sacred city at an early date.

Dr. Smith is getting a wonderful and much-needed rest. Roy Helfenstein and I have been a care and a burden to him throughout this trip. Roy is left behind for some weeks in England, and I am convalescent and have to call upon him very little. So relaxation has come. He actually slept four hours yesterday afternoon, and then proceeded to take in all of last night and sleep through it without his conscience or his supper disturbing him. The poor fellow needs it, and sleep with this sweet, briny atmosphere will knit up his worn and weary nerves while he thanks the Lord that he is not burdened now as he has been heretofore.

The sea is very friendly today and rises and falls in graceful bulges, and our Minnekahda rides the lifts as gracefully and as graciously as a swan. The captain of this ship is more of a chaplain than a sailor and announced at the services today that we are all one big family and we must get acquainted with each other and enjoy the fellowship while we sail safely on the favorable and friendly Atlantic.

At 4:30 they served tea and cakes. This is English. The English stop for tea at 4 o'clock. We Americans go at it differently. Along about 4, most Americans go off to the drug store and get a soda or an ice-cold drink of some type. The English more sensibly all stop at the same time and take their hot tea. Any one may drop in and have a good social time. We are following the English custom on this ship, and at 4 we all drop in and have a social tea and good conversation and much table talk.

The sea is so calm today that it looks big and abundant, defiant and independent, self-assertive and so free. The soft blue of it is restful to the eye, and the wholesome, life-giving, health-restoring odor of the salt is sweet indeed. The sea is the cleansing-place of all of earth's impurities; the dumping-ground of its filth and debris, and yet, despite man's desecration of it, it is so managed and governed that it cheers the heart as well as restores the health and strength of man. As far as the eye can see, it is rested as it looks upon the big, breathing, boundless surface. God is very near one on the sea, because He has never allowed man to masquerade on the bosom of the sea or to desecrate it with any of his buildings. It's God's creation, unlet and unhindered by man.

They tell me that the lady physician who went over in our party and was taken ill with pneumonia the first day of her arrival in London, as I myself was, passed on and is being carried back a corpse. I recall having heard her give a lecture on health and how to keep the body in fit form as we were going over on the Adriatic for this trip. After all man's skill and learning, God, in His own good time, has His way with us.

We are now nearly one thousand miles out at sea and the journey is all that the eye could wish or the heart crave. No wonder people spend millions of dollars taking sea trips, for there is no tonic that thrills the body and flows through their tired and worn system like the atmosphere and the sight and the life on the sea. THE AMERICAN BOARD.

THE SUN editor has just returned from the meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches, at Madison, Wis., October 21-23. Through this board is established our new relationship to the various foreign missionary enterprises of the world. This was the 121st annual session of this, the oldest and most honorable mission board in the United States, the same being organized in 1810, and by whom were sent out the first missionaries of America to carry the gospel to the uttermost parts. The main purpose of this board has never been vague or doubtful. From its founding, it declared, "The object of this board is to devise, adopt, and prosecute ways and means for propagating the gospel among those who are destitute of the knowledge of Christianity." The board's first addresses to the Christian public sounded these notes of appeal: "Christ's last command, 'Go ye into all the earth'; His claim to the uttermost parts of the earth; the cruelty and the misery of heathendom; the vision of a renovated world." As the historian of the board has truly said, "The supreme incentive to the missionary devotion then was an aroused sense of vast multitudes of souls dead in trespasses and sin. The call that counted was the summons to rescue the perishing; the obligation that enforced the call was the knowledge of Christ." Under this impulse and inspiration, the first missionaries were sent out, and from that day till this good hour, the American Board has been gathering men and women in scores and hundreds, and money in thousands and millions, and sending them into all lands and countries to proclaim the gospel of hope and of light and of life. While the board has tugged away at its task and toiled and spent anxious hours in plans and pursuits, the story of its achievements reads like fiction, and the deeds and darings, as well as faith of many who went out, and of those on the board who were sending them out, constitute pages of romance and achievement such as is nowhere to be found except in the realms of missionary literature and undertaking. No student has read the most thrilling page of Christianity, and no Christian understands the dynamic of his own faith until he has read of the adventures of missionaries, many of whom counted their lives as nothing, if thereby they might make their Christ known to the world and carry the message of Him to those who are in darkness without Him. These are the true heroes of Christianity who dared the perils of sea, the dangers of hostile climates and peoples, that through them the light that gleams from the cross of their Lord might shine out in the dark places.

Our Foreign Mission Board meeting in Dayton, Ohio, annual session, October 14-17, spent the days in working out the detail of our new alignment and merger with the Congregationalists, and then insisted that Dr. Minton and myself go, as we had been invited, to the annual meeting of the American Board at Madison, Wis. We went. It was a great board meeting. Some 500 members and visitors from all parts of this and other countries were present, some forty missionaries retired or returned on furlough bringing messages of trial and triumph from Africa, Turkey, India, China, Japan, the Philippines, etc. The past year the board had spent more than $2,000,000 in their work abroad in their schools, where something like one hundred thousand pupils are enrolled in their medical, agricultural, evangelical mission stations where the uplift of the gospel is doing its steady but sure and permanent work. As one hears these reports from all lands and countries of the character of the work done by the missionaries, one realizes that here are those who are making straight the path of our Lord across the wilderness way, and are preparing for the day when He shall come again and claim as His own those who have been brought into His ever-enlarging and increasing kingdom.

The delegation from the Christian Church was welcomed with glad greetings ,as it was realized that after January 1, 1931, there would not be two administrative boards doing missionary work, separately and apart on the foreign field, but one, and that henceforth Congregationalists and Christians would share alike in sending out missionaries to the uttermost parts, and in helping support the gospel in Africa, in Asia, in India, and wherever the hundreds of workers under the auspices of the combined boards are seeking to uplift humanity and to share with others the joy of that gospel which alone is sufficient to redeem men and save them to the uttermost.

The first meeting of the American Board, history tells us, had five persons present, and they possibly constituted the majority of those interested in foreign missions, and these five discussed whether they should undertake so venturesome a thing as sending out missionaries to "heathen" lands.

After 120 years of such progress and achievement as is seldom to be found in the annals of mankind, 500 interested souls come together and, through prayer and counsel and united wisdom, seek to find out the will of God in carrying on work in every line of human endeavor in all parts of the world, a work motivated by the Spirit of Christ and intended to uplift the human race.

It was a joy and an inspiration to be in such a meeting, and some of the most thrilling discussions and addresses moved the audiences, numbering from 1,000 to 1,300 people, mightily in their zeal and determination to carry on, in the name of their Lord and for the sake of Him who alone is seriously bidding for the heart of the world and is able to touch and inspire the heart to unselfish living and to the realization of the glorious hope beyond. WOMEN AND MISSIONS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference held their eighteenth annual session in the Christian Temple, in Norfolk, on October 24, 1930. The meeting was called to order and presided over by the president, Mrs. James Monroe Harris (Mrs. M. L. Mryant), of Asheville, N. C. Mrs. Harris has been the efficient president for six years and her removal to Asheville is cause for deep regret on the part of the Conference.

Twnty-nine societies were represented and some 500 persons were present. There are 890 members of the 29 societies. The total collections for the year $7,290, and this was more than last year. This sum includes the woman's conference, young people's conference, Willing Workers and cradle roll societies. That sum means $607.50 per month by these groups, or $20 per day. It is a marvelous example of what women are doing and of what can be done by prayerful and persistent effort in the mission cause, and it is a good lesson for men and boys.

The day was crowded with interesting and inspiring reports, addresses, music, and plans for the coming year. Mrs. H. C. Caviness conducted the morning devotions; district superintendents made reports—Miss Louise Pittman for Wavely, Mrs. W. D. Harward for Franklin, Mrs. B. D Jones for Nansemond, and Mrs. H. C. Caviness for Norfolk. Mrs. W. H. Andrews delivered a sweet message on "Spiritual Life"; Mrs. O. S. Mills reported on life membership and memorials; Mrs. J. W. Fix as Conference editor; Mrs. R. T. Bradford for young people, and Mrs. F. M. Nelson for cradle roll. Report of treasurer, Mrs. W. V. Leathers, and on literature by Mrs. J. E. Cartwright in splendid ideas finely expressed.

The outstanding feature of the forenoon was the address on "Modern Miniatures," by Mrs. Ray Clarke Tillinghast, national mission worker, of New York City. The address covered a large field, vast information, and all in condensed form in a sincere, spiritual tone. She brought a message that emphasized missions and illustrated "Women and Missions." From the cradle to the end, women are giving their souls, their talents, their service and their money to the cause of missions.

The great dining-room of the Temple was crowded with near 500 who enjoyed the dinner provided by the ladies of the Church. The Christian Temple is a great hostess, and the Conference was a great body that enjoyed the dinner.

In the afternoon, Dr. L. E. Smith delivered a great address on "The Passion Play—A Witness," which he witnessed while in Europe during the summer. He gave its history, its purpose, and its spiritual value. The great congregation enjoyed his graphic description of that most wonderful religious drama.

In the absence of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Mr. J. M. Darden, his assistant, made an address, and at the close presented Mrs. Harris, the retiring president, with a twenty-dollar gold coin, as a personal gift, as an expression of his appreciation of her faithful and helpful service in the missionary work of the Conference.

Through Mrs. L. W. Stagg, the Conference presented Mrs. James Monroe Harris a silver pitcher as an expression of their appreciation of her faithful service for six years as president.

Mrs. R. T. Bradford was elected president; Mrs. O. M. Cockes, vice-president; Mrs. Ernest Beale, superintendent of young people's conference in place of Mrs. R. T. Bradford, who was promoted to the presidency of the Woman's Conference; Mrs. M. W. Jay, Conference editor in place of Mrs. J. W. Fix.

The beautiful memorial service for eleven members was conducted by Mrs. I. W. Johnson, with a solo, "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?" by Dr. I. W. Johnson, and a prayer by this writer.

The banners were presented, the minutes were read, and the closing prayer and benediction by Rev. H. C. Caviness. W. W. S.

SHALL THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT GO?

A newspaper man said to me the other day, "The eighteenth amendment is going. We are going to get it out of the Constitution." Was he right or wrong? The man who made this assertion claims to be a dry. But does not think the prohibition laws should be in effect because it takes away the personal liberty from the individual. He, together with many others of our honest citizens, are saying that prohibition is causing lots of folks to drink that would not otherwise do so. They also claim that this same law is causing many officers and violators of the law to be villed. Some of these people are honest in their thinking, but misinformed as to the facts and truth of the point at issue.

Was the newspaper man right when he said the eighteenth amendment is going? He was, unless the Christian forces of our land become more alert to the conditions as they now exist, and undertake to keep the public informed as to what the conditions really are. When we got the law passed, we felt as though the victory was won; consequently we have done little about the law since, and each year makes the liquor situation more acute. We are told by good authorities that there are 50,000 ex-saloon-keepers who are paying a dollar per month, or $600,000 annually, to spread propaganda against the eighteenth amendment. In addition to this, there are agents all over the country trying to get new members of the association so as to help finance the propaganda, and also to solicit the support in the ballot. It is also reported that the liquor and wine element of France is sending millions of dollars to this country every year to help bring the open saloon back. Through our newspapers we get the information that there is more drinking than there ever was before. If there was more drinking now than ever before, the whiskey element would not be very anxious to make it known, for drinking is what they want.

Such articles as have been published in favor of liquor, arguing that there is more drinking now than ever before and that more lives are being lost as a result of the prohibition law, are absolutely false. When the paper carries the statement that a few thousand lives were lost in the United States during the year of 1929 as a result of trying to enforce the prohibition law, many young girls and boys believe it, because they do not remember the old saloon days. They never realize that this is a small amount of loss of life as compared with the days of the open saloon. The annual loss of life in the United States as a result of drinking before the eighteenth amendment was passed was 60,000 drunkards and 60,000 women as prostitutes. The houses of ill-fame were run in connection with the open saloon. These facts are never mentioned along side a statement of an officer's death or some law violator's death which is played up in the newspaper.

There is further evidence to give us encouragement to keep fighting and show the wet newspaper-men that the eighteenth amendment is here to stay. The Literary Digest, in many of its articles and reports, has a tendency to cause the public to believe the wets are in the majority. But facts show conditions to be otherwise. I quote from our last Sunday School Quarterly, "Washington's Wet Preachers." While the wet press loudly brayed, the Literary Digest of May 3rd reported that the preachers of the District of Columbia had voted in its straw vote as follows: for enforcement, 42; modification, 48; repeal, 230. But some one doubted. As a result, the Washington Federation of Churches made an investigation. It appears that only 93 Washington preachers received ballots. Of these, 85 voted for enforcement, 8 for modification, none for repeal. Whereupon the Federation of Churches sent out its own questionnaire among 198 clergymen. Results: enforcement, 185; modification, 8; repeal, none." There have been wavered facts similar to the above stated and covering of the truth in the matter until honest people are made to believe that they are fighting a losing cause. It should be remembered that in every election that the dry vote has increased over the wet by a larger majority than at all former elections. The problem the Christian folks must face is: Will we allow the wet press to continue to make folks believe they are going to win out? J. E. M,

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginia Young People's Missionary Conference held its annual session in the Suffolk Christian Church on Tuesday evening, October 21, 1930. It was a great meeting, with about 500 present. Out of forty-seven Churches in the Conference, twenty-two were represented by delegates from their local missionary societies. The total number of delegates was 338, with probably 175 visitors. Two societies—Old Zion and Bethlehem—had 35 delegates present, and the average was 15. The total collections, $1,670—nearly $8.00 as an average for the 22 societies. The occasion was marked by reverence, interest and purpose. The meeting had the enthusiasm of youth, the judgment of maturity, and the experience of Christians. It was proof that young people are not growing worse, but a good witness to the improvement of youth in faith, consecration, liberality and loyalty to religious convictions.

From beginning to end of the meeting, the program kept alive real interest in questions touching upon vital subjects of the present day as "Salving Problems," led by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle and discussed by young people, as follows: What an appeal is there in missions; What is the best way to teach missions? Is there any difference between Christianity and Western civilization? How does foreign missions help the home Church? What is the greatest barrier to missions? What can young people do to help missions? Can you think of a better plan for foreign missions? Should we have denominations on the foreign field? What is a call to the mission service? These questions were all treated by young people in brief and sensible papers that showed deep interest and careful study.

The theme of the evening was, "Youth on the March." Devotional service was conducted by W. L. Cooper, of Norfolk; Mrs. R. T. Bradford delivered the message as superintendent; greeting by Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, of Durham, N. C.; recognition service by Miss Mary Lee Williams, president. The main address was delivered by Miss Annie Graham Rowland, of Burlington, N. C. Her subject was "Marching With the Youth of the World." Her outline of the subject was: (1) marching toward God; (2) marching toward peace; (3) marching to carry the name of Jesus to every creature. The address was illuminating and inspiring, and met a hearty response from the audience.

The societies from Old Zion and Bethlehem tied in attendance, each having 35 present, and Mrs. Harris presented the banner to them jointly for six months each. It goes to Old Zion the first six months and to Bethlehem the second six months.

If half the Churches with missionary groups of young people could produce such a meeting, what would be the size and the value of a meeting if all the Churches in the Conference had young people's missionary societies been represented in the annual meeting. The great thing, after all, is to get the young people in every Church to organize a missionary society and send delegates to the annual convention.

The Church of the future is in the young people of today, and "Youth on the March" means the army that will conquer the world for Christ and crown Him the Prince of Peace.

ELON LETTER.

In the ancient days, when it was necessary to persuade students to go to college before whole high school classes began to trek in that direction in response to the new fashion that has entered the arena, we argued that the college really prepared young people to be leaders. Seemingly, it did not occur to college administrators that this was an unworthy motive because intensely selfish and because it did not properly appreciate the personality of others. This argument was even more unworthy of these administrators when it was expressed in monetary terms. I read an article some years ago by a distinguished educator who pointed out just what the monetary value of each year spent in high school, each year spent in college, and each year spent in professional school would be, and he blazened it forth as a great inducement for entering college. It was a brazen instance of the American doctrine of "getting on." A college education was declared to have a cash surrender value of $72,000. Materialism had possessed the citadel of the intellect in the case of this educator at least.

And then came the "Encyclopedia of American Biography," published by the Appletons, shortly to be succeeded by "Who's Who" and the other lists of leaders in the several callings and professions. Each of these publications was studied by college administrators to find what percentage of those who were considered eligible for listing in these Halls of Fame, so to speak, had enjoyed the advantage of college training. A study was made of the intellectual preparation of Presidents of the United States, of Governors of States, of members of Congress, of judges of supreme courts, and it was discovered, greatly to the joy and satisfaction of these administrators, that in a great majority of cases those who stood at the top in the several callings and professions had had the glorious advantage of a college education. In 1922-'23, for example, 63.67 per cent of those listed in "Who's Who" were college graduates, and 77.36 per cent had had some college training. There is small doubt that the influx of students that has literally stampeded the college in our day owes its original impulse to this most unworthy, because very selfish, objective.

It was not within the province of these college administrators who were endeavoring to create a social milieu, making it seem imperative for a young man who wished to be a leader to enjoy the college experience to state the whole truth with reference to the situation. The whole truth would have led these investigators to say that the most promising young people in each generation—those who wished to lead and to get along in life—had not been content with the educational opportunities offered in the public school, but had gone forth into the colleges, university or professional schools. And they should have also stated in the interest of truthfulness that some of these potential leaders had not shown themselves to be leaders at all, even after they had enjoyed this leadership-producing experience. We know now that only one college graduate in forty has ever been listed in any one of these catalogs of achievement and distinction to which reference has been made. What has happened to the other 39? That query these gentlemen have never answered.

However, progress is sometimes made in spite of the unworthy motive that is offered for an undertaking, and while we very much regret that it was necessary to offer selfishness as the basis of inducing young people to enter college, we can rejoice now when going to college has become the fashion that we can sublimate this selfish motivation and redirect the young people who are actually experiencing college today, so that service and not selfishness should become their actuating principle in life.

Two words to conjure with in modern educational procedure are "adjustment" and "orientation." We are taught that education should "adjust" the youth to his social environment, so that the points of friction between his ideals and the ideals of the world should be reduced to the vanishing point, and that he may accordingly be made to fit comfortably and happily into the life and ideals of the times.

Some educators do not approve this adjustment process because, in their judgment, it savors too much of bolstering up the status quo. They have not forgotten that a proper respect for personality should lead us not to say to a college student, "You should adjust yourself to life," but rather, "You should orientate yourself in the social order." Consequently, we find in college catalogs orientation courses which are designed to harmonize and integrate the several fields of knowledge into a consistent whole and so to effect the "at-homeness" of the students in the whole realm of knowledge. Some of these orientation courses also are designed to make the student feel at home in the larger social order, socially, vocationally and spiritually. It is naturally presumed that the student would rather be orientated than adjusted, but the ultimate goal in either case may be identical. Orientation oftentimes becomes adjustment anesthetically administered.

REV. G. D. HUNT'S LETTER.

Our Conference met Tuesday, October 14th, at Noon Day Church. We had a fine Conference, indeed. We had about 45 representatives from the Congregational brotherhood. Our two Conferences in the State decided to unite, and the two bodies became one on Wednesday, at about 2:30 P. M. A constitution and by-laws were adopted unanimously by both Conferences. The united body will meet next year at Phoenix City, Ala., on the second Tuesday in November. Our cause now in the State of Alabama numbers about 4,700 members. We have about 73 Churches and about 60 ministers. We have a high school at Thorsby, Ala., and a junior college at Wadley, Ala., worth about $150,000. Our Church property should be worth, I think, approximately one hundred thousand dollars.

Our work, both in Christian and Congregational Churches, has been greatly enlarged and strengthened by this union. The officers elected for the ensuing year are: Moderator, Rev. G. D. Hunt; assistant moderator, Rev. Samuel Long; superintendent, Dr. D. P. Ensminger (he is also treasurer of benevolences); associate superintendent and general evangelist, Rev. G. D. Hunt. I do not just now recall the names of the executive committee and delegates to the General Council.

It seems to me that we have made a great move in the realm of Christian union. Nothing like this has before occurred in the State of Alabama. I am trusting God to bless the movement.

G. D. Hunt.

Readers of The Sun who attended school at Elon around the years of 1905 or 1906, and those who knew him later, will read with regret of the death of Dr. L. F. Johnson. Dr. Johnson passed to his reward on the 13th of this month, after having given the past thirty years to the work of the Church.

WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD.

The Woman's Mission Board of the Christian Church has been unusually active this year, but with less satisfactory financial results than formerly. This condition is attributed in part to the general financial depression, and perhaps in larger part to the uncertainty due to the transition period through which we are passing.

The Woman's Board, as a corporate body, has been sympathetic with the union of the two denominations and has prayed continually and worked for the day when the two shall be actually one new body.

The Woman's Board, however, as an incorporated body, has felt a responsibility for that which has been committed to it, and has sought direction in the new way of adventure, hoping to conserve what is worthy of continuance in the new life and to carry into the merger the confidence and sympathy and real joy of the constituency in our women's work.

We have visited as many as possible of the Conference, State and regional groups in an effort to stabilize the efforts of our own women and to explain to the women of the Congregational group the position in which we find ourselves—an incorporated body, with holdings, with a past or bright and tender memories, and with a vision of greater possibilities in the future, but with no corresponding organization in the new group with which to merge.

Since it would mean the actual dissolution of the time-honored Woman's Mission Board if the women of the Christian Church should assume the same position as that held by the Congregational women, and since that would involve legal proceedings besides the consent of the women of our constituency, should that dissolution be brought to pass, the Woman's Board has seen only one way of procedure and has advocated that, viz: to proceed according to our adopted plans and policies, but with greater zeal.

Meantime, we are actually entering into the closest union with the Congregational women of the State of Ohio, and we hope to so work out a plan of procedure that the experience of Ohio women may serve as a suggestion to other States. Our first Ohio State meeting of women will occur November 5-7th, in Medina, and it is named "the first meeting of the Woman's Department of Missions of the Ohio Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches." There are six members of the Christian Church on the program. A constitution, worked out by eight women, four from each group, will be presented for adoption at this meeting. This constitution has already been approved by all groups concerned. A joint committee on nominations has named women of the Christian Church as well as of the Congregational to fill the offices.

For the most part, the spirit of the women of the Congregational Church has been generous and Christ-like. Doubtless they have a variety, as do we of the Christian Church. The Woman's Board cannot vouch for the Christian conduct of all of our own constituency, but in the main the spirit and co-operation of the women of both groups is delightful. At a recent meeting of representatives of both groups, it was decided unanimously that common loyalty would require our women to continue to send their finances through the established channels at least until January 1st, when it is expected that there will be a consummation of the merger.

According to the original article of agreement of the two uniting bodies, the matter of the Woman's Board was left for the Woman's Board to decide for themselves. Instead of taking it wholly upon ourselves to determine our future, we have consulted and advised with men and women from both groups. Thus far, no one has given us advice to do anything different from our present procedure, so we have sought to carry on with a widened program of education and in every way possible to keep our minds and hearts set upon the same objects as those of the women of the Congregational Church.

This is rather difficult for the Woman's Mission Board, since no two States work alike in the Congregational Church, and even in the States the Churches are so congregational that there is really no unified program. As a national board, we have always sought to develop a program of service and education which has paralleled and emphasized the general program of the Christian Church, using our Church publications for this purpose supplemented by any leaflets and printing that seemed to be necessary to the proper understanding, and therefore support, of this program.

This year our educational program is based on the new work in our widened horizon, using the fine literature prepared by our Mission Secretaries, "Our Church and Its Widening Horizon" and "The Dawn of a New Day," supplemented by our thrilling "Guest Book." For our devotions, we are using services prepared by Ruth Isabel Seabury, one of the missionary field secretaries of the Congregational Church. The comment on this program made by a group of Congregational women was, "Careful use of that program will certainly hasten the intelligent merger of our two denominations." This same group adopted our program and are using it themselves.

We appreciate suggestions and advice. Please rest assured that your Woman's Board has really agonized in prayer and study to find a way out of a difficult situation without loss to the kingdom either through a hasty letting go of labor and responsibility or through continuing an organization which has served its time and is inadequate to the present day.

We shall be happy to decrease if thereby the kingdom may increase. But will it? God only knows, and may He lead our women to do His will!

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(October.)

Mighty Master of mankind, how marvelous is Thy power to enfold and hold. We thank Thee that human abnegation is strength divine; that looking, leaning, loving, self-loss only is gain. We pray Thee, Father, stay our minds, compel our bodies, seal our beings. O God of mercy, hold us close, keeping Thou our feet to the lowly path by which to grow the soul must strive for others. For Jesus' sake, that the world may live and not die, bring Thou the Church under the suffering of His cross. This day, each day, more burden our plea, more grace, O God, to unburden to Thee. In our Saviour's name. Amen.

EXCERPTS FROM ANNUAL REPORTS.

By Rev. D. P. Barrett.

(Parts of the annual report.)

The thirtieth year of my uninterrupted service in the mission field is rapidly coming to a close. I used to think thirty years was a long space in a life-time, but these years have passed rapidly and with their passing, opportunities for service have increased. This year has no doubt been one of the busiest I have spent in Porto Rico.

In September, 1929, Rev. Aquino Ojeda, who had served as pastor of the Ponce Church for some years, resigned the pastorate to return to his former work of colporter. Because of the financial conditions of the board, the salary for a full-time pastor was not available for Ponce, and the board requested me to become acting pastor. In order to do this, it became necessary to give up a large part of the work I had been doing in Arus, Descalabrado, and Playita, and also the frequent visits to all points in our field.

I began my pastorate work of Ponce in October, 1929. My first consideration has been the local Church, but I have necessarily had to divide my time. In order to attend to urgent calls from the field, I am indebted to the Methodist and the United Brethren of Ponce, who have kindly supplied for me in my absence. In overseeing the local work and the work of the field in general, I have driven the mission car on an average of a thousand miles per month.

I have in charge, in addition to the Ponce Church, three other points, namely: Clausells, Arus, and Playita. Until her furlough, Miss Adams had charge of the young people's work in Ponce and sponsored to a certain extent that of Santa Isabel and Salinas. Dona Delfina Zayas gives all her time to the Ponce work, while in Arus Miss Teresa Vega and Don Marcelino Colon give part of their time. Since Miss Vega spends about three days each week working in Arus, she gets $15.00 a month, while Don Marceline Colon, who takes charge of Sunday services, gets $10.00 a month.

My daily program is, as a rule, the following: On Monday I visit the members of the congregation, help the sick and relieve the needy; on Monday evening I teach the class of candidates for Church membership. The class is held in Ponce and Arus alternately. In Ponce, during the last year, there have been twenty-five candidates, ten of whom have become members; in Arus there have been sixteen candidates, ten of whom have joined Church. Each candidate attends the classes for about three months, or until he has gained sufficient knowledge concerning the Bible, the significance of baptism, and of Communion, and of the Church life as a whole. Each second Monday of the month the Interdenominational Ministerial Association of Ponce meets and discusses their work and its problems, their new projects, etc.

On Tuesday I visit in the barrio Clausells, and then preach in the evening. Every first Tuesday of the month in Santa Isabel we have the regular business meeting of all of the workers of our denomination.

Wednesday is known as mail day, for that is the only day in the week mail leaves for the United States. In the evening I hold the regular Bible study and prayer meeting services in the local Church.

On Thursday more regular visiting is done, for the people are poor and they need help many times. The evening is given over to young people's activities in Clausells. Sometimes there is a short sermon for them; other times stories are prepared and told by the children and young people themselves. After we study the Christian Endeavor topic, we have a song service, in which the children learn new songs. Our services this night at Clausells are always interesting.

On Friday evening I divide my time between the Ponce and the Arus Christian Endeavors. Since Arus has no regular pastor, I more often visit and help them.

Saturdays I visit some more, and prepare in general for Sunday's program. Besides this, I often have one, two or even three marriages to perform, for which there is no remuneration, not even thanks many times. The people think the missionaries are paid by their mission boards for every marriage ceremony performed—an idea given them by the Roman Catholics.

On Sunday there is the Sunday School in Ponce in the morning from 9:30 to 11 o'clock; at 1:30 I take the teachers, Dona Delfina, Don Isaias Cruz, and sometimes Inez Correa, out to Clausells to hold Sunday School there. Then I return through Ponce, getting Don Jaime Blaimayer, Don Marcelino Colon, and Rita Gonzalez. Don Marcelino stays in Arus to hold Sunday School there in the afternoon and the preaching service in the evening. The other two go on to Playita, three miles farther, to help in visiting and holding the Sunday School there. At 5 o'clock we return. At 7:30 I hold the preaching service in the Ponce Church, and by 10 o'clock a busy day has come to a close.

Some of our much-desired programs in religious education have been carried out this year. The international graded Sunday School lessons are being used in Ponce, Santa Isabel and Salinas. The departments of these Sunday Schools have also done extra work in contributing programs on Sunday mornings and evenings.

By Mrs. D. P. Barrett.

During the year past I have tried to do my duty as wife, mother, home-maker, Sunday School teacher, organist and leader of Ponce Church choir, member of local and insular W. C. T. U., member of conference committee.

Seventeen packages of clothing have been received and passed on to our native workers for distribution among our most needy.

In January I received the enclosed letter which is self-explanatory. With the co-operation of Dona Delfina, I selected a little girl ten years of age, took her to a physician for examination and advice, and since then she has received the benefit of the money sent, in tonics and food supplies, which I have attended to personally. The amount sent to date is $22.45. She is improving nicely in health and is very grateful for this chance for life and better living.

Our folks at home are showing a keen interest in the work and workers; more so this past year than formerly. Letters received from missionary societies assuring the workers of co-operation and prayers have been most inspiring. Such letters teach us also not to withhold the encouraging word, for we never know when it is needed most.

With a prayer that God may guide each board member in his work at this session,

The Barretts.

NEWS ITEMS

The Junior Missionary Society of the Elon College Christian Church have done an exceptional piece of work during the past year under the capable leadership of Mrs. M. W. Hook. They studied two books, "Jewels the Giant Dropped" and "Seven Thousand Emeralds." Besides the study books, they had special features on each program, such as moral readings, short stories about foreign children, the accomplishments of our colored race and Jews. After each meeting they enjoyed a social hour with humorous readings, jokes and light refreshments. They had seventeen interested girls on roll and they responded to any call for service willingly. They raised their apportionment of $25.00, assisted with the thankoffering service, filled and sent a treasure chest to the Philippines, and paid two dollars and fifty cents towards the translation of a book for the Japanese children. They also sent a quilt containing names of the community to Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett, Porto Rico. Three social gatherings were held during the year.

A SUGGESTIVE PROGRAM.

(For study and worship based on "The Star of India," by Isabel Brown Rose. Prepared for Young People's Missionary Societies of the Southern Christian Convention by Alberta Boone Harrell, Durham, N. C.)

Foreword.

This series of programs has been prepared in the hope that it might stimulate more active participation on the part of the young people in the missionary enterprise.

These programs are only intended to be suggestive. Let each society have the program that seems best adapted to its needs. But let each society know that we Conference and Convention superintendents stand ready and willing to help in any possible way. No attempt at dramatization has been made herein, but whenever it is possible to dramatize a chapter it will add keen interest. Perhaps Chapter VI would lend itself most readily to dramatization. The leader, however, should allow ample time for working out details.

All suggested hymns may be found either in the "Hymnal for American Youth," the Century Co., N. Y., or in the "Service Hymnal," Samuel W. Beazley & Son, 53 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Members taking part in the study course should prepare their assignments. If necessary, they may use notes, but they should not come before the group merely reading the parts assigned them. The young people's department is organized especially to develop the ability of young people. They cannot develop strength on crutches! Tell your story in your own way and words!

When the leader follows these programs, I suggest that the program be placed on a blackboard before the group and that the worship theme and call to worship be written in colored crayon. Let the group repeat the theme and call to worship in concert. Edna Crandall, perhaps the best worship program builder, suggests that all announcements, comments, and suggestions be made in the period of preparation for worship. For instance, announce the next assignment for study, and the hymn numbers in today's program, all before the riod is intended to create the atmosphere for worleader's talk. This talk following the study peship. One item follows another without announcement, except from the blackboard. Miss Crandall's plan works beautifully in our local societies.

Program of preface, "The Motto of the Star," and Chapter I, "From Outcast to Captain"

I. Business:

1. Gloria Patri.

2. Invocation.

3. Business—old, new, miscellaneous.

II. Study period:

1. Introduction to our new study book, "The Star of India"; its motto and its significance (3 minutes).

2. Chapter I, "From Outcast to Captain, or Hari's Schooldays," a member tells the story (10 minutes).

3. General informal discussions of conditions in India as here viewed. The leader assigning next lesson, making announcements, and closing the discussion with attention recalled to the last paragraph, page 11 (10 minutes).

III. Worship program:

Theme: "Heaven's Light Our Guide."

1. Instrumental prelude, "Follow the Gleam" (World-wide Guild song).

2. Call to worship: "Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the Light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8:12).

3. Hymn: "O Zion, Haste, Thy Mission High Fulfilling."

4. Scripture: Revelation 22:1-7, 16-17.

5. Offertory service; Pianist plays softly, "O Zion, Haste," while offering is being taken.

6. Prayer: Pray that we may maintain willing hearts to help carry the message of love and light to those who have never heard. Pray for mission schools in India. Pray for boys and girls without an opportunity to rise above a predestined handicap. Pray for the missionaries who are making an opportunity for them. Pray that our own lives may be brightened by His loving presence in our midst at this very time. Praise to our Heavenly Father for the beautiful plan of salvation made possible by the love of Jesus Christ our Saviour. Amen.

7. Hymn (or solo): "On the Mountain's Top Appearing."

8. Mizpah benediction.

MONTICELLO MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Monticello Missionary Society has closed one of the best year's in its history. This is due, perhaps, to several reasons, some of which are a faithful, interested president who has had the support of a group of loyal officers and members; the programs have been varied and under the leadership of a different member each time; Bible contests have added much to the interest of the meetings; the pastor also has attended and seems to realize how necessary it is for a Church to have a missionary spirit if it is to progress.

At the last meeting the goal for the year was raised. The program, under the leadership of Mrs. W. R. McKinney, consisted of a sketch of the life of Miss Victoria Adams, given by Miss Myrtle Rudd, and a reading on "Some Vital Facts About Missionary Work," by Mrs. W. G. Rudd. Rev. J. L. Neese, the pastor, made a talk in which he told about the "Guest Book." This is based on the work of twenty-eight missionaries of the Congregational and Christian denominations. All members present signed cards, signifying that they would study the lives of these missionaries for twenty-eight consecutive days, beginning with October 13th.

This meeting being the last of the Conference year, officers for next year were elected as follows: Mrs. W. F. Burton, president; Mrs. N. G. Walker, vice-president; Mrs. T. F. Faucett, treasurer, and Miss Myrtle Rudd, secretary. The new year's work was outlined briefly by the new president.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson VI—November 9, 1930.

Thomas.

Golden Text: "Thomas answered and said unto Him, My Lord and my God."—John 20:28.

Lesson: John 11:14-16, 14:5-8, 20:24-29, 21:1, 2.

There are but four or five references to Thomas in the New Testament, so our knowledge of him might seem to be very fragmentary and incomplete. As a matter of fact, it is incomplete as concerning his activities. But John, who gives practically all the references to Thomas, has recorded such incidents as to give us an interesting insight into the man's temperament and character, which are, after all, the important things. There are also legends to the effect that Thomas went as a missionary either to a remote part of Syria, or to India. This would indicate that Thomas was active in the work of establishing the early Church.

Honest Doubt.

Thomas has been dubbed "Doubting Thomas," and the name has been interpreted in more or less uncomplimentary terms. There are many who have entirely misjudged the man. There is, of course, a doubt which is dishonest and which is rank hypocrisy. But there is an honest doubt which is legitimate. Thomas was a doubter, but he was an honest doubter. He belongs to that large number of people who must see before they believe. His limitation was the fact that he desired to test all truth by the evidence of the senses. There was a great deal at stake for Thomas and he wanted to be sure about it before he committed himself to a statement of belief.

It is interesting to note how Jesus met Thomas' uncertainty and doubt. He did not rebuke him. He met him with evidence and sympathy and kindly instruction. And His patience was rewarded, for Thomas came to a clear recognition of his Master's true character and to a keep devotion to his Master's cause. It is a wise parent or Sunday School teacher who knows how to take the doubts and fears of young people and deal with them in such a kindly, constructive, sympathetic way that they bring these young people out into a clear and convincing faith.

A Somber Nature.

Thomas, it must be admitted, did have a somber nature. He looked at life through dark glasses. As Dean Brown says, he "looked habitually on the dark side, well-nigh color-blind to all tints save the deep navy blue." It was characteristic of his temperament. It was no sin, but it was a great weakness. Even those who have this type of temperament can by the grace of God and by diligence develop the habit of looking on the brighter side of things.

Courage.

Thomas did not understand all of Jesus' teachings, nor did he understand all about Jesus. But he had a warm, personal loyalty to Jesus himself and he was willing to follow Him even unto death. When the other disciples suggested that it would not be expedient for Jesus and them to go to Bethany because of the opposition of the Jews, Thomas said, "Let us go also, that we may die with Him." One wonders if there are not those who seem to be so sure of their "faith" and who look upon Thomas with disdain, who would not dare to follow the courage of their convictions as did Thomas.

Sincerity.

As has been suggested, Thomas was absolutely sincere. His was the faith of honest doubt. And when Jesus offered him evidence—evidence that met Thomas' deepest doubt—he cried out, "My Lord, and my God!" Here, after all, is the heart of the matter. Those who have honest doubts will sooner or later find in Christ that which answers their doubts. It is for them, then, like Thomas, to follow the truth which they have found and to yield themselves in obedience to Him who is the Truth.

Loyalty.

Thomas was present in the upper room when the Spirit came at Pentecost. Once his doubts had been solved, he gave himself in whole-hearted devotion to the work of the Master. Whether the tradition that he became a missionary to Edessa or to India be true or not, it is undoubtedly true that Thomas did his full share of the work in carrying out the great commission of Christ.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic: "What Does Brotherhood Mean?"

Scripture: Matt. 23:8; 1 John 3:17.

Suggested Hymns: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations"; "Christ for the World, We Sing."

For Discussion.

1. "How Celebrate Armistice Day?"

(1) It has been suggested and urged by some that our government establish a department of peace to offset our Departments of War and the Navy. The purpose of this new department, when created, would be to cultivate the friendship of other countries and make them acquainted with our people and their ideals. If such a department were given each year the cost of only one battleship it would save the country millions of dollars and lives.

Do you favor such a department? Why?

(2) Let us strive to make this Armistice Day a time when we shall especially work and pray for world brotherhood.

(3) Two South American countries for years disputed their boundary line. They came to the time when they were to fight the matter out and settle it. A woman suggested that the cannon be melted and made into a statue of the Christ. The women of the two countries spread her idea. Today there stands, up in the Andes Mountains, on the boundary line of Argentine and Chile, the figure of the Christ to remind these two nations of a peace made without a war. An inscription on the tablet reads:

"Sooner shall these mountains crumble into dust than that the people of Argentine and Chile break the peace which they have sworn at the feet of Christ the Redeemer."

Solo: "America, the Shouts of War Shall Cease." (Tune: "Who Follows in His Train?") These words were written by Allen Eastman Cross in 1918:

"America! America! The shouts of war shall cease.
The glory dawns! the day is come of victory and peace!
And now upon a larger plan we'll build the common good:
The temple of the love of man, the house of brotherhood!

"America! America! Ring out the glad refrain!
Salute the flag—salute the dead that have not died in vain!
O glory! glory to Thy plan to build the common good:
The temple of the right of man, the house of brotherhood!"

2. "Why Seek World Brotherhood?"

(1) It is the way to peace.

(2) Mankind is sick and tired of war. There is a deep-seated yearning for that state of brotherhood when nation shall no longer rise up against nation and when the blood of brothers shall no longer stain the earth in its crimson flow. But peace on earth will not come through our yearning for it. We must rise up in the strength of God and act. The only way in which we can remake society is by remaking a large number of individuals who will work as the leaven until their influence is strong enough to carry the day.

3. "Is America Lacking in the Spirit of Good Will?"

See current newspaper and magazine articles. Determine whether or not certain articles in our papers are offensive to other nations. Have they a right to expect us to regard their feelings? Should we regard them?

4. "What Can We Do in Bringing in the Kingdom of Good Will?"

General discussion, following one or two members who have prepared two-minute talks on the topic.

5. Sayings of famous Americans on the theme of "World Brotherhood."

(1) "We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."—Thomas Jefferson.

(2) "With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan; to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."—Abraham Lincoln.

(3) "But the right is more precious than peace, and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts—for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own governments, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concern of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free."—Woodrow Wilson.

(4) "Let us, then, be just—observe good faith towards all nations, cultivate peace and harmony with all, and give to mankind the example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence."—George Washington.

BUREAU OF STEWARDSHIP.

The stewardship period in the Church year—November and December—was more generally observed last year than heretofore. There has been a steady call for literature during the year. Our better Churches are now realizing more fully the importance of the stewardship message to the whole life of the Church. It is important that those who have caught a vision of what stewardship really is should pass the message on into the life of our more average Churches, where the message is needed so badly but they do not as yet realize the need.

Your Stewardship Secretary has been elected to membership on the stewardship committee of the Congregational Commission on Missions, and there is a free interchange of literature and plans.

The year has been used as fully as time would permit to conduct institutes, deliver stewardship and Church finance addresses, carry on correspondence, serve as chairman of the Publications Committee of the United Stewardship Council, and your secretary has represented the Church in the United Stewardship Council and on its Executive Committee. He is now scheduled to co-operate in a series of such institutes in the Ohio Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches.

We wish we might report that all our Churches are using the regular, well-established every-member canvass, but the percentage remains about the same as that of other denominations. Many of our Churches still use antiquated and unspiritual methods of Church finance. We have assisted a goodly number of Churches to prepare for their every-member canvass.

Stewardship literature has been sent to Churches, rallies and Conferences. Our young people's congresses are helping to develop stewardship teaching and practice. One of our most profitable series of institutes held this year has been in the Churches of the Ontario Conference.

Our Congregational Churches use the calendar year as their Church year, beginning January 1st, as your secretary has advocated for years, and a goodly number of our Christian Churches have adopted that plan. It is not at all necessary, as some seem to think, nor is it advisable, that Churches begin their year at the time of the annual Conference. When the Church year begins January 1st, it brings the every-member canvass in early December.

We, therefore, recommend to our Churches the advisability of beginning their Church year on January 1st and the conducting of the every-member canvass on the first or second Sunday in December, and that these be our established dates until the General Council shall direct otherwise.

Stewardship Year.

The designation by the General Board of the year 1930-'31 as stewardship year in the Christian Church is not peculiar to our denomination. Three great sections of the Church—Southern Presbyterian, Southern Methodist, and Southern Baptist—devoted the entire year of 1929 to an intensive promotion of Christian stewardship. All agencies of the Church made it the central message and plan of the year. This year the Northern Presbyterians, the Reformed Church in the United States are adopting the same program. The imperative need of more effective and widespread stewardship instruction has come to be generally recognized by the leadership of all the Churches. The United Stewardship Council, representing thirty-four denominations in the United States and Canada, adopted the following resolution in 1929: "It is the conviction of the United Stewardship Council that the time is ripe for a nation-wide emphasis on Christian stewardship, and that the council recommends our respective communions so to plan their program as to unitedly give emphasis in 1930-'31."

There is every reason to believe that this matter is exceedingly important. It will accomplish little for the life of our people and for our activities unless there be a whole-hearted observance of it by our Church and Conference officials and our pastors.

We bespeak your loyal and active co-operation as we begin this emphasis November 1st, the opening of our stewardship period.

World Conference on Church Finance.

There is to be a World Conference on Church Finance and Stewardship in Edinburg, in June, 1931. It is greatly desired that representatives be present from the various denominations in the United States. The United Stewardship Council has allotted five representatives from each of the smaller denominations. It is to be hoped that suitable representatives from Christian Churches, who may be visiting abroad next June, may participate in this conference. Such delegates have an opportunity to render a distinct service.

Respectfully submitted,

WARREN H. DENISON, Sec'y.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

RICHER THAN RUBIES.

"The price of wisdom is above rubies."—Job 28:12-28.

We are likely to think that the diamond is the most valuable of all precious stones, but it is not. Though a small diamond is worth more than a small ruby, a large ruby is more valuable than a diamond of equal size.

And so wisdom finds in the ruby an excellent symbol of its supremacy. Wisdom is worth more than all worldly wealth, because without wisdom the richest man soon becomes a pauper. Wisdom is but another name of God.

If wisdom, then, is God, then wisdom is attainable by man. we may not reach the highest knowledge, but we may reach the highest wisdom. We can not, by searching, find out this wisdom, but God, by searching, finds out us.

Prayer.—Heavenly Father, we bless Thee for Thy self-giving. How joyful it is to find all our yearning satisfied in Thee! Thy rubies are ours, without money and without price, and we give Thee continual praise. Amen.

TUESDAY.

FOR A SEASON.

"The pleasures of sin for a season."—Heb. 11: 17-27.

Few owners of automobiles realize the cost of their absorbing pleasure. It is a rare delight to be whirled over this beautiful earth so swiftly, so smoothly, and so easily. We enjoy it so much that we speed on and on, oblivious of the fact that every mounting mile heaps up the cost. Most of us do not realize the cost except when we buy gasoline. We realize it more when we must purchase a new tire. Still more, if some part of the wonderful machinery gives out. But the cost comes upon us with complete force when we discover how little we can get for the old automobile.

Now, driving a car is not sinful, but in this particular, it is precisely like sin. We bowl along in the devil's automobile swiftly and pleasantly for a time. We are having what we call "a good time." But all the while the costs are mounting up, and in a few years the car goes to the junk-pile. The pleasures of sin are only for a season.

Prayer.—Make us wise in time, our Father. May we be prudent and sensible in time. May we live for the endless gains and not for transient amusement. Not finding our own pleasure, make us to ride upon the high places of the earth. For Christ's sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ONCE IN A WHILE.

"The angel of Jehovah appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush."—Ex. 3:1-6.

Nixon Waterman has written a wise little poem called, "Once In Awhile." He pictures the rare joys that come to us along the way of life, the times when the sun shines out in perfect beauty, when we lay aside our cross of care, when friendship and love are sweetest, and the dearest of all our dreams come true—but only once in a while.

Now, this "once in a while" may become "all the time." There is no need that the joys of any child of God should be temporary. God will gladly give us more than glimpses of Himself. All our life may be a continuous revelation of glory and beauty.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, we have been with Thee on the mount of transfiguration, now bring that excellent glory down to the plain. May our joys in Thee be our comrades. May every common bush be afire with God. We ask it in Thy name. Amen.

THURSDAY.

ALL THY COMMANDMENTS.

"Then shall I not be put to shame, when I have respect unto all Thy commandments."—Psa. 119: 1-8.

Robert J. Burdette was one of the most vivacious humorists this country has produced. He was also, in the latter part of his life, one of the nation's honored and influential preachers of the gospel. Once he was asked for his favorite Bible text, and he said:

"When I think of a favorite text, half a dozen dear ones leap to my lips. Stormy days I want a cloak; cold days I want the sunny side of the wall; hot days I want a shady path; now, I want a shower of manna; now, I want a drink of cool living water; now, I want an arbor to rest in; now, I want a pilgrim staff; now, I want a sword—a right Jerusalem blade. My favorite text? I might as well try to tell which is my favorite eye. The one I might lose is the one I might want."

We are to be pitied indeed if a single verse stands to us for the Bible, or a single Bible book, for that matter. We need the whole blessed volume, from Genesis to Revelation.

Psalm.—Lord of the Book, Author of its every word, may we enter into our full inheritance. May we become millionaires of Bible promises. May our barns be crowded with the finest of the wheat. May we have respect unto all Thy commandments. Yea, all. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ROBOTS.

"Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish justice in the gate."—Amos 5:10-15.

A robot is a contrivance for doing mechanically the work which a man has been doing, and which would seem to require intelligence. Sometimes these machines are made in human form, and their working is weird enough except to those in the secret of the mechanism. For example, the national Coast and Geodetic Survey has had at work for twenty years a machine for calculating two years in advance the normal rise and fall of the tides in all parts of the world. It has been appropriately called "the great brass brains," and it does the work of seventy-five expert mathematicians, doing it perfectly, without the possibility of error.

Of course, there is an infinite distance between a machine, however wonderful and useful, and the man who made the machine and the men who maintain it and utilize its work; and yet we may learn a most useful lesson from robots. As far as possible, our lives must become instinctive, adopting the mechanics of God's universe. Hatred of evil and love of good and of justice must become habitual with us. We must not need to argue out every problem that arises and feel our way through every contingency, but we must be so at home in God's ways that they have become the necessary and inevitable ways of our soul.

Prayer.—Great Creator, take us unto Thy school, teach us Thy science, and form in us the instincts of righteousness. Enable us to live in Thy ordered universe as a part of it. Make Thy laws the habitual laws of our souls. Amen.

SATURDAY.

CHRIST'S CLOTHING.

"When saw we thee naked, and clothed thee?"—Matt. 25:31-40.

The story is told of a Russian soldier who was on sentry duty one bitterly cold night. As the sentry was shivering at his post, a poor laborer passed by, took off his coat, and loaned it to the soldier. Notwithstanding this, the cold was so terrible that the sentry froze to death. After a while that poor laborer lay on his death-bed and had a dream of Christ's coming to him. The working-man said, "You have my coat on." "Yes," answered the Lord, "this is the coat you loaned to me that night when I was on sentry duty."

If we love the thought, and would like to carry it out, there is no limit to our opportunities. The world is full of poor people who need help, and we can give the aid according to our means and our strength, which is all that the Lord Jesus asks of us.

Prayer.—Our precious Redeemer, Thou hast passed by and seen us in the cold night. Thou hast wrapped around us the robe of Thy love and righteousness, and we have been cheered and warmed and saved. We can never repay Thee, but we can please Thee by passing kindness along to Thy brothers and sisters on earth. May we do it, as to Thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

IN THE BEGINNING, GOD.

"And God said, Let the earth bring forth living creatures."—Gen. 1:24-31.

No scientist has penetrated more deeply into the hidden things of matter and life than the discoverer of the electron, Prof. Robert A. Millikan. For this discovery of the infinitesimally minute portions of energy, far back of the atom, of which what we call matter consists, Millikan was awarded the Nobel prize. But, though he has found a way to measure a single electron, he has not seen matter becoming life, he has not been present at the transformation of inorganic into organic matter. As ever, the subtle principle of life escapes the biologist and physicist.

No man has seen God at any time. Here, in the infinitely little, God dwells. The Creator escapes the creature in the very act of creating. God also eludes man in the act of maintaining and superintending. God in the beginning, God in the vast achievements, and everywhere incomprehensible—how great is our God!

Prayer.—Infinite Creator, how we should flee Thee in terror were it not for Thy Son, Jesus Christ. In Him Thou drawest near to man. In Him we see Thee, not far off, beyond imagination far, but so close that we can touch His wounded hands and feet and side, close with the nearness of infinite love! We are glad and proud that Thou hast disclosed so much of Thy Being, and if in the years to come Thou dost disclose to the wise men even more, still it will be Thee, the Father, and Thy Son, Jesus Christ. Amen.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

"All things whatsoever ye would that men do to you, do ye even so unto them."—Matt. 7:12.

1. The moral ideas of Jesus. Put aside for awhile His doctrine, as there has been enough dispute and wrangle over it, and it has been denied and defended and interpreted in many ways, but ethical teachings have no superior part. No dispute over His ethics. No better way for a man to order his life than by the teachings of Jesus. If His theological teachings were unsound, and no Heavenly Father, no future life, no forgiveness of sin, value in prayer, the rules of conduct which He laid down are only ways of making life successful and happy. Unanimous consent is that life is supreme moral authority in the world. The man who conforms to him, builds his life on the house of solid rock.

Mr. Bernard Shaw, in the prefaces of one of his books, has this to say, "I'm no more a Christian than you are, gentle reader; yet, like Pilate, I prefer Jesus to Calaphas after sixty years. I see no way out of the world's misery but by the way of Christ.

As we study the ethical and moral teachings of Jesus, we find that He laid no rules down. Wisdom of this is easily seen. Once make Christian life consist of rules and you have confusion and uncertainty. Rules need to be multiplied like amendments to constitution, for new conditions and circumstances add new clauses and interpretation. Jesus' teachings are based on great principles that are eternally valid. He preached the idea of right spirit and attitude, and dealt with life. Look at His teaching on slavery. At His time, more than half of the people in the Roman empire were slaves. A large part of the wealth of Rome was on human beings. Jesus did not utter a word against this iniquity or try to make a law against it, but He created a spirit that showed each human being was precious to God and should be given an opportunity to develop as God would have it.

For a study of His moral teachings it would be hard to find a single verse so wonderful as the Golden Rule which He practiced and taught. Let us look to it, and as we do so we find several characteristics about it. The first things are:

Positiveness.

Jesus demonstrated and embodied the Golden Rule in all of life. He showed that the followers of Jesus are to be positive and take initiative in all things. Golden Rule in moral codes of China, Buddha, but in the negative form. Laws of Moses in the negative form. Jesus showed that the followers are to take initiative in doing as they would like others to do unto them. The Golden Rule implies that we are to begin by doing our part. It is not sufficient to crawl in one's shell from we must go forth and minister to our fellow-men like we want them to do to us. Always to see from other point of view.

Negative morality gets us no where. Tell a boy not to get a cement that is fresh and he will do it. Give him positive standard and he won't do it. Forbidding creates antagonism.

We are to act so that we would be willing for every man on earth to do the same thing under the circumstances. Think of the world; if one man is dishonest, what if we all were? The teachings of Jesus are not so new, but just fulfilled which was spoken of Him. If all he said was new, we would have to tear parts out of the Bible. If truth is eternal, primitive man must have known something of it. Paul speaks of law written in the heart. John speaks of the light that lighteth the heart, every heart.

Inwardness.

1. Not all the teachings of Jesus are entirely new. Instead, He came to fulfill what had been said. Greatness of Jesus not in originality, but the fact that He met men where He found them and showed them how they should live. He did not start telling them it was wrong to steal, for Moses said, Thou shalt not steal, and he also said, do not commit adultery, or thou shalt not murder; but Jesus showed that these things may be and are inward attitudes as much as physical actions.

2. Many instruments today for measuring weights; greatness is measured by inwardness. The most wonderful things in the world are the things we cannot see. No one ever saw the perfume of a rose, soft spring zephyr that brings fragrance; no one ever saw the communion that takes place in prayer—it is invisible, and now we think of an invisible standard of righteousness.

3. Jesus taught that it was what was without that counted. Condemned the old hard Pharisee saying they were wolves with sheep clothing. (See Matt. 23:25; Luke 11:39.)

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees; you make clean the outside of the cup, and the platter, but within they are full of extortion or greed. Thou blind Pharisee and scribe, cleanse first the inside so that the outside be clean also.

(Matt. 15:11.) Again we hear Him calling the multitude, saying, "Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth."

4. Kingdom of God is within you. To that end, Jesus admonished His followers to be pure and clean. Let not your heart be troubled. Righteousness a matter of motive.

Nonresistance.

1. Whole law of Jesus and practice of life was that conduct can best be regulated by doing good rather than evil. Hence, Golden Rule. It was said in old times, Eye for an eye, but I say, love your enemies.

2. We are to answer wrong with the goodness—when slapped on one cheek, turn other also. When your cloak is taken, give cloak when forced to go a mile, go twain. By this we do not mean a man is to me a coward and simply let strong men lord all things over him; rather are we to be judged by our power to control our feelings and minds and will.

3. Instead of hate for hate, return love for it. Instead of bribe, never fight the devil with own fire. He is more clever using own tools and weapons than you or I would be.

4. One of the world's greatest men today, Gandhi of India, leading India into a following of Him who believes in nonresistance. Gandhi simply will not hit back, and is so teaching all of India that time sure far at hand when all India and Europe will open wide eyes and behold and thinking of America becoming colored by that idea.

It often requires more courage to preach to one man than to a thousand. We must learn to reach men, one by one, by personal contacts.—Gordon.

BRO. FLOWERS' WORK.

We understand that Rev. A. R. Flowers is to speak to the patrons and pupils of several high schools in eastern North Carolina during the last week in November and the first two weeks in December. Mr. Flowers is now in South Carolina, where he is engaged in practical lecture service, through which many young people are coming into the Church. One Church had nearly thirty new members, and almost all young people, added to its membership through the influence of these lectures.

Mr. Flowers is a faithful worker and draws no lines as to denominational affiliations in whatever service he can render to the youth of our age. Since January 1st of this year he has worked with the young people of five different States, and is likely to be in Cuba by January 15, 1931.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our good women of Burlington remember the children at the Christian Orphanage every month. They always remember us with something that the children appreciate. They have five circles in their Church, and one circle visits the Orphanage each month. Last month the circle visited us and brought each child a bag of scuppernong grapes. If there is anything that a child likes, it is ripe grapes. If my memory serves me correctly, Mrs. J. W. Holt had the joy of donating the grapes to make the children happy.

This month, circle No. 4 paid us a visit and brought us a large bunch of ripe bananas. Now, whoever heard of a child that did not like good, ripe bananas. Every child in the Orphanage is fond of them, and I know of nothing that these circles could have given us that would have come nearer making every child happy than bananas and grapes.

The weather is growing colder, and that means wraps, shoes, coats, sweaters and cloaks. It does not cost much to send packages by parcel post. If you have a good second-hand garment in good condition that perhaps you have outgrown but it is still good, a coat, a dress, pair of shoes, overcoat or anything that you think will be useful to us, parcel post it to us. We can use it, and we will be grateful, too. A good second-hand coat will save us buying a new one. It will save our money when we have so little, and it comes in mighty slow. Hundreds of good women in all our Conferences can help us much in this way.

Thanksgiving Offering.

Begin to plan for it in your Church. We have appointed the pastor, the Sunday School superintendent, all the teachers, and officers as a committee to put on the Thanksgiving program in your Church, and we are praying that you will do your best.

The Orphanage needs ten thousand dollars for its special Thanksgiving offering this year, and, with its other contributions, it hopes to reach its goal. Now, let every man, woman and child pray that we may reach it, and back up your prayers with your gifts, and we will reach it. Now, let us march forward with a determination to reach it.

FULL SURRENDER.

Full surrender means that the man or woman who yields everything to God cannot only claim all He ever promised to His obedient children, but we say it with all reverence, His fully surrendered child can hold Him to those promises. It means any child of God can get anything from the Father he needs, if he give unto Him whatever He wants of that particular child. Most people do not believe it. Most Christians do not believe it. They will even laugh at it, but that does not change the fact. It remains true, just the same, that He who said, "If they cry at all unto me, I will hear"—does hear, and not only hears, but answers the call.

It costs all we have and all we are to be able to come to our Father and claim all He has promised, all He is willing and ready to give. There is a price to pay which most Christians are not willing to pay. It can be paid only by meeting ur Lord in the secret place, with the door made so fast and tight nothing of the world can get in. It means bended knees, lives, possessions; it means yielded everything. When we give ourselves into His hands so completely that He can use us to the utmost limit of our ability, use us any where He wants us, in any way He wants to, then His promises are ours to use to their utmost limit.

Are you willing to go this far with God in prayer? When the door to the secret place has been shut, can you, upon bended knees, take a pledge like this: "This . . . day of . . ., 1930, I, . . ., do of my own free will, pledge myself and all that I am and have to Him whom, having not seen, I love, and on whom I believe. Bought with a price, I give myself to Him, to be used as He shall see fit. Pledged in the name of Jesus, with my Lord's name as my eternal witness of the vow which I have made."

Can you do it? Are you willing to pay such a price? Go slowly now. It is all I am, my powers, talent, intellect, all given over to the Lord to use as He sees fit, just as long as He gives me life. It is all that I have yielded to Him. Have you named your possessions over, counting them one by one? Family, friends, can you sever those ties for His sake? Home, lands, stocks and bonds, bank account, all to take or leave as He wills? He may take it all; He may leave it. He may take a part and leave the rest; but it is no longer ours. We are only holding it in trust for the Lord, if we go this far with Him. We are giving every thing over to our Lord, never to take any of it back.

That pledge is very, very serious, and it is very, very binding. Jesus' name cannot be lightly used. That name is above every name. It is the name at which every knee shall bow. The Lord's name as our eternal witness makes the vow binding so long as we shall live. God does not break His covenant, nor alter the thing that has gone out of His life. He does not intend for us to break our vows to Him. "It is better not to vow, than to vow and not pay." But it is far better to vow and pay.

It means suffering with Him, but it also means security in Him. It means to always have "the eternal God as thy refuge, and underneath the everlasting arms." Can we, will we, and know all the joy of His constant presence, His care and protection? No other friend offers such security, peace, joy and freedom, such loving care and protection as our Lord offers to those who are fully surrendered, fully yielded to His will. It not only gives joy and liberty here, but it leads to pleasures forevermore. It costs all we have, but the price is cheap. Our "all" is not much at the best, and in surrendering it to our Lord we gain His "all," which is above everything we can think or ask.

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

THE PROPHET OF SAN FRANCISCO. By Louis F. Post. Vanguard Press $3.00; pp. 335.

Henry George, the famous single-taxer and social idealist of generations ago, is hereby given his setting by one who knew him intimately. Mr. Post wrote his book in 1928, just before his death. To know Henry George is to love him, whether you endorse his economic views or not, and this book makes you know him.

REVALUING SCRIPTURE. By Frank Eakin. Macmillan; $2.25; pp. 249.

In this book the scriptures of the several living religions are critically examined and compared to our Christian Bible. Bibliolatry is every where deprecated, but a scientific use of Scripture is heartily urged. Our exegesis has often been "eisegesis." What those, however, who undertake to expound Scripture should do is to make the passage say exactly what it meant to him who first wrote it. Further, the Bible is valuable as a storehouse of religious experience. As such, it is very valuable in meeting the issues and problems of life. Our Christian Bible becomes even more precious as it is viewed thus in comparison with the sacred books of the world's other religious systems. Here is another example of scholarship strengthening the Christian's faith, and strengthening it on a sound and defensible basis.

LEARNING AND TEACHING. By H. J. Sheridan and G. C. White. Abingdon; $1.00; pp. 207.

Written twelve years ago, this book has value as forecasting the present emphasis on experience as the basis of the curriculum. While the general approach is that the teacher is the central, focal personage in the educational process and that the curriculum is the means of effecting desirable (teacher-conceived) changes in the pupil, there is yet here and there a suggestion that this is not final and that further light is likely to come. It is good to have a book twelve years old say, "the whole Church is or should be primarily an educational institution." And here is another gem: "The interest, to be worth anything, must be interest in the lesson itself because the pupil feels that it has some relation to his own life." Change lesson to experience, and we have the latest theory of education. The book also speaks of the response of pupils to new experiences in terms of their past experiences. But despite these prophetic gleams, throughout the attitude is that religious education is a program to be put over on the pupil rather than a process of discovering the meanings and values of experience now and the organization of conduct in terms of those meanings and values.

WHAT DO PRESENT-DAY CHRISTIANS BELIEVE? By James H. Snowden. Macmillan Co.; $2.50; pp. 357.

The answers given by Dr. Snowden to the above question are not haphazardly thrown together, but comprehensively take up in turn all the questions commonly raised about God, man, Jesus, the gospels, etc. As the title implies, the general position assumed is that what Christians believe today differs from what they believed in days past. This denotes that religious truth is a growing body of knowledge and experience, and that such progress is not to surprise, much less alarm, us, but is to be expected and welcomed and worked for as a means of ever-wider and richer spiritual life. Another work by the same author is "Outfitting the Teacher of Religion." Dr. Snowden's work as a teacher and editor, and the fact that for a number of years he has been preparing a most delightful series of commentaries on the Sunday School lessons, makes this work well worth considering. The price is $2.00, and workers in the Church school of today should read it. K.

CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

MARRIAGES

BROWN—HICKS.

Mr. Charles Edgar Brown and Miss Effie Hicks, both of the Pleasant Grove Church and community ,were united in matrimony at the home of the writer on September 13, 1930, in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Many friends wish them much joy in their married life. T. J. GREEN.

ROBBINS—BROWN.

A marriage of interest to their many friends was solemnized by the writer Saturday night, October 11, 1930, at 7 o'clock, in the home of the bride's parents, in Randleman, N. C., Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Brown, in the presence of a few friends and relations, when their only daughter, Effie, became the bride of Mr. Otto Robbins, also of Randleman, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Robbins. Mr. Robbins is a young man of sterling character and member of the Christian Church of Randleman, and Mrs. Robbins, whose winsome ways have made her many friends and whose character is unexcelled, is also a member of the Christian Church and Sunday School. Their many friends wish for them a successful and happy married life.

Those present at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Brown, of Randleman; Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Robbins, Randleman; Miss Ruby Jarrette, Randleman; Mr. Howard Hancock, Ashboro, N. Were half the power that fills the world with terror;
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals and forts. —Longfellow.

BARTON QUITS VANDERBILT.—

Dr. William E. Barton has been compelled to quit his professorship at Vanderbilt University on account of health conditions. He will also relinquish his pastorate at Collegeside Church, Nashville, Tenn. He was taken ill in September and his physicians diagnose his trouble as caused by continuous heart strain, and advised rest from such a strenuous life. He is now at Foxboro, Mass., recuperating and endeavoring to regain his health.

NOTED VISITOR.—

The author of "The Art of Thinking," Abbe Ernet Dimnit, of France, recently visited Baltimore and made an address at Notre Dame College. His book on thinking was enormously popular and his studies in the field of illuminating interpreter of the Bronte Sisters. The abbe charmed his audience with his delightful personality and his acute mind. He impresses one with his priest-like calmness within himself and with his great and vigorous interest in the events of the day.

ABYSSINIAN RULERS.—

The Negus Ras Tafari of Abyssinia and his Queen, Waizern Menen, were crowned Emperor and Empress of Abyssinia on November 2nd. The night preceding the ceremonies was spent in meditation and prayer at St. George's Cathedral. Silently and alone, within the dark-cloistered walls of the famous Church built as a thankoffering for the victory of the Abyssinians over the Italian troops in 1896, the two sovereigns invoked the blessing of God upon their reign, their people, and their country. What a good example to other world rulers! "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God" (2 Sam. 23:3).

ARMISTICE PEACE PROGRAM.—

The commission on international justice and good will of the Federal Council has prepared a pamphlet for the use of Churches on Armistice Sunday, November 9th. Outlining the steps immediately ahead if peace is to prevail, the commission, in this pamphlet, presents a wealth of suggestions for the observance of Armistice week and Armistice Day. Copies may be secured from the Federal Council, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York, at $2.50 per hundred. Churches with the custom of holding Armistice Days would do well to get such a program and make the day an event worth while in the Church calendar.

COMMUNITY INSTITUTE.—

An innovation is to take place in First Christian Church, of Baltimore, this winter to contribute to the life and thought of the community as a whole. On Sunday evening throughout the winter, the Church is sponsoring a community institute of human relations, consisting of a series of lectures on contributions to human welfare, given by some of the outstanding leaders in the various professions. Among the subjects discussed will be psychiatry, education, medicine, business, public schools, the Jews, the Catholic Church, the law, and Protestantism. Why not make the Church an institution which serves in a larger way the whole spiritual man in a larger spiritual way?

GOOD WILL CONGRESS.—

Fred B. Smith, chairman of the Good Will Congress has an array of brilliant lights for the Armistice program of World Alliance for International Friendship to be held November 10-12, at Washington, D. C. About five hundred leaders in the international field from over the country will constitute the congress. The theme for this year is, "Carry On with the Pact." The speakers are Henry A. Atkinson, John R. Mott, Jacob G. Schurman, Henry Wickham Steed, James T. Shotwell, Mary E. Wooley, Raymond Robbins, Alanson B. Houghton, William Green, Parker T. Moon, C. C. Wu, Frank B. Kellogg, W. P. Merrill, Joseph Fort Newton, S. Parks Cadman, and others. President Hoover will address the conference on Armistice Day.

ANNUAL SERIES OF SERMONS.—

Dr. Peter Ainslee, chairman of a committee of 100, representing all denominations, announces the following preachers for six sermons for the winter: Dr. S. Parks Cadman, Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, Dr. Paul E. Sherer, Dr. Russell Bowie, Dr. Chas. R. Brown, and Dr. Halford E. Luccock. These sermons will be preached on Thursday evenings, beginning November 6th, at the Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, which stands in the shadow of the Washington Monument, near the central part of the city of Baltimore. It will be a great opportunity for some of our people to hear these great preachers. Why not plan to have similar series of annual sermons in other Southern communities? It would arouse interest in the vital things of religion.

BIG BEQUEST.—

Bishop William A. Leonard, of the Episcopal Church in Ohio, made a big bequest to his Church when he gave most of his estate to the Church and Church institutions. The combined estate of himself and wife amounts to about $650,000, and most of this money will go to the diocese enterprises. Trinity Cathedral will receive $85,000, and the Kenyan College $35,000. Included in a long list of bequests is one of $5,000 to his co-adjutor and successor, Warren Lincoln Rogers.

If people generally in the Church would remember the Church liberally in their wills, their work would live on after them and continue serving the kingdom. Many of our people have wealth that would serve humanity to good purpose by being left to the Church or some of its institutions.

A GREAT AMERICAN IN INDIA.—

Bishop Francis J. McConnell sailed from New York on October 17th for India, where he is to deliver the Barrows lectures on "Christianity" in a number of student centers. He will also preside at the central conference of the Church of Southern Asia in December; the conference is to elect a bishop for Southern Asia in accordance with the 1928 legislation. With such a great religious leader delivering a series of lectures on "Christianity" among student centers, great results will follow for permanent good for the religious life of India. It is native to the genius of India to be religious, and if this native tendency can be directed into the channels of Christianity, the native missionary work will feel its force.

PRINCIPAL JACKS HERE.—

Principal L. P. Jacks, of Manchester College, Oxford, was visiting Colgate-Rochester Divinity School to deliver a series of lectures on "Religion, Natural and Unnatural." Among other good things, he said: "There is not more significant spectacle under heaven than that of men in their millions 'going forth to their work and their labor until evening'; there is no aspect of human experience where God and man might draw so closely together. God dwelleth among men on the earth in the thronged street, in the workshop, in the office, and in the multitudes and will sustain them, and 'they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun scorch them nor the fire torture them, for the Lamb which sitteth upon the throne shall sustain them and lead them to living springs of truth."

YOUNGER MINISTERS PROGRESSIVE.—

In an important center of the United States, one will quickly discover that while there are many conspicuous pulpits occupied by stalwart theological conservatives as by intelligent liberals, yet throughout the smaller communities as well as in the larger centers of population, there are a great host of fine young progressives among the ministers who know what is going on in the world and who see in the gospel a way of life as well adapted to the men and women of today as it was to those of the first century. These young men and women in the less conspicuous places are laying foundations and profoundly influencing the religious life of the whole population. The study of religion should keep young and old pioneering and forging ahead into new fields of thought and creative thinking as well as in digging up old fossils in archeological research. Some of the old truths of religion are ever new and should inspire study in the conservatives as well as in the progressives.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Born to Rev. and Mrs. Joseph W. Fix, of Franklin Christian Church, a son, in Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va. Named Joseph W. Fix, Junior. Mrs. Fix getting along fine.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, president of the Eastern Virginia Conference, was brief in his annual address but pointed and powerful. He was instructed, by a unanimous vote of the Conference, to write out his brief address and give it to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It will certainly be worth reading.

One of our good correspondents puts this in a recent letter: "Evangelism produces Church membership. Stewardship makes Church membership productive. Simple Church membership is but as a cake not turned; in a sense, half done. To make it self-enriching and efficacious, stewardship must complete the baking."

Dr. W. M. Jay and family moved last week from Elon College to the Christian parsonage at Holland, Va., Dr. Jay taking up his work as pastor of Holland Church the first Sunday of November. We congratulate the Holland people on having two such consecrated workers as Dr. and Mrs. Jay in their midst. They are a real asset to any community.

Rev. O. D. Poythress and his people, of South Norfolk Christian Church, entertained the Eastern Virginia Conference last week with royal hospitality and good will. Many who had not previously seen this beautiful Church building expressed themselves as delighted as well as surprised. It is a beautiful plant, indeed, and well equipped for every need of worship, of Church service and of Christian education.

One of the striking features of the Eastern Virginia Conference at South Norfolk was a moving-picture scene and lecture by Dr. L. E. Smith, on "The Passion Play" as he witnessed it at Oberammergau last summer. Dr. Smith's pictures and vivid description of this marvelous production produced a profound effect upon his audience and revealed the awful ordeal through which our Saviour and those nearest Him passed during the last days of His passion. We do not know that Dr. Smith can be had at other places, but it would certainly be worth while for him, if possible, to give this talk in many of our Churches.

Rosemont Christian Church, Rev. J. F. Morgan, pastor, is erecting a handsome and commodious new house of worship at Rosemont. The Eastern Virginia Conference adjourned its annual session Friday afternoon to attend in a body the laying of the corner-stone of this beautiful Church. It is to be a brick structure and is to have ample rooms for worship, Sunday School, and other religious educational activities. They have adopted the policy of "pay as you go," and plan to build a Church on which there will be no indebtedness whatever when the building is completed. If this plan is carried out, it will be a rather unique experience in expensive Church building.

From the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, October 30th: "United Church, Raleigh, N. C., the pioneer in the movement whereby the Congregational and Christian Churches have united, is making steady progress under the direction of Dr. J. Edward Kirbye. The heavy Church-building indebtedness is being steadily reduced, the membership growing, missionary giving increasing, young people's work connecting up strongly with the State College student group, and the entire city recognizes the influence of the strong Church program. Dr. Kirbye is also reaching out into the surrounding regions and is helping the smaller Churches in an inspirational way. Caroleigh Chapel recently became a part of the United Church parish and fifty-three of its group, together with sixteen others, united with the Raleigh Church."

Rev. L. F. Johnson, about whose decease only a brief note was in last week's SUN, was well known and held in high esteem in many Churches of the South. He was pastor at Greensboro, at Raleigh, and at Berkley, Va., among other important pastorates. He died at his home in Rutherford, N. J., on October 14th. Dr. Johnson was a graduate of, and later received his doctor of divinity degree from, Elon College. Though living in New Jersey at the time of his death and for several years prior thereto, the burial was in the Wake Chapel Cemetery, Wake County, N. C., Bro. Johnson having come from the Wake Chapel community. Dr. Johnson spent a busy and an active life in the ministry, being a man of great energy and consecration, and of marked personality and power. He made a contribution to his day and generation, and we regret to record his going away from us while yet in middle life, being about fifty-five years of age at the time of his death, and prior to his illness, beginning late in September, possessed of all his bodily, mental and spiritual energy. The dear ones of his family circle have our sympathy.

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

WEST PALM BEACH: Under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. C. W. Pusey, the Church is conducting a Sunday evening forum with selected speakers. The speaker for November 2nd was the Jewish rabbi of the city, speaking upon England's changed attitude with regard to the Palestine mandate. The Church has also organized a man's class which is discussing the subject, "Building Moral Reserves: Studies in the Responsibilities of the Christian Citizen." The course discusses such subjects as "The Nature of Community Life," "Government as an Agency of Social Living," "Crime as a Break-Down of Citizenship," "Creating a Christian Society." The class will be led by different community leaders, lawyers, business men, etc.

MISSIONARY TEAM VISITATION: A new program was inaugurated in October in the interest of the missionary program in the State. Being unable to obtain missionary leadership, the plan is for the superintendent and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, with selected pastors, to visit the Churches of the State to promote interest in the plan of advance and missionary giving. The first such visitation was to the Church at New Port Richey, Rev. Ralph Krout, pastor. A bountiful supper was served and there were talks by the superintendent and Miss Coghill and by Rev. Walter Metcalf, of Tampa. On the following evening a similar bountiful supper was served at the Tampa Church and the assisting preacher was Rev. Ralph Krout, of New Port Richey. On Wednesday evening, October 29th, the superintendent and Miss Coghill were present at a largely attended Church supper at West Palm Beach Church and spoke for the "Plan of Advance" and missionary education. Other Churches will be visited as opportunity affords.

SALISBURY.

The work of the United Church of Salisbury seems to be moving along with some degree of success. The Sunday School has been completely reorganized, and it is now a closely graded school. Our every-member financial canvass reached every member of the Church and every regular attendant, and our budget was put over the top. A nursery room has been completely furnished and the children under six years of age will be taught here during Sunday School and Church services.

The women of the Church have just reorganized their work, and the "Women's Association of the United Church," which will embrace the missionary and ladies' aid work of the Church, is expected to assist in a large way in making the United Church function in the city.

Plans have been made for offering for sale a part of our present Church property. When this sale has been made, immediate plans for relocating the Church in a residential section will be made.

The pastor of the Church would appreciate the names of any Christian Church people now residing in Salisbury or Spencer, and he will appreciate the co-operation of The Christian Sun readers in this respect.

William T. Scott.

FLORIDA ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the West Florida District Association of Congregational Churches convened with Dorcas Church October 17-19th. The Churches and their various organizations were well represented by delegates. At the opening business session, Rev. W. H. Tillman was re-elected moderator and Mr. T. A. McCollum elected clerk. The reports of the Churches and their organizations were given, discussed and recorded on a large chart. Only one of the Churches failed to send delegates, and all except one reported active Sunday Schools. Many aspects of the work of the Church were discussed by Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Conference superintendent, and Miss Marguerite Davison, extension worker. Special emphasis was placed on the missionary program of Congregationalism and a world service committee was appointed to encourage missionary education in the Churches.

The Conference was rich in inspiration, for devotional services were conducted by Gasper Linzy, Rev. J. E. Brasher, and Rev. W. H. Tillman, and messages were brought by Rev. J. E. Brasher, Dr. F. P. Ensminger and Rev. W. H. Joyce, of Fairfield. The young people met for a sunset meeting out-of-doors Sunday evening, and many took part in this service of worship. At the closing session of the Conference the committee on resolutions presented a report expressing appreciation for the hospitality of the hosts, upholding the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution and its enforcement, and encouraging speedy correlation of program with the Christian brethren. This report was unanimously adopted by the Conference.

COAST ASSOCIATION.

The twenty-third annual meeting of the Southeast Coast Association of Congregational Churches of Florida was held with the Church at Lake Worth on October 28th. The association was well attended and was considered by all to be one of the best meetings of the association held in recent years. The pastor of the Church, Rev. Lillian B. Fulton, D. D., assisted by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Church and others, made the association most welcome and entertained them royally.

As the moderator had moved from the district, the assistant moderator, Mr. W. J. VonBehren, a layman of West Palm Beach, presided most efficiently. The general topic for the meeting was "The Mission of the Church and the Church's Mission." The superintendent, Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, D. D., discussed new plans for missionary advance; Rev. Elisha A. King, D. D., spoke on "Missions in Mexico," from which country he had recently returned; and Rev. Harley R. Core, the registrar of the association, narrated experiences in teaching a mission-study class. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill reviewed the mission study books for the year and conducted a round-table on missionary education. Rev. Frederick Held, of Jupiter, gave an interesting account of the daily vacation Bible school conducted in the Jupiter Church this summer, and Mr. Walter Boutwell, director of young people's work in the Lake Worth Church, spoke most interestingly of the young people's work in that Church. The Communion message was delivered by Rev. Charles W. Pusey, of West Palm Beach. The morning period of devotion was conducted by Rev. J. Delman Kuykendall, D. D., of Coconut Grove, and the opening devotion service in the afternoon was conducted by Rev. James E. Parker, of Palm City.

Beautiful music was rendered by members of the Lake Worth choir.

Rev. Frederick Held was elected moderator for the coming year, with Mr. Walter Boutwell, of Lake Worth, as assistant moderator. Mr. Held was also scribe for this session. Rev. J. Delman Kuykendall, D. D., of Coconut Grove, was elected delegate to the National Council of Congregational Churches to be held next July at Seattle, Wash., and Rev. Elisha A. King, D. D., was elected alternate delegate, Mrs. E. A. King having been elected delegate from the Woman's Federation of the State Conference. A liberal offering was taken for the ministerial relief fund.

YOUNG PEOPLE AT CONFERENCES.

We are glad to report that the young people have had a real share in the State Conferences of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and West Florida. In Kentucky a fine group of young folks drove to Corbin from Stearns, joined the young group of the entertaining Church, and enjoyed a helpful fellowship. During some of the regular sessions of the Conference these young people met for their own discussion periods and business meetings. The delegation from Stearns conducted a hill-top vesper service, and the Corbin young people were responsible for the devotional services of the Saturday-night meeting of the Conference. Officers were elected and plans made for a Christian life conference to be held at Stearns in July for all of our Kentucky young people.

At the Tennessee Conference, held at Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, an enthusiastic group of young people from many of our Churches met for an indoor camp-fire vesper service and a picnic supper, followed by stunts and songs. These young people elected officers and representatives from the various Churches and made plans to meet at Soddy Church at the close of the special services Thanksgiving week. The worship service at the opening of the evening meeting for the whole Conference Saturday night was conducted by one of the young people.

The joint Christian and Congregational State Conference of Alabama, which met at Noonday Church, Wedowee, gave its Wednesday late afternoon and evening services to the young people of both groups. Enthusiastic delegates from the nearby Christian Churches met with Congregationalists who had traveled from all over the State, and heard each other's experiences, discussed common problems, worshiped together in the sunset meeting out-of-doors, roasted weenies over the big fire, and thrilled to the challenge of the evening addresses to Christian youth. Plans were made to merge the district Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conferences of the Christian Churches with the Christian Life Conferences of the Congregational Churches and to serve our widely scattered districts more effectively.

At the West Florida District Association meeting with Dorcas Church, Crestview, the young people made excellent reports of their progress and contributed greatly to the spirit of the gathering. Their vesper service on Sunday, held in the face of a glorious sunset, was participated in by many and was an inspiration to all.

The importance of the young folks is being recognized. They are coming into their own.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XIII.

S. S. Minnekada, Tuesday, July 15, 1930.

Because of continued weakness, I did not arise till 11:30, but what a glorious morning in bed! Dr. Coffin dropped in at 9:30, just after I had read several chapters in Weymouth's translation of the gospel of Luke. Dr. Smith also comes in, and a sweet fellowship begins. To Dr. Coffin, "I am so delighted this morning and so grateful. God has certainly been good to me. I have had and am having a good time." People who are in full health and strength are not the only ones who have good times, because they feel the burden of work and responsibility. The people convalescent have a better time because opportunities are afforded for sweet meditation and communion. "Dr. Coffin, are you in a mood to pray?" "Delighted," smiled the congenial and versatile doctor; and then he prayed. What a prayer! So wholesome, so comforting, so appealing. God had made the seas and had led man into the wisdom of enjoying and appropriating the benefits and blessings of the same in comfort and security and safety. Then God has, with all the world's governments and might in His hands, seen fit to take notice of man, and He does take notice even of the least of us. And then intercession and thanksgiving and praise flowed so sweetly from the heart of our great Dr. Coffin until our little State-room on ship was transformed and transfigured into a temple of prayer and thanksgiving and reverence and worship. The three of us were there, and—another. Good Dr. Smith never seemed so heroic, so humble, so sincere, so unselfish as now. He has denied himself everything just to keep company with a temporary invalid, and yet his very face and countenance show that He who marks the sparrow when it falls, has set His seal of approval on this unselfish man of God. And Dr. Coffin never before seemed so accessible, so diffused, so radiant, and so happy. With trembling hand, I write the truth in my diary when I say that this trip, all of it, is worth while just to learn and to know Dr. Smith and Dr. Coffin. We never know any one in this life until we know him at his best, when he is nearest and closest to the God whom he has sought to serve and who now "lifts upon him His countenance reconciled."

We agree to have this quiet hour each morning at 9, at the suggestion of Dr. Smith. Possibly the hour is too sacred in its content to be entrusted to my diary, and yet there is nothing as real and as abiding as the sacred and the holy. We often speak of life's facts and realities, having in mind the material and the visible things about us. We forget the fact that back of the visible is the invisible, and back of that which is seen is the eternal that upholds that which appears. The most real fact in all this universe is the fact of God, and the sweetest consolation of the human heart is communion with God. That is fact that is real, beyond which there is nothing else quite so real and quite so essential.

The sea is busy and bulging today. Its change of coloring and surface is incessant. Each swell and bulge is different, and the blue is broken with the shimmering white under a glorious, glittering sun. Today I am reading Longfellow's "Hyperion." On page 188 I find Fleming, the hero, soliloquizing, and as this soliloquy now fits my mood and station, I copy him thus:

"Truly every man has a paradise about him until he sins, and the angel of an accusing conscience drives him from his Eden. And even then there are holy hours, when this angel sleeps, and man comes back, and with the innocent eyes of a child looks into his lost paradise again—into the broad gates and rural solitudes of nature. I feel this often. We have much to enjoy in the quiet and retirement of our own thoughts. Boisterous mirth and loud laughter are not my mood. I love that tranquility of soul in which we feel the blessings of existence and which in itself is a prayer and a thanksgiving."

Yes, indeed, we never taste of life at its sweetest and its best until, by the grace and goodness of God, we have been permitted, or may be by circumstance compelled, to seek and to find, and then "enjoy ourselves in the quiet and retirement of our own thoughts." I just wish it were possible, though it would prove tedious and tiresome, to put down here expressions of some of the joy that has come even to me while fever and weakness compelled me, drove me, to the retirement and quiet of my own thoughts in these last few days—far removed from familiar faces, scenes and experiences.

The "log" says we have negotiated 363 miles the past twenty-four hours, much of it over a rough sea; but our good ship pushes forward steadily and gracefully.

I sent a radiogram at 12:45 today to a friend at Norfolk. The thing seems uncanny. That message swept out over the sea and the lands in all directions, and yet it hit the spot in Norfolk, for in a few hours the reply message, sweeping out over all the ocean, hit the sensitive plate on our ship and the operator handed me a reply that all was well on the other side. This staggers the imagination, and one wonders at the miracle of it. From midocean, messages are flying out over all lands and countries, and replies are coming back. A fellow-passenger will tell you he has just heard from a friend or a house somewhere far on the continent of Europe; another will tell you he has just had a message from a friend on a ship 1,500 miles away; and another a message from a remote district somewhere in the States of America. The air is filled with a strange and wonderful power, which the genius of man, under the guidance of God, has put under control and to service, and the whole world at sea and on land is on easy and quick speaking terms.

A drunken man is on board our ship today; a nuisance to passengers and shunned by all. He is pitiable to look upon. He is brazen and nonchalant enough, but every one seems to shun him. In all my travels since leaving Norfolk and before, this is the first intoxicated man I have seen. It is a rare specimen, indeed, and a repulsive one. One of our party tells me that he went into a London saloon, thinking he was in a store, to make inquiry about directions. To his amazement, being in a saloon, while he was getting the information desired, he saw this sign in large letters where all could read: "No drunkenness, no loitering, no boisterousness, no swearing allowed here. Remember it was this that brought prohibition in America." My informant said this gave to him evidence as nothing else had that the saloon-keepers of London are alarmed and are doing all they can to keep their places decent so as to ward off prohibition. That sign on the walls of a London saloon is certainly a high tribute to prohibition in America.

I went oversea to be at the International Council of Congregational and Christian representatives at Bournemouth, England, and then to visit the continent for a month or so. It turned out that I did nothing of these, and instead spent my time in a hospital. "Disappointment?" you say. "Oh, well!" While browsing through Longfellow's "Hyperion" today, I found this:

"Welcome, Disappointment! Thy hand is cold and hard, but it is the hand of a friend. Thy voice is stern and harsh, but it is the voice of a friend. O there is something sublime in calm endurance, something sublime in the resolute, fixed purpose of suffering without complaining, which makes disappointment oftentmies better than success." And then this: "Therefore, whosoever thou art that sufferest, try not to dissipate thy sorrow by the breath of the world, nor drown its voice in thoughtless merriment. It is a treacherous peace that is purchased by indulgence. Rather, take this sorrow to thy heart and make it a part of thee, and it shall nourish thee till thou art strong again." Even so. Strange, isn't it, that, as we read books casually, we pick up words of comfort and consolation all unexpectedly. There is sweet and soothing comfort in the sorrow of disappointment if we hug it to our hearts and refuse to worry, for, indeed, it was written long ago and by one far wiser than Longfellow: "All things work together for good to them that love God."

I have just read chapter 5, book 4, of "Hyperion," on "Saint Gilgen." This is Longfellow's wonderful soliloquy on death, and graves, and those who sleep. But for its length I should copy it also in my diary, but my library at home has it, and when I must face the sorrows and the sadness of friends and loved ones who pass, I shall turn again to book 4, chapter 5, of "Hyperion," for it sublimely answers the question patient Job put to himself centuries ago, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

SPEED.

Ignace Paderewski, world-famous musician, comes back to America for another of his grand concert tours. He has often been here before, and is a keen observer of American life as well as the foremost piano artist in the world. "Speed," declares the artist, "is a form of intoxication. Whereas, people used to like to spend hours listening to music, now they prefer the intoxication of speed, so they go out in their automobiles instead."

It does not require an artist or a very keen observer to discover this patent truth. A recent writer, in a monthly journal, declared that Americans no longer thought of going anywhere; they simply thought of arriving. Nine of us out of ten have the speed mania. If proof is needed, observe the speech of persons telling you about any recent auto trip. The conversation will be more concerned about how far one traveled in a day, or night, and when one arrived after a journey of so many miles, rather than of scenes along the way. We no longer take time to observe and learn and absorb; we fix our schedule and plan to arrive on time or break a trace. It matters little as to the import of the journey. Just so we travel at a rate of fifty to sixty miles an hour, or make a trip of 400 or 500 miles in a day, the conversation is complete and the traveler is satisfied.

Paderewski, as an artist, is up against the same proposition that the preacher is on Sunday. He is speaking to people frequently who are planning a long trip, and at break-neck speed, for an afternoon; or to seats vacated by those who are already speeding away to points far distant. We have made speed our creed. We believe in "arriving."

Speed is very costly. A recent economist declared that the average, for operating, even the most inexpensive cars, could not be less than five cents per mile. A hundred miles on Sunday certainly means at least an outlay in money of $5.00. This is the lowest. It is more often $10.00. One who spends this amount in pleasure on speed would, with great reluctance, if at all, throw an equal amount into the collection plate for benevolence on a Sunday morning. J. O. A.

THE DEEP THINGS OF GOD.

When one is brought face to face with the sweet mysteries and consoling presence of God, both body and soul find rest and comfort. We seek the house of worship on the Sabbath not to add to the work and the worry of the week, but to find rest for the soul and renewal of the spirit. If man exercises primarily his body and mind through the six days of the week, he certainly needs soul refreshing on the Sabbath. We only get this soul refreshing by coming in touch with the presence of God and by having the preacher or the worship in the sanctuary reveal to us the deep things of God. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, than whom no preacher in America is more loved and honored, declares that—

"People are tired on Sunday. They have seen enough shows through the week. They have had all the entertainment they care for. What they want on the Lord's day is a quiet conversation with an earnest-minded man who is interested in the high things of the Spirit and who knows how to interpret the words of Jesus and the signs of the times. Declamation is a bore, oratory is an offense, fireworks of every sort are an impertinence, but a quiet talk on the deep things of God is always strengthening and healing. A preacher who is content to speak in every-day language to his people Sunday after Sunday about Jesus Christ, and the application of Christian ideas to their personal experiences and to the problems of their generation, can be interesting and fresh at the end of thirty years."

Dr. Jefferson speaks from actual experience, since he recently retired after thirty years of eminent service in a great pulpit, beloved and honored by the congregation he had served so faithfully and by the tens of thousands who have read and been inspired by his quiet talks on the deep things of God.

The pulpit is not to display the preacher, but to reveal God; not to attract people to the speaker, but to lift the people up to the highest. The soul finds rest and healing only as it finds refuge in the Giver of all good, and the one from whom all blessings and benefits come. J. O. A.

BEGIN AT THE BEGINNING.

Most people put off beginning a work that terminates at a future time. This is especially true of obligations that do not mature until the end of a year. People overlook the fact that it takes a year to do a year's work. It even takes a day to do a day's work. It would be well for pastors and people to think of this as Conferences close and apportionments are made to the Churches. As a rule, when Conference closes, preachers and delegates return to the Churches and neglect what they are requested to do for the next year. The Church is asked to send up to Conference next year $100, $200, $300, $500, $1,000, $1,500, $2,500—as the Church seems able to meet such a sum for the year. But there are so many things to be done, so much expense at home and the home Church for current expenses, that the pastor shrinks from calling the attention of the congregation to what the Conference apportioned to them. He puts it off. The first quarterly conference of the Church fails to take up the matter seriously, and it drops out of the mind of the Church until the last quarterly conference, when they elect delegates to the annual Conference. Then a live pastor and a willing Church hurry and scurry around to raise their apportionment; and a real live Church succeeds and sends the check in full to Conference; but the indifferent pastor and the careless Church find it difficult to raise the money. It is like planting corn in September, or sowing wheat in April—it is too late for a harvest. It is embarrassing to preacher and delegates to go to Conference without the money the Conference expects of them. Sometimes they do not attend. Have you ever known a Church, with Conference assessment paid in full, not be represented by pastor or delegate at Conference?

Now that the Conferences will soon be over and the new Conference year will begin, let all pass a resolution that they will begin in January to raise what the Conferences have asked of the Churches. It need not embarrass a pastor to speak on this subject, for, as a rule, the pastor who looks after Conference obligations will not go to Conference with his salary unpaid. The least a pastor says about his salary, and the most he says about his Church's obligation to Conference, the better it will be for pastor, local Church and Conference. W. W. S.

THE FIVE HUNDRED WORDS.

These five hundred words seek to gather up the sense of the 121st annual meeting of the American Board, and convey to the Congregational-Christian Churches of America the dominant note in the deliberations of their representatives at Madison, Wis., October 21-23rd.

First of all, we live in the day of a new motive for world Christianity. The war, world-wide unemployment, and other tragic revelations of social failure, have brought home to our generation the humbling and sobering fact that no civilization yet attained is dominantly or truly Christian in all phases of its life. And at the same moment science, through its miracles of communication and transportation, has brought the world to an inescapable closeness of contact and relationship.

Out of this sense of the unity of the world and the inadequately Christian character of human institutions comes to our day a new and vivid realization that the struggle for ideals of human brotherhood and spiritual beauty must go on everywhere. As one just returned from Asia has said, "The same tides rise and fall over there as here." Ultimately, then, it must be a world of justice, love, good-will, and spiritual nobility everywhere or nowhere.

Our motive, therefore, becomes "the permeation of the world by the spirit of Christ," beginning at home, wherever home may be, but inevitably going out even as go the radio and airplane to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Along with this new motive goes a new approach to other peoples; this is best described by the word "sharing." Our attitude toward other civilizations is not one of assumed superiority, but of sharing and co-operation—an open-minded and hearty appreciation of them and an eager welcoming of all the riches of truth and beauty they may bring to our total human heritage. At the same time, and by the same token, we feel that we have in our experience with Christ and His teachings something which, when our ancestors were remote barbarians, an older civilization sent to us to our blessing and which we, in turn, are under manifest obligation to share with all the world.

This new approach leads to a new method. This is, in part, the exaltation of local and national leadership within each country, the expectation that the religion of Jesus will, of course, incarnate itself in personalities and in the intellectual and institutional forms congenial to each people to whom it comes. And this means, further, that in many cases we must, in the future, transfer the emphasis from the building up of large and elaborate institutions, often too complicated and expensive for local management, to the less formal channels of influence, and the deeper permeation of individual lives by the Christ-like spirit. The needs, conditions and genius of each country must determine the methods to be used.

Finally, we believe that these new attitudes are essentially creative and forward-looking, and that, in proportion as they come to be generally known and accepted, they will inevitably awaken a new glow of spiritual devotion in all our Churches. We are by no means "defeatists" with regard to world-wide Christianity, but are confident that, through this newer spirit and method of approach, now so hopefully emerging, our Churches will go forward to serve the world with clearer vision, deeper consecration, and increased power.

(Prepared by a committee consisting of President Palmer, of the Chicago Theological Seminary, Superintendent Berger, of Missouri, and Miss Preston, of New York. Adopted unanimously in the closing session of board, October 23, 1930.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The 110th annual session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference was held in South Norfolk Christian Church October 29-31, 1930, Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor.

The attendance was good, the reports and discussions were earnest, frank, and in good spirit. The weather was fair after the first day, which was rainy, and all enjoyed the rain because it was so much needed. The entertainment was real Christian hospitality, and the special addresses were well prepared and delivered as real messages in the interest of the kingdom of God.

President Jenkins, of Piedmont College, and Dr. S. C. Heindel, assistant to President Harper in the "Million-Dollar Campaign," both of the Congregational Church, came with Dr. Harper, and all three made brief addresses while the report on education was under consideration. Dr. W. H. Denison, Secretary of the General Convention, of Dayton, Ohio, and C. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, were also welcome and useful visitors.

The collections from the Churches totaled $8,902.86, which fell short only $584.86 of last year, and some of the Churches have not sent in their checks. This is very encouraging when the hard times is considered.

The most outstanding public address was the illustrated lecture, "The Passion Play," on Thursday night, by Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor of the Christian Temple, who had visited the "Passion Play" in September of this year.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Secretary of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, had returned from a meeting in Wisconsin and was present at this Conference.

Emphasis was placed on the subject of temperance in a strong report in favor of the observance of law, including the eighteenth amendment. The discussion of this report brought forth strong convictions in favor of temperance and the eighteenth amendment.

A responsive chord was struck when several speakers expressed their convictions that the Conference needs to increase and cultivate the spiritual in all the Churches. The thought was expressed, or implied, that if the pulpit and the pew would become more spiritual it would solve financial problems sooner than talking all the time about money. The Conference is planning for greater evangelistic effort and greater spiritual development and increase of members in the local Churches for the coming year.

The Conference will meet next year with Cypress Chapel Church, where Rev. R. E. Brittle is pastor.

The climax of the last day of the Conference was the adjournment to go to Rosemont to lay the corner-stone of the new Rosemont Christian Church, now in course of erection. The Rosemont Church was organized by Rev. Dr. J. Pressley Barrett on August 14, 1902, with fourteen members. It was dedicated by Pastor Dr. G. O. Lankford on June 22, 1919. The following have served as pastors during the twenty-eight years of its history: Revs. J. W. Harrell, J. W. Barrett, W. D. Harward, C. C. Ryan, McDaniel Howsare, D. A. Keys, W. H. Denison, G .O. Lankford, W. C. Hook, B. F. Black, and J. F. Morgan (since September 1, 1925).

Two buildings before the present one have been erected and used—the first in 1902, the second in 1915, and the present, enlarged and greatly improved for modern use, now in course of erection. The corner-stone was laid at 3 P. M., October 31, 1930, and the service was in charge of Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, president of the Conference. Dr. I. W. Johnson read the 122nd Psalm, this writer read 1 Cor. 3:9-23, Hardcastle offered prayer, and Dr. L. E. Smith delivered a fine and appropriate address. Chairman of the building committee, O. F. Smith, read a brief sketch of the movement, and Contractor J. L. Abbitt placed the stone in the corner of the building designed by the architect, B. F. Mitchell. The choir rendered appropriate hymns, led by Pastor Morgan. The self-sacrificing spirit means that the new building will be dedicated free from debt, and it will probably be in February, 1931.

ELON LETTER.

In any adequate handling of education, we must face the problems of the curriculum. Is education something to be passed over from the teacher to the student? Is the student the subject or the sovereign in the educational process? Is the teacher the guide or the stimulator? How does learning take place, anyway? What is the focal point, the center in educational procedure?

The answer that we give to these questions will very largely determine the result to be achieved in education. We do not have time to enter into the several theories that are advocated for the curriculum now. Let me state positively the theory that is now beginning to win its way in the thinking of a growing group of educators. According to this theory, we should not speak of students or pupils, but of growing persons. Also according to this theory, the minds of these growing persons must take the initiative in all learning. The teacher, therefore, is the sympathetic stimulator of the growing person, and has achieved his rightful goal when he has inspired the growing person to sit in judgment on his own experience in terms of the racial experience and to arrive at a voluntary program of action on a basis of the meanings and values that have been discovered as inherent in these two types of experience. In other words, the teacher should stimulate the minds of growing persons to solve the problems arising in their personal experience, making use of the funds of information that have come down to us from the past in terms of meanings and values. This view of education means the exaltation of life and suggests that we are to come to college not to get on, not to be leaders, not to adjust ourselves to the personal ideals and practices of the social order, not to orientate ourselves in reference to them, but to effect changes in our environment by making use of the experience of the best as throwing light on our own experience, in terms of the ultimate meanings and values. Education, therefore, we would define as a method designed to effect changes in growing persons; or, to quote John Dewey, "as a continuous reconstruction of experience."

This objective of education, which really is life, was enunciated some 1900 years ago by the distinguished Teacher of Galilee, who said that He had come into the world that men might have life, and have it more abundantly. It is certainly exhilirating to discover that educators, after hundreds of years of speculation and experimentation, have come to the point where they locate the supreme educational process in life and agree that education has achieved its ultimate purpose when it promotes life—a view expressed by Jesus nearly two thousand years ago.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

There are hundreds of Church schools and colleges distributed over the United States and others in process of formation. Many of them have splendid facilities, and some of them have endowments in six figures or more, but there is hardly a Church school or college in this country that has its full quota of students. Not only should these schools be filled with students from our homes, but money and equipment should be supplied by our Church people at large. There is not a Protestant communion that would not do well to largely increase its financial appropriation for the support of the Church schools and colleges for this reason: these colleges have supplied the Churches with ministers and the world with successful business men; have taken young men with a zeal to become ministers, and have supplied the knowledge that turned that zeal into power.

Many of the present-day Church colleges were widely known by reason of their graduates long before the establishment of any of our great universities; in fact, the first presidents of a number of America's largest and best universities were ministers, and it was the Church college that first inspired the State to provide the splendid literary and technical institutions we now enjoy. Some argue that the Church college has outlived its usefulness and is doomed to die. They say that non-support and non-attendance is but the psychological result of present-day tendencies in education.

I am not attempting to bolster up the cause of the Church college, because, in the first place, I do not believe that it needs bolstering up; but from my personal investigations of Church colleges and looking at the matter from a standpoint of a particular religious body, I am firmly of the opinion that the Church college, and the Church college alone, must supply the ministers, missionaries, social workers and leaders in the field of Christian education. This does not say that the State universities could not do much to overcome the present ministerial deficiency and inefficiency, and I am glad to note the attitude toward the Church and religion in general now being held by our educators in these great universities.

If religion is to progress, it will be with the assistance and co-operation of education, and vice versa. In some States, Bible chairs and Bible colleges have been planted alongside the State institutions to furnish religious atmosphere and instruction. The Bible chairs and Bible colleges are doing their work well, but it should be stated that 80 per cent of the Protestant leadership still has come out of Church colleges. This being true, no person should fail to support Piedmont Junior College, to the full measure of their ability, that holds membership with any of the Churches of the Southern Christian Convention. We cannot make ourselves believe that any will fail to do their whole duty when their pastor presents the needs of our college through the budget or offering, and we are more than confident that none of our ministers who have charge of Churches will neglect to present its cause. Keep your eyes on the progress of the work of Dr. Frank E. Jenkins for Piedmont Junior College and respond to the extent of your ability when he issues orders, for they will all challenge the best in you.

THE ELON MILLION-DOLLAR CAMPAIGN.

Elon College has definitely entered upon its campaign for one million dollars. Authority to undertake this work was given the institution and its executives by the Campaign Committee of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the Southeast in the session held at the college on October 21st. The Million-Dollar Campaign Committee consists of the following persons: From the Christian Church—Dr. L. E. Smith, Mr. P. J. Carlton, Col. E. E. Holland, Col. J. E. West, Col. J. H. Harden, Mr. F. F. Myrick, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and Mr. Chas. D. Johnston; from the Congregational Church—Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, Dr. E. W. Boshart, Miss Ida S. Robinson, Dr. J. Brainard Thrall, and Dr. J. Brittan Clark. It was this committee that, on October 31st, met at the college and set up the campaign.

The campaign is to be concluded, according to the terms of the committee's program, not later than the 30th of June, 1936. During the years of the campaign, $50,000 will be raised each year for current expenses, as heretofore, and a proportion of the million dollars to discharge indebtedness and add to the college's endowment. The expenses of the campaign will be borne by the alumni of the college, through a campaign sustaining fund, which they will raise. This is certainly a generous act on the part of the alumni of the college and shows their vital interest in their alma mater. Nothing could give more confidence in the success of the campaign than the decision to do this by the alumni. It is estimated that the cost of the campaign will not be less than $10,000 a year for travel, printing, salaries, etc.

The joint campaign committee elected to membership on a general committee for the campaign all the trustees of the college, all pastors of Congregational and Christian Churches in Virginia and the Carolinas, the president of the Woman's Board of the Southern Christian Convention, and Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Secretary of the Church Extension Board of the Congregational Church of the Southeast, together with presidents and secretaries of Conferences of the two Churches in Virginia and the Carolinas. It is the purpose of the campaign committee to add to its general committee at its next session. The campaign committee will meet upon the call of the chairman, from time to time, but will hold at least two meetings a year—one in February and one in May.

To transact the business of the joint campaign committee during the interim period between the sessions, an executive committee, consisting of Col. J. H. Harden, Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, and Mr. F. F. Myrick, was appointed. This committee will work particularly with the executives in the campaign.

The committee has elected to assist President Harper in this campaign, Mr. S. C. Heindel, a man of proven ability in the field of college finance, and a member of the Congregational Church. Mr. Heindel, who comes to Elon as assistant to the president, has been associated with Piedmont College, at Demorest, Ga., for almost ten years, for some time as treasurer and business manager, and later as secretary to the president, with special reference to the carrying on of the financial campaign of the college.

In his work there, he was successful in finding new friends for the college and in developing their interest in a substantial way; his efforts have brought in many thousands of dollars for current expenses each year, and during the last twelve months he has, in addition, helped to secure in cash and pledges the additional $125,000 for endowment which was sought. He is especially familiar with the Congregational Churches and constituency through the East and North, among whom his name is well known.

Mr. Heindel first came into college work with a background of training and experience in the publicity and advertising field and has been able to make good use of his ability in this line in developing interest in the educational work with which he has been connected.

A native of Wisconsin and christened Sydney Clark Heindel (the full name representing a mixed Pennsylvania German and New England ancestry), he moved South about seventeen years ago, and through residence and travel has had opportunity to become familiar with educational and social conditions in our Southern States and to become in spirit a loyal Suotherner.

Mr. and Mrs. Heindel and their eight-year-old son have moved to Elon and are living near the college campus.

MR. SYDNEY CLARK HEINDEL.

The writer does not hesitate to say that he has never attended a more enthusiastic meeting connected with the future of our college than the session of the joint campaign committee on October 21st, and despite the hard times of which we have heard so much, I believe that the contagion of this inspirational meeting will spread through the Churches and college constituency.

Particularly gratifying was the fine attitude of the Congregational members of the joint committee. There is no question that these brethren are solidly behind the college in this campaign. It was regretted, of course, that Dr. J. B. Clark could not be present, but it was certainly gratifying to have him suggest that our campaign should be made "for Elon College, the outstanding educational institution in the South of the now merged denominations, Christian and Congregational." This seemed to express the general attitude of our Congregational brethren. They have sensed evidently in Elon College an opportunity to produce an indigenous leadership for the whole Church in the Southeast, and with the enthusiasm for education which has always characterized the Congregationalists there is no doubt that real support is to come to our college from this group in our larger constituency.

For our own Churches, the joint committee voted that the quotas adopted two years ago, as suggestions to Churches for their gifts, should be used annually throughout the campaign, and that at no time during the campaign would the Churches be appealed to for more than the $36,750 which the Southern Christian Convention has voted for this purpose. It is hoped that our Churches will raise the Conference apportionments in full which will care for $12,750 of this amount. It is also hoped that, through individual gifts and Sunday School offerings, the remaining $24,000 will be raised in our Churches. The Congregational brethren suggested that they work out quotas for the Congregational Churches in the Southeast, and that these Churches be asked to raise these quotas as their definite contribution to the million-dollar fund.

Our college deserves the support of the people, and will undoubtedly receive it in this great effort to place the college on a firm and solid foundation financially.

The joint campaign committee went on record as determined to stand by the executives it has chosen for this campaign in their laudable efforts to strengthen Elon, and we hereby call upon our Churches and individual members to pray earnestly for this campaign and give liberally for its completion. This is evidently the Lord's work, and it is our prayer, and will be our purpose to cause it to prosper in every way.

L. E. Smith, Chairman,
Campaign Committee.

FROM REV. G. D. HUNT.

There may have gone out from our recently united Conference an erroneous idea of our Christian Conference, some thinking we would not have another meeting of our body. We will meet again, however, and transact business as we have in the past, and at about the same time we have been meeting. The place is in the hands of the executive committee. Any Church that would like to entertain the body next year will please confer with the executive committee, and do it at an early date, for some other Church may be waiting. It has been suggested that we change the name of our body from the Alabama Christian Conference to the Alabama Christian Association, to conform to the regulations of the United Church, which change, so far as I can see, will not interfere in any way with our Christian work. We will go right on with all our Church enterprises and the general Church work—missions, education, orphanage and everything will be carried on as before. Now, we are hoping for a good year in every phase of our Church work, and we desire every Church to know that the committee on apportionments has decreased their apportionment for the Conference work 50 per cent for next year. Let us all get busy and begin at the beginning to do a better work for the Lord than ever before. May we be much in prayer. May the Lord lead us. If any of the pastors of the Christian Church desire my services as an evangelist, or missionary, or educational rally work, please let me know as early as is convenient. I have requests already from quite a few of the Congregational Churches for revival work. This is important; please look after it as early as you well can.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(November.)

Father, for Jesus' sake, make His Church glorious even now. Sooner than outer efficiency, increase inner sufficiency—the soul-caliber that qualifies for the greatest evangelistic outreach. Within Zion bounds, O God, may the Pentecostal pressure of sharing and giving be felt from center to rim, and may stewardship find its place in all of life. Grant to Church officers discernment rightly to interpret and impress stewardship, and lay hard upon the consciences of all who lead the duty and responsibility of securing to the Church and making permanent for its care and expansion, the principle of "God's portion." From self into service, we pray for all, in Jesus' name. Amen.

MISSIONARY THANKOFFERING.

The thankoffering from the women's societies will go this year as a memorial in celebration of the merger of the Congregational and Christian Church boards, the offering to be divided half to home and half to foreign missions. Our General Woman's Board voted as follows:

"A great thankoffering to be divided between home and foreign missions in celebration of the merger. This is most commendable, as it will greatly help in closing the year. After January 1st, our Foreign Mission Board and the American Board will be united in their work on the foreign field. It is hoped that the thankoffering will be the largest in our history."

Respectfully,

MRS. J. A. WILLIAMS, Pres.,

MISSIONARY EDUCATION MATERIAL.

BY MISS PRISCILLA CHASE.

I wonder how many of you are looking for materials for your Young People's Society, your Women's Society, the Church school, the children's Church, or the junior society. Have you ever stopped to think that not only our denominations, but the Missionary Education Movement, is busy preparing materials for just such needs.

First, let me suggest that you write to Rev. J. L. Lobingier for the following materials: "Helps for Your Program of Missionary Societies in the Local Church" and "Missionary Education Material for 1930 and 1931," published by the Missionary Education Movement. The "Envelope Series," published quarterly by the American Board, 10 cents a year, is well worth its price.

Let me suggest some of the materials that you may find most useful. We'll begin at the top of the list, so far as age is concerned. If you have not read "India Looks to Her Future," by Oscar MacMillan Buck, you most certainly have missed a thorough and interesting description of things Indian. India at least needs intelligent sympathy in her struggle for self-determination, and you who are reading books published by the Missionary Education Movement, written by people who have lived in India for years or made a very careful study of her needs, will help more than anything I know of to make us all intelligent on the subject of India. And then there is that sore spot of the western hemisphere, the West Indian Islands. Samuel Guy Inman has not minced matters at all in his treatment of the subject in "Trailing the Conquistadores."

It is difficult to choose just one or two from the wealth of material for intermediates and young people, but I make the following suggestions: "India on the March," by Alden H. Clark, for many years a missionary in India, and now one of the secretaries of the American Board, used with "Do You Like Our Country," by Ruth Isabel Seabury, ought to keep a group of young people or adults busy and happy in finding out what India is like. Then if you want just a plain story book on India, get "Freedom," by Wealthy Honsniger Fisher, or one of the books written by our Isabel Brown Rose, "The Star of India," for instance, or "Diana Drew." Winifred Hulbert has written a fascinating book called "West Indian Treasures" and a course book to go with it.

The children's books are better than ever, and that is saying a whole lot. "The Golden Sparrow," by Irene Mason Harper, is one of the most charming study books for juniors that the writer has been privileged to use. We used it this summer in our vacation schools in the Carolinas, together with "Bhaskar and His Friends," by Clara G. Lararee, for the primary group. And then there are the courses on the West Indies, "Sugar Is Sweet," by Dorothy McConnell and Margaret Forsythe, and "Children of Sea and Sun," by Mabel Garnett Wagner, for primary. These last four will make excellent material for a quarter's work in the Church school—the junior missionary society, the week-day school, and especially for a ten-day session of a vacation school. Of course, there is a lot of supplementary material that makes any of these courses much more interesting; pictures, maps and picture maps are all available for use with these books.

And now just a few other suggestions. If your women's society is making out its program, don't fail to get the leaflet mentioned above, "Program Suggestions for Women's Societies in the Local Church." And have you ever tried a reading campaign in your Church? Leaflets are available in the office of Mr. Lobingier, together with suggestions for conducting such a campaign. Most of us read all too little, and when it comes to world friendship, religious education, world peace, we are all woefully lacking, and such a campaign in our Churches or any one of the organized groups in the Church would be one of the finest ways of establishing interest in things outside our own narrow circles.

And then is your Church school enrolled as a world-service school? Whether Congregational or Christian, it certainly ought to be. In order to receive the free material, a school promises to use it and to contribute to Christian-Congregational benevolences. This material consists of primary and junior graded booklets, each containing four units of thirteen sessions each, and material for the intermediate adult department this year on the theme for the year, together with material on State work for the spring quarter and permanent material on community work for the summer quarter.

And last but by no means least, there is the "Guest Book," with its group of friends so anxious to know you through the written page and to have you know them and enjoy their work as they do. By all means, invite these twenty-eight folks into your homes and begin an acquaintance with them, for they are well worth your knowing.

And if the writer can be of any assistance in helping you find world friendship material, she is only too glad to be of service.

COMMITTEES ON MORAL REFORM.

During the month of November four annual Conferences of the Southern Christian Convention will be in session. During the time these bodies are in session, various committees will report and these reports will be discussed and adopted. We wonder sometimes how much real thought and time is put on the preparation of these reports. I have just been looking through "The Annual" and reading the reports of the different committees. Judging from the contents of some of the reports and their relation to the real work the committees are supposed to do, some of these reports, it appears to the writer, are far-fetched and of little value.

It is evident that the work of the different committees is given little consideration during the year—some, maybe not all. In some cases, the chairman probably could not, without looking in "The Annual," name the other members of his committee, appointed at the last session of Conference. The committee report is too often written after Conference convenes. The chairman finds out who the other members of his committee are, calls them together, if they are present, and the report is hurriedly drawn up. Very few of these committees hold any meetings during the year, or do any really constructive work. What they happen to think of and write into their report after they get to Conference is about all there is to it, and this is usually forgotten until Conference meets again the next year. Isn't it a shame, brethren, that we put so little real thought and effort into the work of the Master's kingdom!

But I am interested particularly in the work of the committee on moral reform. I would like to suggest here and now to the chairmen of these different Conference committees that, at the coming sessions, they secure the passage of a motion changing the names of these committees to the "Committee on Temperance and Moral Reform." In some Conferences there is a "Committee on Social Service." I maintain that the terms "moral reform" and "social service" are not definite enough. A stranger, looking casually through our "Annual," without taking the time to read the reports, would conclude that our Church is not much interested in temperance and prohibition. It is for this reason that I am suggesting that a "Committee on Temperance and Moral Reform" be made uniform in all the Conferences, instead of having committees under different names working along different lines.

Temperance and prohibition are the two livest topics before the American people today. It is the business of the Church to see that the prohibition law is enforced, and that it remains a part of the Constitution. The Christian Church has always taken her place in the front ranks in the fight against liquor, but the time has come when we should broadcast to the world our position on this important matter and express in the most emphatic way our determination to join with the other forces of righteousness, to fight to the last ditch to maintain the dignity and honor of our nation and to support its Constitution. May I suggest to the brethren now serving on the committees on moral reform in the different Conferences that they devote much of their reports this year to the discussion of this very important subject, and that the report close with a set of ringing resolutions condemning the wet, secular press and the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment for the insidious propaganda they are circulating and the slanderous charges they make against the Church and her ministry for attempting to prevent the return of the legalized sale of liquor. The enemies of prohibition have made it a political issue purposely, thinking that, since the Church has always been slow to take part in politics, they would have the fight all their own way. We must now meet them on their own ground. It is the business of the Church to challenge any organization that attempts to encourage disrespect for law and break down the standards of morals of our young people. This, the above-named agencies make bold to do in every conceivable way, without regard to truth or principle. The man or organization that favors traffic in liquor cannot be trusted. Contact with liquor, in any form, has never improved the morals of any person and never will, while it has been the means of the downfall of millions.

The time has come when the most intensive teaching of temperance, law observance and good citizenship, both in the Church and in the home, is imperative. The young people of today are intelligent, they read, they observe, they think for themselves. They never saw a saloon. They know nothing about the curse of that terrible institution, when it flourished on every principal street-corner in its palmy days. These young people read the secular press of today, and without knowing better, they are led to believe the slanderous charges made against prohibition by its enemies. It is surprising how strongly some of these youngsters will argue for personal liberty and the "hip-pocket flask." It is too often the case that the parents in the home are to blame for this belligerent attitude. When the father himself, in the presence of the son and daughter, criticises the prohibition law, boasts of his personal liberty, and in defiance makes and serves his home brew, who is to blame if the daughter goes out at night on wild parties and comes home drunk, and the son becomes a criminal because he undertakes to violate any law he does not like. A friend of mine was telling me only the other day of dropping into the home of a Church elder (not of our denomination, however) where another elder was visiting. As they were leaving, the host asked if they would like to have something to drink; said he could serve either "corn" or "home brew." The trouble with this whole proposition is that the Church is not lining up solidly in favor of prohibition and its enforcement. When Church members stop patronizing bootleggers and violating the law in their own homes, the whole question will be settled in short order. These are questions to which the Church, in annual Conference, should give expression through the reports of the committees appointed to consider and study such problems.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson VII—November 16, 1930.

The Believing Centurion.

Golden Text: "And they shall come from the East and West, and from the North and South, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God."—Luke 13:29.

Lesson: Matt. 8:5-13.

A Centurion.

A centurion was an officer in charge of one hundred men in the Roman army or legions. His ordinary duties were to drill his men, inspect their arms, food, and clothing, and to command them in the camp and in the field.

Here was a man, an officer of the army, who had a warm, human heart. One of his servants was sick with a disease which probably corresponded to what we know as paralysis. It would have been an easy thing for this centurion, with his authority, to get rid of the sick servant and to call a well man. As a matter of fact, the standards of the time would rather encouraged it. But this centurion had sympathy and a warm heart. He was concerned about his servant; so concerned that he wanted to do something about it. It must be kept in mind that the centurion was a foreigner, a Gentile, and this story is a rebuke to the Jews for their bigotry and their pride—their feeling that they had the virtues of life and that other peoples were much inferior to them.

A Petition.

The centurion had not only a warm heart; he had an humble spirit. He came to Jesus—it would have been a bitter pill for some people to swallow that a Roman had to go to a Jew for help—and besought Jesus that He would heal his servant. With that ready response which always characterized Jesus when people sought Him for help, He immediately said that He would go with the centurion.

But this centurion had a fine sense of humility. He did not feel that he was worthy to have Jesus enter his house. There is also perhaps a fine touch of courtesy here, in that he did not want to embarrass Jesus by having Him, a Jew, enter into a Gentile's house. The centurion, therefore, suggested that it would not be necessary for Jesus to go with him; He had only to speak the word. The man's reasoning was sound. If he, an ordinary man, could speak and command obedience by virtue of his authority, how much more could Jesus command obedience because of the authority of His moral purity and power! It was an unconscious testimony to the impression that Jesus made on the men of His day.

A Surprising Faith.

The man's faith actually surprised Jesus. It plainly says, "and when Jesus heard it, He marveled." Here was something so unusual and so vital that Jesus Himself was surprised. It was a faith that He had not found among His own people—those who were supposed to have a knowledge of the true God.

How Jesus' words must have sobered His disciples and stung the scribes and Pharisees! In a foreigner, a Gentile, a man on whom the Jews looked down, Jesus had found qualities of mind and heart that He had not found in those who prided themselves both on their superiority and on their religious perfection. And what a rebuke His words are to those today who are so obsessed with national pride or racial prejudice that they cannot see in the peoples of other lands or the people of other races in their own lands capacities for the finer and better things of life. One of the marks of a real Christian is his respect for the capacities of other peoples.

A Reversal of Standards.

"Many will come from the East and West, the North and the South, and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven—that was the goal of the Jew, to share the kingdom with the faithful. To know that foreigners were to have a part in that—well, that was disturbing and humiliating. But that was not all. Many of those who thought that they were sons of the kingdom would not even get into the feast. They lacked that quality of mind and heart which would make it possible for them to enter into the spiritual order which was characteristic of the kingdom. When any man thinketh that he standeth, let him take heed lest he fall.

A Miraculous Cure.

"And the servant was healed in that hour." It is beyond the sphere of ordinary explanation as to how the cure was effected. But he who accepts the great miracle of Jesus Himself need not be troubled at the lesser miracle of how this Jesus healed the man even at a distance. He who was the Son of God and who God approved by signs and wonders which He did had power to set in motion those healing forces that restored the sick man to health. As a matter of fact, this story brings to us not only the story of a man's amazing faith, but also the assurance that Jesus Christ was Lord of the forces of disease. God hath put all things in His power, and he who is wise will seek to put himself in harmony with the one who is the Great Physician.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Miss Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, November 16, 1930.

Topic: "Jesus, an Example of Stewardship.

Scripture: John 17:1-7; Luke 2:49.

A steward is a person entrusted with the management of the estates or affairs of another. Stewardship involves three things. First, the steward has possession and control of the property or affairs of the owner. Second, he is responsible for the things in his care. Third, he must give an account to the owner upon his request—even without previous warning. The real steward has the work of his employer in mind and forgets self.

Jesus practiced stewardship. He knew no other relationship to God than that He was God's steward. He was to "be about His Father's business" always. He was "to work, for His Father worked." That was His one purpose—to labor at His Father's work. When the time of temptation came, He put Satan aside, saying that He would serve only the Lord (Matt. 4:10).

A real steward is faithful—faithful to the one who has appointed him. Jesus was faithful. He was faithful through the time of temptation, through times of great popularity, through apparent easily won success, through the failures of His followers, through the time of desertion by friends and followers in the hour of greatest suffering in the garden, and finally in death. He lived for one purpose—to glorify God.

Just as He lived, Jesus taught others to live. His followers are to be stewards for God. Oftentimes we think only of the stewardship of money when we think of stewardship. But the stewardship of money cannot be all of stewardship any more than money can be all of life. All we have and are is God's. We are stewards for Him. What, then, is involved in stewardship? Discuss this question in your meeting.

Other topics that may be discussed are:

1. Why be stewards?
2. Why I believe in stewardship.
3. The stewardship of personality.
4. The stewardship of talents.
5. The stewardship of a life-work.
6. The stewardship of influence.
7. The stewardship of time.
8. The stewardship of material things.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

The thirty-second session of the Alabama Christian Conference, and first joint session of the Congregational and Christian Conference met with the Church at Noon Day on October 14-16, 1930.

The Conference was called to order by Vice-President Rev. C. W. Carter, in the absence of the president, who was detained because of a funeral. Rev. C. W. Carter delivered the annual address in a forceful manner, to the delight of all who were present. The same officers were re-elected, as follows: President, Rev. G. D. Hunt; vice-president, Rev. C. W. Carter; secretary, Rev. G. H. Veazey; assistant secretary, Rev. G. S. Hunt; treasurer, J. W. Payne.

All our ministers were present except one, and most of our Churches were represented. We had a fine, inspirational session of Conference, but the finance came up short. There were thirteen Congregational ministers and thirty-five delegates present. The Congregationalists organized their Conference in the afternoon of the first day. They also used the first evening. Dr. Jenkins preached at 11 A. M. the second day.

The work of the Christian Conference was finished the second day, and also the official vote was taken that united us into one body, or brotherhood. It was unanimous. Rev. G. D. Hunt was elected moderator of the united body. The young people held a discussion group late in the afternoon, led by Miss Margurite Davison, followed by a picnic-supper over on a hill nearby, with vesper service around a bonfire. They reassembled at the Church at 7 o'clock and had reports from the various Young People's Societies that were very inspiring, followed by addresses by Miss Dora Bracken and Prof. W. C. Edge.

The morning of the third day was taken up with ten-minute speeches from the Congregational ministers that was enjoyed to the fullest extent by all who were present. The afternoon was taken in winding up the business of the Conference.

The first session of the united Conference, known as the Alabama Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches, will convene with the Congregational Church at Phenix City, on the second Tuesday in November, 1931.

While the report of the committee on schools and colleges was pending, an offering of $123 in cash and subscriptions was taken for Piedmont Junior College.

We greatly missed the happy association and good council of our Mission Secretary, who always adds so much inspiration and enthusiasm to a meeting of this kind. In spite of the financial depression in this section, the great cause of our Master is going on, and His servants are not going to give up the fight till the last battle is fought and the last victory has been won.

Miss Sallie Poore was granted license to preach.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

LIFE'S BEST SCHOOL.

"Remember mine affliction and my misery, the wormwood and the gall. My soul hath them still in remembrance, and is bowed down within me." —Lam. 3:1, 20.

"Lord . . Thou wilt prepare their heart, Thou wilt cause Thine ear to hear."—Psa. 10:17.

"Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as a little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of God."—Matt. 18:4.

"The reward of humility and the fear of the Lord is riches and honor."—Prov. 22:4.

Moses was an educated man, educated in all the learning of Egypt. He was the chosen one to be the liberator of the children of Israel. This swelled his head. He felt that he was a bright and shining light and he assumed to himself the office of being his brother's saviour. It is not surprising that he had to have another training in addition to his education to prepare him for his great work. Therefore, he got the forty years in the wilderness. These forty years of wilderness training seemed to be necessary to mellow his life and to teach him that everything depends upon the Lord and not on confidence in one's own strength.

After this forty years of training, Moses had an entirely different opinion of himself. Hear him now, as the Lord calls him to this duty, pleading to the Lord that he is unworthy and incompetent to do the work which God asked him to do. A hard and bitter road had sweetened his life and made him dependent upon God instead of himself.

David was a pious and splendidly equipped man, and still he was compelled to a long term of discipline. Peter was Christ's chosen man for the apostolic Church. It was he who had to toil all the night and catch nothing; yea, who had to pass through many bitter experiences, in one of which he denied his Lord, that he might learn that the matter of his commission rested upon the Lord and not upon himself.

God's people must learn not to shut out God's power by confidence in their own strength.

Prayer.—If affliction, or sorrow, or poverty, or misfortune, prepares us for riches and glory, O Lord, enable us to see it and to submit ourselves to Thee implicitly, enduring it all for His sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE GREAT INCENTIVE.

"For when I am weak, then am I strong."—2 Cor. 12:10.

Still thinking about Moses, we have to conclude that he did wrong to decline the Lord's bidding because of his own weakness and because of the magnitude of his work. We would think that he would have been ready at once when the Lord spoke to him. However, the charge was so stupendous that hardly any other man than Moses would have dared, with humble heart and for God's sake only, to undertake it. Who is it, when going about the Lord's business, has not felt that it is the nature of the flesh to make a man timid when he should have strength in the Lord only? It may be true that one is incapable; but it is also true that God is able, through Jesus Christ, to make it possible for us to do all things which He calls upon us to do. Says He, "Who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or seeing, or blind? Have not I, the Lord? Now, therefore, go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say."

Prayer.—Lord, keep us from going when Thou dost not send us; but give us grace to go willingly when Thou dost call us. Teach us that Thy strength is made perfect in weakness. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE INESCAPABLE CHRIST.

"Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it not unto me."—Matt. 25:45.

Paul thought he was persecuting the Church. On his way to Damascus, when Christ met him and, as Billie Sunday put it, "knocked him down," he learned a larger lesson. This lesson was that the disciples, and Christ and the Church are one. "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest."

Our thought for the day is that if one wrongs a disciple, he wrongs Jesus—do good to a disciple and you do good to Jesus. After this experience, as Paul becomes a servant of Christ, the Lord Himself is in with him also. This is an experience which Paul never knew before. Now, what Paul does is the Lord's doings; that which he suffers is the sufferings of Christ; that which he accomplishes is the honor of God. Hereafter, the Lord goes with Paul and blesses him and delivers him.

Prayer.—Blessed be Thou, Lord Jesus. Thy name will be confessed and praised unto the ends of the earth. Amen.

THURSDAY.

DAVID'S TRUST IN THE LORD AND WHAT IT GOT HIM.

"I trust in Thy word . . . so shall I keep Thy law continually for ever and for ever . . . Remember the word unto Thy servant . . . this is my comfort in my affliction."—Psa. 119:41-50.

One of the first things a child of God is called upon to believe in is "If God be for us, who can be against us?" "The Lord doeth all things well to them that love and serve Him." Such a trust is an impenetrable shield against any one or anything that may be a spiritual enemy.

Many has been the times when one has felt that every thing was against him and that life is full of trouble. Often it happens that one works his way to independence and happiness when suddenly, with one fell stroke of misfortune, it all takes wings and flies away. What is your hope? "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus Christ and righteousness." Trust in God. Hold your peace. Have patience. Find the comfort of His word. God wounds only to heal. He takes only to give. "In due season we shall reap if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9).

Prayer.—All our trust in Thee is stayed, O Lord, now and at all times. Thou art our comfort. Thy word and Thy voice are a joy to us in every affliction. Help us to realize this and say it in all truth. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE RIGHTEOUS PHARISEES.

"Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5:20.

The righteousness of the Pharisees was an external righteousness and could be practiced without very much moral or spiritual effort. Perhaps some of them were sincere and kept the law "to the best of their ability." In this they imagined that they made themselves righteous before God. Even a sinner in this day and time is so advanced in Christian thinking that he would repudiate the idea that mere compliance with law was genuine righteousness.

Apparently the outstanding characteristic of these Pharisees was that of being most careful about making themselves seen of men to fast and be good; praying on the street corners, giving where the public could know they had given and think well of them, while they themselves in their business and private practices, robbed widows and orphans of rent and did other low-down things for the good of their own selfishness.

The righteousness which Jesus points out as that which must exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees is that the law of the Lord deals with the heart and demands righteousness there, and in all things; keeping one's self blameless, spotless and full of charity. "Verily, verily, I say unto you: he that heareth my word and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24).

Prayer.—O Lord, by Thy Holy Spirit, give unto us the grace and faith to stand in Thy word and on Thy right hand for ever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GOD'S GLORIOUS RIGHTEOUSNESS.

"A man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law."—Rom. 3:28.

When God forgives one of his sins, He imputes to him the merit of Christ, and adjudges him to be righteous as though he had never sinned. God reveals His own righteousness to him by forgiving him instead of punishing him, and thereupon declares him to be that righteous that none can lay anything to his charge and that he is beyond condemnation. "He spared not His only Son, but delivered Him up for us all; how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ who maketh intercession for us. . . . We are more than conquerors through Him that loved us." We believe then that he who undertakes to accuse and condemn the faithful will have to reckon with the righteousness of God himself, for such an one is but denying the righteousness of God himself and offering insult to His justice. "We are justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Jesus Christ." Our great care is that we shall be truly faithful and genuinely in Christ.

Prayer.—Gracious God, give us the light of Thy Holy Spirit, that we may acknowledge from the bottom of our hearts that we have sinned and come short of the glory of God; and let Thy Spirit make known to us the blessed law of grace and truth, through Jesus Christ our Lord, that we may believe with all our hearts and find comfort and salvation therein. Amen.

SUNDAY.

GOD'S LOVE AND LAW.

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law. . . . I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."—Matt. 5:17-19.

"God is love." If God is love, all of God's laws are love, for He cannot command anything which does not bear that love. This is what He

THE POWERS OF INFLUENCE.

"No man liveth to himself alone, and no man dieth to himself."—Rom. 14:7.

We cannot shut our lives away from men nor avoid the serious responsibility of our influence upon others. No man can go through life in isolation. As we come in contact with others, whether on high roads of public life or quiet roads of service, even those in homes, and passing on the street, we are exerting our influence over them. For none of us liveth to himself alone.

What we say influences those about us in what they say or do. Our greatest convictions and personal contributions come from personal associations. It is not propositions, demonstrations or definitions that give inspirations so much as it is the touch of one's life on another. What we are, our character and manner, our personality, touches people all along the pathway, and all are affected by what we say or do.

If a man were to make a recluse of himself and cut himself off from his fellow-men, he could not then cut himself off entirely from his influence on others. It is a fact that a single grain of iodine will color 7,000 times its weight in water; so it is that one little sin in a man's life may affect his whole body and soul and untold hundreds about him. Now it becomes a man's duty to wield a good influence over all with whom he comes in contact.

No man liveth to himself alone, is a fact. While all are different, all have one thing in common, and that is that all of us live in a society of people. We do not live to ourselves, nor we do not die to ourselves.

In Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," he says, "The good that men do is interred with their bones; the bad lives after them." I do not agree, for both good and evil live, for a tree is known by the fruit it bears. Followers of Christ are admonished to let their lights shine before men.

Cain said, "I am not my brother's keeper." So we may deny any responsibility to the man next to us, and yet heavy responsibility rests on us as to how we live, lest eating meat would cause him to stumble.

Influence a Foe.

There is a story of a little boy who followed his daddy, back in the days of the saloon. The man looking back saw his little son following him and heard him say, "I'm all right, Daddy; I'm following in your foot-tracks." Was he all right? No. There is some one following in your tracks, too; are you leading them to the open saloon, the place of vice? Each boy thinks that his daddy is the best daddy in the world, and he ought to. He even thinks that everything his daddy or mother does is perfect. A little girl asked her father, "Is God dead?" "No; why do you ask?" "I never hear you talk to Him any more."

We may not take a club in our hand and smite our brother down as Cain did, but what we do or say, what we should do may be to our brother-man's loss. A vicious life, a sinful life, a non-Church-going life, a prayerless life, and an indulgent life is always a peril to mankind, particularly to those round about us. A sinful life sends forth streams of deadly influence that ruins the multitudes around us. We are our brother's keeper.

Paul characterizes Christians as living epistles, seen and read of all men. Men may not be keen on reading their Bibles, but they read us, and even the little evil makes others fall in line.

What am I doing that lessens my influence? What that counts for nothing? In what ways am I wasting my life and talent. What hobbies or sports do I enter into that may lessen my interest in the things of God? Do I neglect my Church, my daily devotions? Am I like the man who, though given one talent, went forth and wasteth it by lack of use. Am I conscious that, as a Christian, I have no more right to waste my talents than a banker has to waste the money deposited with him. Am I like the priest and Levite, passing on the other side of duty, influencing others to do likewise? God forbid. If our lives have been on the side of evil influence, we must stop by avoiding the appearance of evil.

Influence of Force of Good.

We are to live for our brother's good—commanded to do good to all men, especially to those of the household of faith. Our influence is, therefore, to be a force of good rather than a foe for others, helpful not hurtful. Every Christian is to go forth to have a beneficial influence on all others. Each to inspire others to some loving ministry of work.

One never knows how much his influence counts. A little girl of our community lived in a home where no grace was said at the table. She was visiting in the home of another child and heard her little playmate say grace, and when she came home she said, "Mamma, Kitty has a blessing at her table, and I want us to do it, too. I will say it." So even a child may have influence over another child.

A professing Christian may inspire scores of people to greater consecration and faithfulness in his own service of Christ. He may, on the other hand, by severe criticism and indifference, throw a wet blanket on every sincere endeavor made by the Church and the pastor for the salvation of man.

People all over the world are watching Christian people. If we fail, Christ fails. If we live for Christ we reveal Him to others. Many of us may even wish to not have this responsibility on us, but that does not change the fact that there are many good people getting their own notions about Christianity from you and from me. Influence is never static. It flies with the wind and no radio broadcasting machine ever sends messages out over so great a territory or wide an area as does a man by his life.

"Every good word spoken in this world, every sweet song sung, every holy thought or impulse of blessing started shall go on and on until the end of all things. Our works do follow us; the things we do for Him here and influence we give shall not die with us."

Arthur Cummnock entered school at Harvard at a time when standards were very low. The students made light of the things excellent and righteous; they lived loose, immoral lives. This young man went to work and lived before them a lofty life, full of high principles, and for four years was faithful in his living. Not an easy thing to do, but steadily he won to himself and was honored as the one man who had done more for his college than all the rest for bringing purity and good.

Another story is told in the Missionary Review of a man who was sent out by the government with a definite understanding not to utter a word about Christian religion in Japan during schools hours. He faithfully kept the contract, and not a word was said to influence the young men; but so beautiful was his life and so blameless his example that unconsciously forty of the students met in a grove near the college and signed a covenant, pledging themselves to abandon idolatry. Twenty-five of them entered Kioto School for Christian training, and some are now preaching the gospel which their teacher had unconsciously recommended.

FAMILY ALTAR.

came to fulfill, and the whole message of Christ's ministry centers in that one idea. "The greatest of these is love."

If the foregoing is true, we, who are the object of God's love to whom His laws of love are applied, fulfill his law to that extent we love, and this He commands us to do. He summed up the whole of man's conduct as related to the kingdom thus: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another" (John 13:34).

Prayer.—Holy and righteous God, teach us to know the gravity and rigor of the law, that we may see our sins and be truly penitent. Teach us to believe in the fullness of Thy love and to so live unto Thee that we may have it in our own hearts and lives. Pour this out upon us and save our souls. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our Thanksgiving offering has already begun to come in. My good friend, Dr. W. H. Denison and his good wife, have the honor of being the first to contribute this year. Bro. B. Drake, of Franklin, Va., was second, and Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Dunn, of Lynchburg, Va., came in third, but all the same week. It gives us a start on our Thanksgiving offering and cuts the amount to raise that much. We have a great many people who could mail us their check for $5, $10, $25, or perhaps $100 if they could think of it as if they knew the real need. Our Thanksgiving offering campaign is on, and will continue through November and December. It is our earnest prayer that our people will come to our rescue and help us reach our goal of ten thousand dollars for our special Thanksgiving offering. We want every Church and Sunday School to make an offering this year. The Orphanage is greatly in need.

Make some sacrifice to do it, if need be. It will make you a better person. It will bring you closer to the Master. The Master gave all for us. What have we really done for Him? "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these . . . ye have done it unto me."

If the Master was here in person and asked you for bread, would you deny Him? You say, "No, I would gladly give Him." The Master says to you and to me, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." We have the opportunity in this Thanksgiving campaign to show our love to the Master by our Thanksgiving offering. What will we do about it?

BE FAIR TO YOUTH.

Adults, and not youth, are responsible for the so-called "youth problem." Adults are responsible for the world youth finds. Adults are responsible for the Church youth finds. Adults are responsible for youth itself. Whatever youth are, whether good or bad, they have found their examples among adults. And whatever the shortcomings of youth may be—whatever their idiosyncrasies—adults are to blame. Adults make the amusement world for youth. Adults make the educational world for youth. Adults make the religious world for youth. And whatever is wrong with youth today is, in the major, due to the wrong attitudes, the wrong ideals, the wrong objectives, the wrong viewpoints of adults. In short, the so-called "youth problem" resolves itself into the adult problem.

Our emphasis on the youth problem accentuates the problem itself. Tell Johnnie that he is a bad boy, and he is very likely to live up to the reputation you give him. The fact that adults have emphasized the youth problem is at least in part responsible for youth living up to the reputation that adults have given them.

Let's be fair to youth. As adults, let us accept the blame for giving youth their disillusionments, for giving them the world as it is. When adults live as they should, youth will do the same.

OBITUARIES.

JOHNSON.

Dr. L. F. Johnson died on October 13th at his home, Rutherford, N. J. Bro. Frank, as he was familiarly called, had been somewhat unwell for some time, and not until about two weeks before the end came did he give up his work and take his bed. He preached twice on Sunday before he was taken ill on Monday. He died at the age of 56, having spent some thirty years or more in the gospel ministry. He served his Church faithfully and well, holding a number of pastorates both in the South and North. He organized the Palm Street Christian Church, in Greensboro, and was its first pastor. For several years he was superintendent of the orphanage at Carversville, Pa.

Bro. Johnson was true to the word of God, preaching the fundamentals for the faith. He was kind and generous in his thought and expression towards others, of a jovial disposition, and therefore had many friends.

The body of the deceased was brought to Raleigh, N. C., by rail; then the hearse met him and brought him to his brother's, C. N. Johnson, of Varina. The services were conducted in Wake Chapel Church, seven or eight ministers being present and the writer being assisted by Dr. C. H. Rowland. The body was carried to the cemetery at Pleasant Union, Harnetts County, the old home Church of his wife. The flowers were many and beautiful, even though some eighteen designs were put off the train at Richmond by mistake.

Left behind to miss him are his wfie, who before her marriage was Miss Flora Long; L. F., Jr., Horace Mann, and Victor Long. Besides these, there are four brothers, one sister and many friends. May God's richest blessings rest upon and comfort the weeping ones and bring us all, who love and cherish his memory, together again when we part no more.

Mrs. Johnson returned to her home in Rutherford, N. J., with two sons, soon to be joined by the third, L. F., Jr., who was in India, and could not arrive in time for his father's burial. J. LEE JOHNSON.

KNIGHT.

The passing from labor to rest of Rev. J. W. Knight, beloved pastor of Howard Chapel congregation, has left a sadness and keen sense of loss, not only among the members of the Church, but the entire community as well. Only the softening touch of time and the blessed assurance that, though his gracious presence is no longer here to guide and cheer, our loss is his eternal gain, will lessen our sorrow. His going is to us as though a kindly beacon light shining on over our way, guiding through blinding mists and clouded skies had suddenly been extinguished, leaving us to grope our way amid treacherous shoals to a swiftly approaching shore.

He was pastor here for quite a number of years, manifesting by his godly walk and conversation his utter unselfishness and marvelous faith. Like an ever-watchful shepherd, he tended his flock; rejoiced with them in prosperity, sympathized with them in no uncertain terms in adversity, and in the hour of affliction ever pointed them upward to the Great Physician who doeth all things well.

Much sympathy goes out to his faithful wife and to his children. May a loving Heavenly Father watch over them and comfort them, as He only can. May they be constrained to follow in their father's footsteps, and at last be a reunited family in that future home of joy eternal. At that great day of days when the Master shall make up His jewels, there surely will be many stars in his crown.

He frequently officiated when a couple set sail on the sea of matrimony; also was often called upon to speak a word of comfort when loved ones were laid into their last resting-place. When called, he readily responded, for he said, on such occasions, he had an opportunity to speak a word of warning or admonition to some one who otherwise would not hear him.

Though his work here is done, his precepts, example and influence will doubtless live on and on, while he shall have entered that rest that remaineth for the people of God. May his last message to the Church be faithfully remembered: "Meet me in heaven." Though here "we often sigh for the touch of a vanquished hand and list for a voice that is still," when this life's fitful dream is over, may we all be ready to clasp hands with him on that peaceful shore where sorrow never comes and no parting words are spoken.

ELON COLLEGE

of the
CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

NEVILLE.

Departed this life, October 15, 1930, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. L. Spoon, Alamance County, N. C., John Goodman Neville, in his 87th year. He was a member of Damascus Christian Church and had been for about fifty years. He had been in declining health for some time, and when the end came he simply fell asleep. He expressed himself as being ready to go. He came to his grave in a full age. He was a Confederate veteran, member of Company K, 24th Regiment. He is survived by three daughters and two sons.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hutton and Rev. Mr. Burgess, and his body laid to rest in the Mt. Pleasant Church Cemetery, near Kimesville, N. C., where it awaits the resurrection morning. May the Heavenly Father comfort those who mourn. P. H. FLEMING.

VICKERS.

Henry E. Vickers was born November 13, 1870, and died September 6, 1930. He was married to Miss Della McCraine July 18, 1894. To this union were born six sons—Harry B., Earl W., Pitts G., Royce E., Vernon L., who survive, and Aubrey E., who died at four months of age. There were three girls—Myrtle, who died in 1909; Mrs. Erdice Perry, and Josie.

Bro. Vickers was a good citizen. He provided well for his family and sacrificed that his children might have an education. He was always a friend to the Church, and united with Ambrose Christian Church October 20, 1928. He was a good neighbor, a true friend, a loving father, a faithful companion, a valuable citizen, and a consecrated Christian. His last words were, "I'm ready to go."

He will be missed greatly in the home, community and Church, but one comforting thought is, "We know where he has gone." Funeral services were conducted by the writer, his pastor, assisted by Dr. T. B. Stanford, of Douglas, Ga., at Ambrose Christian Church, in the presence of a multitude of friends and relatives, and interment was made in Mt. Hebron Cemetery. May the Lord comfort the family, especially the wife, and sanctify his going to the good of us all.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

KAGAWA COMING.—

Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, a noted thinker and writer on religious themes, from the Orient, is to be one of the speakers at the World's Y. M. C. A. conference, at Cleveland, next August. Dr. Kagawa has recently been compelled to forego much public speaking because of the condition of his health. Those who are familiar with his great book on the ruling value of love over force, Christianity over paganism, will welcome an opportunity to hear this great man at Cleveland.

MISSION CONFERENCE.—

The Home Mission Congress will be held in Washington, D. C., December 1-5th, inclusive. This meeting is to home missions what the Jerusalem conference was to foreign missions. It will be a delegated body strictly, with 500 delegates from twenty-eight Protestant evangelical denominations. Calvary Baptist Church will entertain the congress. It would be well for the Congregational-Christian Church to be well represented by the leading home mission workers and officials especially, and the ministers generally.

CHANGE OF PULPIT.—

Dr. W. A. Lambeth, of North Carolina, who has been pastor of one of the largest Churches of Washington city, Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Church, South, to the North Georgia Conference. Mt. Vernon Place Church is one of the largest Churches of Southern Methodism, having 3,800 members. Dr. W. A. Shelton succeeds him in this largest Protestant Church in Washington. The Congregational-Christian Church should have a great Church at the national Capitol. When will the mission movement in our Church move to Washington?

WINSTON-SALEM.—

The Congregational-Christian Church has over fifty members in the prosperous city of Winston-Salem without any Church home or organization. The combined boards of the Church should soon mobilize the members we have there and organize a Church to save the membership which we have now and to make a home for many of our people who are constantly moving there for employment. There have been better times for such an organization, but there will not be a better time than at present. Who will undertake the work, organize the membership, and provide service for the congregation?

JERSEY CITY CHURCH-APARTMENT.—

The First Presbyterian Church of Jersey City, N. J., is to erect a twelve-story Church-apartment house building, costing more than $900,000. Modern religious organizations must turn more to humanitarian service if they would prove to the world the value of the practical side of religion. What the present age demands in religion is a religion that works and that proves its reality by its work. Show me your faith without your work and I will show you my faith by my work. The present in theology is toward empirical study rather than in the direction of the speculative or authoritative. A scientific age, with reference to all other subjects, naturally tends to demand more certainty in religion.

WHY NOT WE?—

Mrs. James S. Kennedy, a devout member of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., died recently and it was found that by her will she had bequeathed her entire estate, valued at approximately ten million dollars, to Church and charitable objects. The Board of Foreign Missions gets $575,000 cash, and one-fourth of the residue after certain charitable bequests are deducted. The board of ministerial relief received $200,000, and the woman's board $100,000. Why do we not hear of more bequests from members of the Christian Church for her institutions? They need them in large amounts. We shall always have small Churches unless we do great things to make the Church and her institutions great. We have a plenty of talk on loyalty, but talk without practice will not endow colleges, support orphanages, and convert the heathen. Why not we?

PSYCHIASTRIST-MINISTER MOVES.—

Rev. Moses R. Lovell, as psychiastrist-minister in Washington city, has attracted almost nation-wide attention through the success of his life-adjustment clinic, begun about three years ago. With a staff of able physicians, legal advisers and others, who gave their service gratuitously, Dr. Lovell has been able to give help to a large number of people who were suffering from mental, physical and spiritual disorders. In his attempts to bring about a proper adjustment between people who feel themselves handicapped and the world in which they lived and worked, Dr. Lovell has done an original and outstanding piece of work. His work is simply following out the application of psychology to the healing of people from troubles that are mental and spiritual somewhat as Christ did when here on earth. He commissioned His disciples to "preach the gospel and heal the sick."

FIGHTING EVILS.—

In a recent convention of Catholic women, there were twenty-six resolutions passed, ranging from the endorsement of world peace to condemnation of birth control, immoral dress and beauty contests. These women, at the Denver convention, went on record as follows: opposing attempts to Federalize education; opposing attempts at legalization for sterilization of the mentally deficient; urged an intensive study of family education to counteract teaching of birth control and companionate marriage; disapproved beauty and endurance contests; refused to lend sanction to any plan or motion picture belittling religion. What would a Protestant convention of women say to all these questions? It is time for the women of America, as a whole, to stand for all that will improve the American home and moral condition of society.

PENSION FUND LAUNCHED.—

The Disciples of Christ have launched a great pension-fund movement for ministers and missionaries. At Washington in a recent meeting, delegates gathered at about six or eight hotels in the banquet rooms 5,000 strong for the noon-day meal on Saturday, October 18th, and the plan was launched with great enthusiasm to raise eight million dollars within three years. Every member of the Church the country over is to be asked to contribute a definite sum each day toward this worthy enterprise. When all the constituent members of any Church work together for the achievement of any great enterprise, great things can be done for the kingdom in any movement for the support of the institution and enterprises of the Church. The great trouble with any Church undertaking is the lack of co-operation, unity of purpose, unanimity of spirit, and devotion to the cause. On account of the loose organization, ultra-independence and liberty, the conception of individualism run to license, and other evils too subtle to define, Churches often fail to reach their goal in their undertakings.

JAPANESE ORGANIZATIONS.—

In Japan, there are many organizations purely Japanese for the promotion of religious and civic righteousness, as well as mission work conducted by the missionaries sent from other lands. They have the National Christian Council, the Christian Educational Association, the Kingdom of God movement, the National Sunday School Association, the Christian Conference on Social Problems, the Religious Education Association. There are many others. All of these mentioned are interdenominational in scope and thoroughly Japanese in character. In some of them the missionaries are admitted as delegates, in all of them missionaries are welcomed, but have no vested rights. The Christian Social Problem Conference will hold its annual meeting this month. The following themes will be discussed: "Problems of Social Thinking," "Unemployment," "The Rural Problem," "Mutual Aid Associations." Popular interest will probably center around two lectures by Dr. Kagawa on "Christianity and the Current of Modern Thought" and "The Downfall of the Middle Class and the Mutual Aid Movement."

NOTES-PERSONALS

At the morning service in the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., Mr. C. D. West spoke in behalf of our Orphanage at Elon. Dr. Ryan also made an appeal for this most worthy cause.

One of the happiest souls at the Western Conference last week was that good old veteran, Rev. G. R. Underwood. Hanks is the home Church of Bro. Underwood, and he tried to make everybody feel happy and at home. All rejoiced to find him in better health.

One of the outstanding addresses at the Western Conference last week was that by Rev. T. Fred Wright, pastor of our Sanford Christian Church, on "Evangelism." Bro. Wright struck the keynote and emphasized the fact that evangelism is essential to Church life and growth.

Miss Graham Rowland, assistant to Dr. G. O. Lankford, of Burlington, and leader of religious education in the Burlington Church, made a splendid address before the Western Conference and delighted the audience with her personality and the merit of her utterances.

Rev. John M. Allred, Asheboro, N. C., is one of the faithful and beloved ministers of the Western Confernece, as is also Rev. H. V. Cox, of Ramseur. The Churches that these faithful men of God serve always make good reports and show increase of membership and interest.

At this writing, November 8th, Rev. Alfred Hurst, pastor of Elon College Christian Church, is quite ill at his home in Elon. Anxious hearts are praying for his recovery, and willing hands and skilled physicians are doing their best. His pulpit has been filled by others for the past two Sundays.

Mr. S. C. Heindel, assitsant to President Harper of Elon College, was introduced to the Western North Carolina Conference, and, besides making a weighty and worth-while address, made a very fine impression upon the audience and those whom he met of the Conference. Mr. Heindel is rapidly coming to be one of us.

One of the pleasant incidents of the Western Conference last week was a visit and an address by Dr. Milo J. Sweet, pastor-at-large of the Congregational Churches of the Carolinas. Dr. Sweet not only brought a greeting from the Congregational Churches, but emphasized the fact of our union of objective and of effort.

Our Georgia and Alabama Conference has made to the Western North Carolina Conference a real contribution in the person of Rev. M. A. Pollard. After attending Elon College two or more years, Bro. Pollard accepted work in, and has now become a vital part of, the Western Conference. He has served several Churches successfully the past year, and, besides being a faithful preacher of the Word, is a capable and enthusiastic leader of song.

The Western North Carolina Conference had a splendid two-day session at Hanks' Chapel last week. Rev. T. J. Green, the retiring president, delivered a splendid message at the opening of the Conference. It was a challenge to "go forward" in kingdom service. Rev. E. C. Brady, Hemp, N. C., was elected president and made a splendid presiding officer. Col. J. H. Harden, Graham, N. C., is the efficient recording secretary, and Bro. O. D. Lawrence the competent and faithful treasurer. The Conference goes next year to Shiloh.

Col. J. E. West, of Suffolk, than whom no layman in the Church is more interested in its welfare and progress, declares that one of the weaknesses of our communion is the failure to appreciate our own history and give that history to the world. We have a history that is inspiring, sacred, soul-stirring, but we do little in making known our historical acts and events. We heartily wish that some outstanding historical fact or incident could be related in THE CHRISTIAN SUN each week. It would make interesting reading and surprise many and inspire all who care for the achievements of a great Church.

Rev. M. T. Sorrell changes his address from 117 Motley Avenue to 2003 North Main Street, Danville, Va. Bro. Sorrell has had a good year with our Danville Church, and enters into the work of another year. He says: "The situation in Danville is very bad, and we desire the prayers of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The situation here at present looks as though the town may be in a right bad condition in the near future." SUN readers will understand that one of the very large cotton mills of the South is located in Danville, and that the 4,000 employees of the mill are out on strike. We join the hope that peace will soon come and an amicable adjustment may be reached and a very distressing situation be removed. Bro. Sorrell and his people have our interest and sympathy in the depression that results from such a situation.

Dr. Thomas F. Carroll, presiding elder of the Charlottesville district, Charlottesville, Va., of the M. E. Church, South, under recent date writes as follows: "At the request of Bro. Elisha Bradshaw, I am writing to you in reference to his work. Bro. Bradshaw has served as a supply in the Methodist Church for the past three years, two years of which were spent on this district. He has shown himself to be a man of character, industry and true religion. He has been popular on his work, and has been successful especially in evangelistic work. There has been absolutely no complaint against him. He is leaving our work because, by the law of the Church, supplies must give way for regular members of the Conference. If you can assist Bro. Bradshaw in getting work, your aid will be greatly appreciated." All of which means that our good Bro. Bradshaw is open for work in a Christian Church where his services may be desired. He served us faithfully, as he has served, according to Dr. Carroll, in the M. E. Church.

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

DR. McQUARRIE: We hear wtih regret that Dr. Neil McQuarrie was recently stricken after his morning service at Columbus, Ga. The sympathy of all is extended to him, and all join in earnest prayer for his complete recovery.

MISS DORA BRACKIN, religious education and Sunday School organization secretary, has been given to Alabama for the winter. She will, however, assist Dr. McElveen in survey and organization work in his Church in Atlanta during part of December.

MISS ANNIE CAMPBELL, full-time worker in south Georgia, is spending her well-deserved vacation in her old home State, Florida. Miss Marguerite Davison, of Alabama, is also on vacation at present. She will soon be going to New England for promotional work for the Extension Boards which have drafted her for a few weeks.

LOYALTY SUNDAY: Practically all the Churches of the Carolinas and Georgia are preparing for "Loyalty Sunday," November 16th. On that day these Churches are expecting, hoping, struggling to provide for the last dollar of the apportionment for 1930. Gilt-edge pledges, if not actual cash, are being sought. It looks like a banner year for these States.

KENTUCKY CONFERENCE was held at Corbin and presided over by Rev. Almon O. Stevens, who was again elected to the moderatorship. A delightful feature was the attendance upon the Conference of the Rev. Seth R. Huntington, final choice of pastor for the Union Church of Berea, which has the mammoth Christian Endeavor Society, and two professors of Berea College, Dr. William H. Walker, of the department of philosophy and religion, and Dr. James Watt Raine, author of "The Land of the Saddle Bags." These came as fraternal delegates, and Drs. Walker and Raine will co-operate with the superintendent and with Rev. A. W. Wolfe in future visits to the Christian Churches of northeast Kentucky. Dr. Walker had a convincing refutation of the new atheism in his paper, "Will We Give Up God?" Dr. Campbell, of Nashville, preached the sermon. Dr. Warren H. Denison, of Dayton, Ohio, General Secretary of the Christian General Convention, of the Christian Church, was an appreciated speaker, as was also Dr. Bloom, with his news from across the seas. Mrs. Almon O. Stevens conducted the woman's hour, and there was an enthusiastic young people's rally, in true Kentucky style, in the sessions led by Miss Marguerite Davison.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE met with Noon Day Christian Church, near Wedowee, and alternated sessions for three days with the Alabama Christian Conference. Noon Day Church is rural and has a fine new and commodious structure paid for and with money in the treasury. Rev. J. D. Dollar is pastor. The women and young people of the two Church groups had joint meetings under the leadership of Miss Marguerite Davison. Dr. Frank E. Jenkins was chosen as the preacher for both meetings. Rev. H. B. Mowbray and President Newell, of Demorest, were appreciated speakers. Congregationalists were pleased at the regularity of business procedure and at the interest manifested by the Christian Church clergy and laity who were present in numbers. Some forty-five Congregationalists from all over the State were present. Rev. C. W. Smith was the Congregational moderator. Other Congregational ministers who had parts on the program and spoke breefly were Revs. N. A. Long, M. L. Thrasher, Joseph P. Bean, J. E. Each, J. Marion Dopson, A. Calvin Nelson, Elmer W. Butler, R. A. McKay and his father Henry T. McKay, Walter H. Curl, Mathias D. Morgan, Mark L. Hargraves. Miss Fairbank, of Thorsby, was a fine addition to the fellowship. After years of efficient service as registrar and treasurer, the Rev. Elmer W. Butler resigned from those responsibilities. His is a long and honored record, both in Florida and Alabama, and he is good for a long time yet. The peak of the meeting was the action effecting organic union of the two Conferences on a constitution and by-laws similar to that in use in Indiana. This was voted unanimously and is the first organic union covering State bodies in the Southeast. The combined membership of 4,640, not counting a few Christian Churches of Alabama who are affiliated with their Georgia Conference. Each group has a school—Piedmont Junior College and Thorsby Institute. Each has evangelistic zeal. Rev. G. D. Hunt, president of the Christian Conference, was chosen moderator, associate superintendent, and evangelist of the Alabama Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches, and Rev. F. P. Ensminger was made superintendent, registrar and treasurer.

TENNESSEE CONFERENCE met with its largest Church, Pilgrim, of Chattanooga, of which Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, is pastor. Pilgrim has a new pipe organ. The Conference has a new power and momentum. Congregationalism is functioning in Tennessee, and because of the group of idealistic and industrious leaders who have worked together for a period. Rev. A. L. DeJarnette, who works sacrificially at Soddy, was the genial moderator, and is succeeded by Rev. Edwin E. White, who has a great summer parish and fine school-year field at Pleasant Hill. Principal Samuel Elder, of Pleasant Hill, made many friends while at the Conference. The sermon was preached by President Campbell, of the Seminary Foundation. The address bringing the most publicity was on the topic, "Shall We Substitute the Canadian Liquor Law for Our American Prohibition?" by Dr. Robert A. George, who spends many summers in Canada and has his eyes open. He voted "No." Robert Sparks Walker, of Pilgrim Church, poet and naturalist, is writing a book about the Brainerd Mission of the American Board after getting facts at their sources. He told of the beginnings of the first Congregational Church of Tennessee and read from the covenant and doctrinal statement which the missionaries and Cherokee Indian had for their Church over 110 years ago. President Henry C. Newell, of Piedmont College, gave a ringing address on religious education in the college. Secretary Hermon Eldredge, of the Christian Church, had a fine message and paid affectionate homage to his father-in-God, Rev. Thomas W. Howard, who laid hold of him as a boy and put him to work in the Church. Rev. Mark N. Sumner was also praised for his work in the memorial service. Dr. Marston S. Freeman had a brief for theological thinking. Rev. George W. Blount pled for the teaching of the Bible in the public schools, quoting Dean Weigle effectively. Rev. A. Nightingale and Rev. James W. Davenport spoke out of the fullness of big pastoral hearts and effective service. The ministers who had last served with the Baptists joined the Conference. Mrs. Marston B. Freeman led in the woman's work, Miss Marguerite Davison, aided by summer workers, had a large attendance at the young people's exercises.

FLORIDA MEETINGS.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the South Florida Association of Congregational Churches was held with the Church at Sanford on November 4-5th. Rev. J. Bernard Root, pastor of the Church, welcomed the delegates and he and his Church people entertained the association most hospitably. The meeting was well attended, and both the fellowship and the addresses and discussions were enjoyed. Mr. E. L. Galt, of Winter Park, was elected moderator, and Dr. Fred R. Marsh, of Eustis, was elected scribe in the absence of Mr. E. S. Burleigh, who has been registrar and secretary of this association for over thirty years. Mr. Burleigh is still in the North, recovering from the effects of a serious operation. The association sermon was preached by Dr. Clarence A. Vincent, on "The Citadel of Faith and Civilization."

Among the addresses of special interest was one on "The Pilgrim Adventure," by Prof. Edwin Osgood Grover, of Rollins College, and one by Dr. Kerrison Juniper, of St. Petersburg, on "Honolulu." The major interest of the association was on the missionary program and plans, and of special interest were the talks by Miss Dorothy Allen, of Rollins College, and Miss Annie Campbell, concerning their work during the summer in Alabama and Georgia. These two young women gained their incentive and inspiration for this work by attendance at Camp Immokalee, the Young People's Conference for Florida. The closing address was by Rev. Walter Metcalf, of Tampa, on "Tuning In."

The thirty-eighth annual meeting of the East Coast Association was held with the Church at Melbourne, Fla., of which Rev. George L. Hanscom, D. D., is the pastor. This association was well attended by delegates from all the Churches but one. There were fine reports from Churches and from the women's auxiliaries.

Dr. Hanscom, as the regularly elected preacher for the association meeting, preached the sermon, and as he announced his expected retirement from the pastorate, he said that this would probably be his last opportunity to preach to the association as a pastor of a Church. It was a strong and vital message. Rev. Thomas discussed the mission of the Church to the younger generation. Rev. Edgar S. Rothrock, D. D., formerly superintendent of the Conference of Ohio, and now serving the Church at Holly Hill this season, spoke on the "Program and Significance of the Merger with the Christians." Dr. Rothrock was given a hearty welcome to the Florida Association. At the luncheon which was served by the women of the Church, Rev. Ben Stock, of the Philips Church, South Jacksonville, gave humorous anecdotes of early missionary experiences. The closing address was by Rev. Watson L. Lewis, of New Smyrna, on "The Spirit of Service, the Heart of It All." Rev. Thomas H. Derrick of Orange City, was the moderator of the meeting, and Rev. H. G. Fithian, of Port Orange, was elected moderator for the coming year. Rev. George D. Owen, of Ormond, was elected preacher. This association devoted time also to the consideration of the missionary program methods, the discussion being led by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Superintendent Gillette, Mrs. H. C. James and Rev. C. DeW. Brower, who spoke on the mission work at West Tampa.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XIV.

S. S. Minnekahda, Wed., July 16, 1930.

I was in bed till noon today; then went out for lunch, and was back in bed till 3:30 P. M. Isn't it fine for one to be in position to lie in bed for hours at a time with a clear conscience! One can do this when one is convalescent, and surrounded by the ocean and cannot get out for tasks and efforts. There is a song, "Take Time to Be Holy." Believe me, one can do that on board ship, especially when there is weakness of body that makes the bed feel sweet and comforting. We had a wonderful "quiet hour" at 9 A. M. Smith read the sixth chapter of Matthew, "Consider the lilies how they toil not, and yet God clothes them." And then talked to God in such an humble, earnest, appealing manner. God, who cares for the lilies, will certainly care for those created in His image if they, like the lilies, trust and obey Him. And then Dr. Coffin, a man of infinite vision and limitless resources in expression and feeling, poured out our gratitude and longings. He prayed that the mission we had been on to Bournemouth, England, might not be in vain; that Church union might come, not because we wanted it (we could be eliminated from the picture of it, provided it was God's will), but Christ prayed for it, and so it must be God's will. As God clothed the lilies for His glory and as an expression of His power and care, so would He clothe us in the garments of righteousness to do His will. We are made in the image of God, and, therefore, we look up to Him for true wisdom and guidance and His revelation of Himself for us. If we would know Him and the fellowship of His love and suffering, we must, like the lilies of the field, implicitly trust and obey Him.

And thus "Room 54" was once more transformed into a temple of worship, of adoration and petition.

We are having a wonderful sail and sea—calm, quiet, serene. The weather is beginning to get warm and balmy, and the out-of-doors on deck invites and soothes one. Today I finished reading "Twice-Born Ministers," by Dr. Shoemaker, a book published by Revell & Co., New York. This book has a message: Are all ministers twice-born—born into the kingdom, then born of the Spirit? Then, how can we, so many of us, go about our tasks so indifferently? The whole world of sin and evil opens before "the twice-born," and a consuming fire possesses one and makes one willing to be burned out to the glory of God and for the salvation of souls. This man Shoemaker has certainly a message for our day and is in the midst of a movement fraught with infinite power and possibility. There is little place for an unconcerned or an indifferent minister today. We are living in a day of power and possibilities, and unless the minister is surcharged with power from on high, he little realizes the possibilities that are about him. I could wish that all my ministerial friends would read "Twice-Born Ministers."

At lunch today, the table talk turns on prohibition. In Bournemouth the editor of one of England's great religious papers told Dr. Smith he favored the open saloon "because it helped to kill people and keep the population down." There were too many of us to be fed and kept well with present supplies and productions. A great plague that would sweep a big per cent of the population out of the way would help some, but in the absence of such a plague the open saloon was a good substitute, since it certainly helped to fill graves rapidly. He did not favor war, however, since the population somehow seemed to reproduce about as rapidly as battlefields killed people. He thought the solution for hard times and for feeding well those who deserved to live was the open saloon, because it killed off so rapidly the weak and the unfit. Smith said that this editor stoutly upheld this pernicious doctrine. Should there be a plague it would be proper for it to sweep that editor out of the way along with the rest. He may be and is an editor, but he is exceedingly ignorant. Think of the food the United States could produce. Just about the very hour that editor was talking with Smith and others, and advocating this doctrine of depopulation, the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States was on a tour in the Middle West asking our farmers and warning them to cut down production; that there was an over-production of foodstuffs and not enough consumers to pay a living price. That English editor needs to come to America or study the earth's possible productivity. He must not know that Africa can feed the world for the next five hundred years, if properly developed and cultivated; that Texas, with two or three adjoining States properly developed, can feed the whole world for years and years to come. We have hardly begun to tap the infinite resources for food and proper living, and yet this man, editing a great paper, thinks we need the open saloon as an agency to help kill off and decrease the population.

I am jotting down these items in my diary at 5 P. M., when we are 1,335 miles out at sea, and this is our shortest distance to land, according to the map and chart. The journey across is 3,000 miles plus. This makes one feel very small and far, far away. Thirteen hundred miles from the nearest point of land, and the great trackless ocean stretches out before one in seamless blue and white as far as the eye can see. There is no ship in sight, only the sea, the sea! However, our ship issues a bulletin each day, telling us of happenings and events in all parts of the world.

CHARACTER AND CRIME.

Dr. Benjamin F. Battin, vice-president of the National Surety Company, speaking before the New York Exchange Club recently, gave as the cost of crime and fraudulent transactions in the United States the sum of $7,500,000,000 annually. In itemizing this enormous sum, Dr. Battin said that $175,000,000 is due to forgery, $200,000,000 is due to embezzlement, $200,000,000 to burglary and similar crimes, and the remainder to fraud in business transactions. Over against these appalling figures, put this statement by Justice Lewis L. Fawcett of the Supreme Court of the State of New York:

"If all the children could be kept under the influence of the Sunday School and the grown-ups were active in some Church, we could close our prisons and jails, instead of being compelled to enlarge and increase their number. . . . My experience of twenty-three years on the bench, in which time over 4,000 boys under the age of twenty-one years were convicted of crime before me, of whom but three were members of a Sunday School, has satisfied me of the value of Sunday Schools in the community in helping to safeguard it, to the extent to which Sunday Schools exist, from the growth of criminals. In fact, I regard the Sunday Schools, including those of all faiths, as the only effective means to stem the rising tide of vice and crime among our youth."

That coming from a supreme court judge reveals the worth of Sunday Schools and their work in character-building as nothing else can. Of the 4,000 boys who had not reached their majority and had been convicted of crime, only three were members of Sunday Schools. We presume such figures will hold through the United States. We little reckon on the real weight and worth of the Sunday School as we seek to gather the children and teach them lessons of morality and religion. Is it not a pity, as well as a woeful lack of economy, that we cannot put more into our Sunday Schools and less into our prisons and jails?

Only 44 per cent of America's population is reached by the Sunday School, or some form of religious education, and 56 per cent go without moral training from any source. The greatest economic factor in our civilization is the Church, with its allied and associate organizations. Many of the high and the great pass by the Church and give little heed to it, forgetting that it is doing more to build up character and to save our civilization than all the other organizations combined.

HARD TIMES AND PROSPERITY.

Experience is said to be the best teacher; and unusual prosperity is usually followed by depression. This fact has striking example in war prices and the years that follow. War is an opportunity to a few for fortune-making, and the years that follow naturally swing back to lower prices or normal conditions. This is history. If men who make fortunes in lumber, steel, cloth, guns, ammunition, ship-building and in grain during wars were not allowed to make more than soldiers in line of battle, board and clothing, and the same money per month, peace pacts would be unnecessary. War would solve itself. But as long as citizens are permitted to make fortunes out of war conditions, while the young citizenship is exposed to death in camp and on the battlefield, war will repeat itself when a new generation reaches the age to serve as soldiers.

If the world would cultivate peace in the home, the Church, the school, the public affairs, and business, hard times would not come so often nor be so hard to bear. World conditions are more moral than some people think. Calamities came upon Jewish nations when they neglected the worship of God. Money and pleasure can never make a nation prosperous, happy, or great; but obedience to the will of God and loving our enemies as ourselves can do both and secure favor of Him who rules in heaven, the earth, and the waters under the earth.

The two biggest evils in the world are war and intemperance; and selfishness is at the heart of both. Appetite and greed lead the evils of the world. Ambition is at the bottom of war, and money and appetite at the bottom of drink. Prohibition has its critics in the heart of those who desire to make money and those who want to drink. No temperance advocate opposes the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy" is a prohibition as much as the eighteenth amendment, yet even members of the Church violate that commandment; but there is no demand for its repeal or modification. It is no reflection on the law that bootleggers do their secret and mischievous work; the reflection is upon the violators themselves.

When all the violators of the commands have received their doom, the commands will continue in force and millions will obey and profit thereby. When all the violators of the eighteenth amendment have passed from this world, the eighteenth amendment will be in force and millions will be benefitted by its demands. The good already accomplished by prohibition compensates advocates of this cause for all the opposition, criticism, and organized effort to modify, repeal, or nullify this amendment to the Constitution. Like the Ten Commandments, the eighteenth amendment will continue, and its benefits will increase. It is reported that savings accounts have reached $28,000,000,000, with 52,000,000 depositors, which equals $500 to each depositor. W. W. S.

N. C. WOMAN'S CONFERENCE.

It has been this writer's privilege to attend a great many religious conferences and conventions, of almost every type. It has become a conviction that from the spiritual viewpoint, a missionary conference attains about the highest level. And the woman's missionary gatherings of our own Church set a high mark of spiritual interest and enthusiasm that would be difficult to surpass.

The North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference, held with the Liberty Church, Vance County, on October 17th, was almost everything that such a gathering could be expected to be. The attendance was splendid, but if a few more people had been there the Conference would have been more pronouncedly a success. With so many things of high value to be shared, it was a pity that there could not have been more people there to enjoy them. The fact that Dr. Atkinson had another engagement that prevented his attending was a decided loss. It does not seem quite a missionary gathering of the Christian Church without Dr. Atkinson's presence.

The Conference theme, "His Word Our Guide, His Will Our Law, His Work Our Task," was the very heart and soul of the Conference message. The program was a well-balanced unity from the beginning to the close. This writer discussed the subject, "His Word Magnified." Mrs. W. H. Boone led the closing meditation of the morning session with the subject, "His Will Obeyed." And Miss Graham Rowland perfected and sealed the message of the day in an address on the subject, "His Work, Our Task."

After a deeply reverential worship service, led by Mrs. R. J. Newton, of the local Church, the Conference gave itself to the work that had been accomplished during the year that was being brought to a close. This seems the logical way to begin. It is easy for a Conference to lose itself in meaningless discussions of what needs to be done, and become discouraged by the very magnitude of the task. The reports of the district leaders and the conference superintendents showed what had been accomplished, what was being undertaken, and the tasks that as yet served only as a challenge. The report of the treasurer, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, showed that about $4,400 had been raised. This amount, while somewhat below the goal that was set, evidenced a fine interest and splendid work when the financial condition of the country is taken into consideration.

The Conference elected a splendid corps of officers for the coming year, the personnel being, in the main, the same as of the previous year. It faced the future with a determined and hopeful faith. The future of the missionary enterprise rests not with those who theorize about missions, but with those who are willing to labor and sacrifice, that the mission work may go forward. And herein lies the power of the Woman's Conference that I have been privileged to attend; they center their emphasis upon the work that is to be done, rather than upon the methods by which it is to be done. All preachers ought to attend the meetings that are held by the women, in order to learn that the work is more important than the methods and means whereby it is to be done.

The North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference was a great meeting. The weather was ideal. The good people of the Liberty, Vance, Church provided lavishly for the entertainment of the Conference, and those who could not or did not attend were the losers. S. C. H.

UP, DOWN AND OUT.

Up.

Each of the four gospels records the resurrection of our Lord. Only two (Mark and Luke) record the Ascension (Luke 24:50-51). "And He led them out as far as to Bethany, and He lifted up His hands and blessed them." "And it came to pass while He blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into heaven."

We also find in Mark (ch. 16, v. 19) a record of how Jesus was taken up into heaven. In the first chapter of Acts, verses 9-10, we have the incident of the Ascension. All these accounts attest the fact that Jesus went back to His Father. He went up, up for a purpose. That purpose was that He might sit down at the right hand of the Father, to wait for His kingdom to be granted unto Him in the fullness of time. But there is yet another purpose. He went up that the Holy Spirit, who is the Comforter, might come down.

Down.

As long as He stayed in the flock, the Holy Spirit could not come, but when He went away, He sent the Holy Spirit, that He might be the ever-present, abiding Comforter (John 16:7). The Holy Spirit came down, that He might be the living witness of Christ in the lives of the redeemed. The apostles were not prepared for the work Christ had commissioned them to do until they received the Holy Spirit. Christ commanded that the disciples tarry in Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high. This command was obeyed, which obedience gave power unto those who believed and tarried.

"But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." On the Day of Pentecost, the Holy Spirit came down. This prepared the disciples for going into the uttermost parts of the earth to be witnesses for Him.

Out.

The Son of God went up. He sent the Holy Spirit down. The Spirit prepared the disciples to go out. They went out from the meeting in which they had gathered to carry the good news and to win others to Him. It was the power of the Holy Spirit that sent the disciples out to fulfill the command of our Lord. Of that group of disciples they went out to do the bidding of their Lord, Peter preached in Jerusalem and Judea; James became the head of the Church; Thomas went to Udesia. Later, when the Holy Spirit came upon Paul he went out to the Gentiles and carried the good news. Those who are baptized with the Holy Spirit now go out in a similar manner. It is the duty of the redeemed of Christ to continue this work until He comes to claim His own. If we go out thus, we can finish the work He has given us to do. J. E. M.

NOTICE.

The First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., located at the corner of Washington and County Streets, will have an anniversary service on Sunday, November 30th, celebrating its twenty-ninth year as a Christian Church. There will be three services during the day—11 A. M., 2:30 and 8 P. M. All three will be devoted to the anniversary program, but the service in the afternoon will be completely dedicated in commemoration of the anniversary. Various leaders of the Church will be present and speak, together with others. A splendid program is being prepared; therefore, the Church takes this opportunity of inviting every pastor and person who possibly can to attend this anniversary service, assuring each one of a most cordial welcome. Particularly does the Church urge every person within the boundaries of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference to attend this service; also all the old members or past members to join with them in making this a great and glorious day for the glory of God and the furtherance of the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ. You will join with us in prayer, won't you, that it be a high and holy day in Zion?

H. C. Caviness.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.

The Suffolk Christian Church will celebrate the seventieth anniversary of its organization at a special service on Sunday morning, November 23rd. A special program is being arranged for the occasion, the features of which will be appropriate music by the Church choir and an address by Dr. W. W. Staley, who has sustained a pastoral relationship with the Church for nearly fifty years. Dr. Staley will deliver an address dealing with the history of the Church. Members of the Church, former members of the Church, and the general public are cordially invited to attend this service, which will be observed as a kind of home-coming day.

NOTICE.

All persons coming to the Eastern North Carolina Conference, at Catawba Springs Church, by motor bus, please notify T. C. Buchanan, and you will be met at Buffalo filling station, ten miles south of Raleigh, on Route 21.

J. Lee Johnson.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The cry of "hard times" is a repetition of what has been heard many times in the past. Reading some old Church records of not so many years ago convinces me that "hard times" is no new experience in human society. Unless something was printed or spoken about "hard times," one would know very little about it; but papers and tongues keep the idea alive, and thereby produce a spirit of discouragement in business and in the Church. Pessimism has no special value, and it is lacking in faith in God, in society, and in self. Optimism is a better philosophy, as it kindles faith in God, in society, and in self. "Now, faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" (Heb. 11:1); and, "without faith it is impossible to please God" (Heb. 11:6). What is needed is more faith in God, in society, and self. Even a child can work an example if he believes he can do it; but as long as he feels that he cannot, he will fail.

But leaving the optimistic side of this question, let a few facts be examined. Two things seem to enter into the present question of hard times; the first is over-production. The machine age makes that possible. Making nails with a hammer and grinding them out like shelling corn make a difference in nail production; picking off peanuts by hand and picking them by a peanut-picker are two different things. The peanut market would not be glutted if the nuts were all picked off by human fingers. Another factor that enters into the times is the relation between employer and employee.

One of the unsolved problems of the present is unemployment, and yet strikes are encouraged by certain leaders of labor. Even Danville's four thousand are on a strike and men and women say they cannot get work. Over a hundred thousand on strike in Germany, and the world faces the question of unemployment. Business complains about the loss of trade, and farmers say they get nothing for what they produce. The world seems to be rickety on the question of money. If more people were on little farms working to make a living and not raising money crops, only; and if workers in mills were willing to live within their earning capacity, and if big business was willing to live economically, and all were willing to love his neighbor as himself, the question of "hard times" would be solved satisfactorily to all.

To look at society in the way it spends time and money, it looks unusually prosperous; but to listen at people talk, it looks as if the winter would be a season of unusual suffering. There never has been a time when people spend so much time and money in pleasure and unnecessary comforts as at the present time; and it seems that many who cannot indulge to the same extent feel on the very edge of suffering for the real necessities of life.

What this age needs is more faith, more religion, and more love for neighbors.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

A man is known among his fellows for many reasons. Some men are known for what they know; others for what they possess; others for their agreeable social qualities; others for their ability to lead their fellows.

But it seems to me that the very best index to a man's character is found in the things that he loves, the things that are dear to him, the things that are precious to him, the things to which he devotes himself on the ground that they are supremely and primarily important.

Once upon a time I happened into the living-room of a gentleman whose friendship I value most highly. No one was there but my friend and myself. I noticed on his table a large Bible open. I also noticed that in between the leaves of this Bible were certain articles different one from the other. Because I was intimate with him, I stepped over to the Bible and began turning the leaves. I remarked as I began turning the leaves that I had noticed these various articles in between the leaves, and as I turned, the leaves opened and displayed a lock of hair.

He was visibly affected when he saw this lock of hair and said in effect that these articles "are my precious things. This lock of hair," taking it into his hands, he said, "is from my sister's head. She passed away many years ago." Among the other articles that he particularly reckoned as worthy a place among his precious possessions was a letter written him many, many years before by his mother. And then I found several receipts written him by persons representing certain great enterprises.

I had an index to my friend's character that I did not need, but that spoke volumes to me as to his character. Here was a man living alone, to whom a lock of his sister's hair, a letter written him by his mother, receipts from causes he had helped were among his precious possessions; so precious that he placed them in the most precious thing he possessed—the Bible that he was accustomed to read daily and to meditate upon nightly.

Among the things that should be precious to us all are our bodies, our minds, our spirits, our friends, our family, our Church; but most especially our consciences. A man must live with himself and he must be the kind of person with whom he can associate not only in the daylight but in the night and feel perfectly at home and unabashed.

Edgar A. Guest has written particularly emphasizing this point in a poem which he entitles "Myself," which reads as follows:

I have to live with myself, and so
I want to be fit for myself to know;
I want to be able as days go by
Always to look myself straight in the eye.

I don't want to stand with the setting sun
And hate myself for the things I've done;
I never can hide myself from me:
I see what others may never see.

I know what others may never know—
I never can fool myself; and so
Whatever happens, I want to be Self-respecting and conscience-free.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

There are about 500,000 students in our American institutions of higher learning; that is to say, out of every 225 people in America, one is engaged in securing a higher education. The importance of safeguarding the religious welfare of these prospective leaders of thought and activity must be apparent.

China may be in the midst of great changes and troubles, but she seems to have an eye to education, nevertheless. There are said to be 260 normal schools in that country, with 28,000 students, and 5,000 of their graduates are now teaching in graded town schools. Three hundred and fifty junior high schools give special attention to equipping teachers for primary country schools.

Some facts are very striking at times, and doubly so when compared or contrasted. This country never had as large a college population, but at the same time its prison population also was never so large, and the latter is growing faster than the former. Of the 5,000 persons daily in the hands of New York police, nearly one-fourth are boys under sixteen. From such come a large proportion of our criminals.

The president of one of the great State universities has said, if he could have his way he would have every one of the thousands of students going to his institution spend at least a year or two in one of the smaller Christian colleges before losing himself in the great crowds that throng the modern universities.

The purpose of the Christian college, with its few hundreds, differs from that of the universities, whose students are numbered in tens of thousands. Men and women are or should be educated to enable them to co-operate with the scholars and leaders of the country in the enterprises of the modern social order, and where that order is defective, to make it Christian. But a university with its ten or twenty separate colleges under its wings often shows a tendency to value the fruits of education from a materialistic point of view, putting the emphasis on practical and money-making education as compared with the older forms of intellectual discipline, moral culture, and refinement of life. The small liberal arts college is satisfied if it can fit a student not so much for a job which is only a part of life, but for life itself. In a word, it is character-building—character after the mind of Christ.

Just as it was half-century ago, the small college is still the backbone of higher education in the United States. Most of our great universities grew out of the small Christian college. The conservation of the best educational and religious traditions by the less pretentious, but not less vital, institution promises to bring the small college into greater favor than for some time. This tendency is becoming more pronounced as Christian parents object to certain tendencies in the larger and independent schools.

Our age seems to have more knowledge than education—more data on many things than ability to interpret them. People acquire a certain amount of information on some subject, but instead of "thinking through" it, they seize upon some attractive but superficial idea and view the whole matter from that angle. A scientific profession is simply a kind of exalted trade, the preparation for which in the technical school is often mistaken for an education.

Piedmont Junior College is our own Christian institution, and its effectiveness for the establishment of Christian principles throughout the South will depend upon the loyalty of its constituency. It is our college; let us build and support it.

EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The Eastern Virginia Christian Conference convened in its one hundred and tenth session in South Norfolk's Christian Church Wednesday morning, October 29th, at 10:30 o'clock, and was called to order by its president, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, of Suffolk, Va. After appointing various committees and attending to a few other important matters, the president delivered his annual address, which was on "Hard Times and the Kingdom of God." He laid a good deal of stress upon the fact that he believed much of our hard times were due to the lack of the Church of God measuring up to that standard of godliness, piety and noble Christian character that should be the mark of every follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. I wish to say here that our president, Rev. Hardcastle, is so witty, humorous, kind, courteous, able, and presides with such ease and gracefulness that we want him to continue to be our president; so the nominating committee just gratified our wishes and re-elected him for another year.

The report on stewardship, by Rev. J. W. Fix, chairman, was ably discussed by Dr. W. H. Denison, of Dayton, Ohio. We are always glad to have Dr. Denison with us and listen to his ever-worthy counsel.

Dr. Charles E. Shelton, of the Congregational Church, Portsmouth, and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, of Elon College, N. C., very convincingly and helpfully spoke on the question of "Foreign Missions." The report on religious literature by Rev. J. E. McCauley, chairman, got Dr. Shelton on his feet again, and this time he told us what was good to eat for the body, and also what was good for the soul. Dr. Shelton is a fine speaker. He has such a storehouse of knowledge to impart to his hearers. Dr. L. E. Smith also soared aloft on this important theme.

The report on education by Dr. W. W. Staley, chairman, brought to the front such leaders as S. C. Heindel, F. E. Jenkins, W. A. Harper and L. E. Smith. These four mutually agreed that education, such as could be obtained from Christian colleges, was absolutely essential for every boy and girl, that they might attain unto the privileges and opportunities of life that would make them worthy to fill the various avenues of service falling to them along life's pathway. The report on temperance or moral reform by Dr. C. C. Ryan, of Richmond, Va., was one of the finest reports ever given to this Conference on that question, and brought forth many stirring, feeling remarks from different preachers and lay-members. The subject of evangelism, given by H. C. Caviness, of Portsmouth, aroused a deep sense of feeling in the Conference. Dr. L. E. Smith, discussing the question, reached such a degree of eloquence, imbued with such spiritual power, that he aroused our very being and carried us aloft in spiritual realms; and Dr. I. W. Johnson was so impressed that he made a few remarks and made a motion that the members of this Conference strive to bring into the fold of Christ 500 new members during this year. Rev. O. D. Poythress also was so moved that he expressed himself in his usual evangelical style. Col. J. E. West expressed himself very enthusiastically on the matter of home missions and joined in the discussion of many other questions of this body.

Thursday evening, Dr. Smith gave an illustrated lecture on "The Passion Play," which was very interesting and instructive. The song service, led by Rev. J. F. Morgan, was up to the desired standard, and very nobly achieved. The hospitality, kindness and courtesy of the pastor and members of South Norfolk Christian Church will long linger in our memory.

All in all, we have had one of the best Conferences that it has been our privilege to visit. Therefore, we give the Lord all the praise and hope that such has glorified His name.

FRANKLIN, VA.

Franklin Christian Church and Sunday School look forward to the realization of two missionary projects during the next month. Franklin Church prides herself upon her missionary zeal, and constantly endeavors to reach a higher plane of missionary fervor. On last Sunday the junior department of our school decided to launch forth a "treasure ship" upon a foreign voyage. The boys of the department are constructing the ship, and into its hull a large cargo is to be packed by members of the junior classes. These gifts are to be brought each third Sunday, which is our Sunday School mission day, to be shipped away to boys and girls in lands afar. This ship is to be a "good will" messenger, and is to carry the spirit of brotherhood and Christian love to others.

Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor of Christian Temple, Norfolk, is to come to us on Friday night, November 28th, with a colored lantern-slide program of pictures of the 1930 "Passion Play." The offering from this program is to promote missions and is sponsored by the Woman's Missionary Society of our Church, of which Mrs. J. A. Williams is president.

These two items of missionary interest are printed with the hpoe that some other school may become interested, and thus build a "good will" treasure ship during the coming year; it is also hoped that other Churches or organizations will take advantage of Dr. Smith's offer to present the "Passion Play" to such groups or societies that make arrangements with him. This program was recently given at the Eastern Virginia Conference and was enjoyed by all who witnessed these beautiful scenes from the passion week of our Lord.

A PRAYER.

(November.)

Father, for Jesus' sake, make His Church glorious even now. Sooner than outer efficiency, increase inner sufficiency—the soul-caliber that qualifies for the greatest evangelistic outreach. Within Zion bounds, O God, may the Pentecostal pressure of sharing and giving be felt from center to rim, and may stewardship find its place in all of life. Grant to Church officers discernment rightly to interpret and impress stewardship, and lay hard upon the consciences of all who lead the duty and responsibility of securing to the Church and making permanent for its care and expansion, the principle of "God's portion." From self into service, we pray for all, in Jesus' name. Amen.

THE GREAT GOD MAMMON.

The greatest peril threatening the nation today is the worship of the ancient Babylonish god, mammon. Devotion to him is enfeebling the Churches, endangering the government, and imperiling business.

The love of money in the Churches is manifesting itself in the withholding of funds needed for the spreading of the gospel. Decreases in gifts to missions alarmingly appear, though distressing needs and rare opportunities are everywhere visible and modern Macedonian cries are louder even than the clamors of a most turbulent age. The greatest of the Protestant Churches in the United States a few months ago recalled more than two hundred missionaries; nor is there a single great mission board in our land which is able to supply the clear and claimant needs facing it. Some of our missionary leaders have pointed out the fact that vast sums are being spent in building costly Church plants while gifts for missions are falling off. This is an ominous fact. It would, no doubt, be difficult for a missionary forced to come home because of lack of money in the missionary treasury to worship without bitter inward protest in some recently completed $500,000 cathedral of his denomination while his heart was in the Congo or on the Ganges or in Pekin. Those inclined to defend the policy of the present large expenditures for Church structures may insist that this is "the digging in" of the Church until the time for the forward advance of the army comes. Such an argument is not supported by the facts in the world situation today. The battle shows no lull as far as the enemies of human welfare are concerned, and it is stupid strategy or something worse when the militant Church begins "to dig in" in the midst of the battle.

It is not necessary, however, to weaken our missionary forces because we are building new Churches when the Church members have money enough for both purposes. In the case of some of our Churches, there has been an increase in their gifts to missions even when they were building new plants, though these cases are no doubt exceptional. The Churches of the United States are so increased in wealth that they are able to provide the money for what needs to be done both at home and abroad. By far the wealthiest 40,000,000 of the 120,000,000 citizens of the United States are the members of the Protestant Churches. Their failure to furnish the funds for the advance of the kingdom springs in part from their love of money, "the root of all kinds of evil," including the arrest of the progress of the Church of God. It is said that the cost of the Byrd expedition to the south pole was $9,000,000. There is money in the United States in such quantity as was never before seen in one nation. The recent general conference of our Church asked 2,500,000 Southern Methodists to give in one year about $2,200,000, which is less than one-fourth of what the Byrd expedition cost. Byrd and his men succeeded in a great adventure and have the admiration of the world. No such objective as theirs is to be compared for a moment to that of the winning of the world to Christ. The love of the money they have is hindering Church members and interfering with their loyalty to the Lord. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

The love of money is moving many Church members to un-Christian methods as they seek to make it, and the dominance of the desire to get money is driving our many better objectives and excluding true culture and pure religion. Many having "loved this present world" have forsaken Paul to follow the foolish Demas. The making of money so absorbs them that they read no good literature, listen to no great music, worship God in His house seldom, and starve themselves with the menu of Medas—not more nutritious now than in his times.

Covetousness is a most serious malady of the soul; worship of mammon is the most dangerous competitor of devotion to the true God. The danger from it is by far the greatest now threatening the Church.—Christian Advocate.

C. M. A. TO CONVENE.

In just a few weeks the Christian Missionary Association will convene with the First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., with J. E. McCauley pastor-host. A splendid program has been arranged, and we can assure all those who attend a day of pleasure and profit. We are expecting you to make this a great day for the glory of the Lord. The annual session will be held on December 9th, beginning at 10:30 A. M.

We trust that you will unite with us in prayer that this year be the best year of the association; that you will unite with all those who are making real sacrifices toward this end; that your interest in missions may be translated into concrete thing, the giving of your means therefor—no, not your means, but that with which you have been entrusted. "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully, every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give, not grudgingly, or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver" (2 Cor. 9:6-7). Does the Lord have occasion to love you because of being a cheerful giver? Do we reap sparingly because of sowing stintingly?

Membership dues for Churches, Church organizations, such as all classes, Christian Endeavor Societies, Ladies' Aid or Missionary Societies, is only $10 per annum. For women and children the dues are just $5.00 per annum. Send or bring your contribution to the annual session for the glory of Christ. Make all checks payable to the Christian Missionary Association. It is required of all stewards that they be "faithful." Do we meet this requirement? "It is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful" (1 Cor. 4:2).

I believe in foreign missions for the sake of the kingdom of God in China and India, in Africa and Turkey. But I believe in foreign missions also for the sake of the Church in the United States of America. It is the missionary who will prod us out of our complacency and save us from stagnation.—Rev. Frank J. Scribner, Jamesville, Wis.

If we spend a large percentage of what we give "to the Lord" on ourselves, is it correct to call it "giving"; is it not rather a form of self-indulgence?—Rev. Geo. E. Stickney, Beloit, Wis.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson VIII—November 23, 1930.

The Rich Young Ruler.

Golden Text: "And he said unto all, if any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and follow me."—Luke 9:23.

Lesson: Mark 10:17-27.

A Good Prospect.

"There ran one to him"—one who, according to our present-day standards of Church membership, would have been a great prospect. For this one who came to meet Him was young; he was wealthy—that in itself would have been sufficient for our Churches of today in many cases—he was a ruler; that is, he had an influential position; he was probably cultured and educated. He was undoubtedly a good, moral young man. To all outward appearances, he was all right. But while man looketh on the outward appearance, God looketh on the heart.

A Hungry Heart.

"What shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" This young man had so much; he had those things which so many people think are the secret of happiness. But in spite of this fact he had a hungry heart. There was something within him that would not, because it could not, be satisfied with mere things. He did not know just what it was—men ofttimes do not know—but there was something within him that cried out for the things that have abiding value. In other words, this young man needed God to complete his life. Man cannot live by bread alone. A man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things that he possesses.

Right Horizontal Relationships.

"All these things have I observed from my youth." "These things" referred to six of the commandments, and the young man sincerely stated that he had kept them from his youth up. He was above the average, to say the least. It is to be noted, however, that the commandments to which Jesus called his attention dealt with the young man's relations with his fellow-men. They concerned his horizontal relationships, his attitudes toward and his dealings with his neighbor.

Wrong Perpendicular Relationships.

"One thing thou lackest"—the young man was not right with God. His love of possessions had come between him and God. He loved gold more than he loved God. He worshiped things, he had other gods before the true and living God. He was not willing to give up his possessions to follow Christ. And he became a type of all those into whose lives there has come something which they put before God. It should be remarked in passing that God does not require every man who would become His disciple to sell all that he has and to give it to the poor. In the case of the young man it was necessary, for instead of him having money, his money had him. There are rich men who have been faithful and fruitful followers of Jesus Christ. They have served God with their mammon, instead of trying to serve God and mammon. This story ought to impress upon all of us the fact that religion concerns two relationships—the perpendicular or vertical, and the horizontal. It is not enough that a man is a good neighbor. He must be a good son of God, as well as a good friend to man. On the other hand, a good son of God will be a good friend or neighbor to man.

The Man Who Might Have Been.

"He went away sorrowful"—we never hear of him again. It would be interesting to know just what did become of this young man, who, with all his gifts and his gold, could have been such a useful disciple. But we may be sure that eventually his life ended in tragedy. He stands forever as the man who might have been. What a difference it made because he turned away from Christ! What a difference it always makes when any one turns away from Christ! No man ever comes to his best or ever does his best if he refuses to take Jesus Christ into his life. Just in so far as any one does this, he is one of those "who might have been."

The Snare of Riches.

"How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God?" It is not impossible, but it is difficult. Riches, or the love of money, which is the root of all evil, have a way of enslaving their possessors and of dulling the finer sensibilities of the soul which are the prerequisites for entrance into the kingdom. They have a way of putting barriers between men. They beget a sense of independence and self-sufficiency which stifle the spirit of humility which is absolutely essential to entrance into the kingdom. They make it hard—Jesus used a most striking way of stating this truth—for their possessors to enter the kingdom of God. But not impossible. Thanks be unto God for His power to save unto the uttermost those who come unto God by Him. He has saved and used those who have had riches. He can do what with man is impossible. His salvation is not by words, but by faith. And when His living Spirit is allowed to have His way in the human heart, He makes all things new. His name is Jesus, for He saves His people from their sin.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic: "Things for Which We Should be Thankful."

Scripture Lesson: Psalm 103: 1-13.

The word "thankful" comes from the Gothic word, which originally meant "thinkful." To be thankful is to be thoughtful or mindful of the good things received. Truly thankful hearts remember the goodness of God and the gift of His precious Son every day of the year. Every day should be a day of thanksgiving.

Notice the spirit of thankfulness in Jesus' life. He always thanked His Father for every gift. He always broke the bread and gave thanks before the meal. On the night that He ate the Passover with His disciples for the last time, He thanked God for the meal. He, who was God, thanked God for the gifts He received. How much more ought we to thank God for His wonderful gifts.

We can be thankful for the Church. There is a Church building in almost every community in our country. We have come to look upon them as essential. Have they also become commonplace? Does the Church mean any more than other institutions to us? Are the friends found there any more reliable than other friends?

We have gone a long way, perhaps, when we can thank God for the trials that are ours. God chastens those He loves. We should be thankful for the perplexing problems and the sorrows that come to us. The solving of each problem makes us stronger. And each sorrow has its lesson of love and tenderness. We become more perfect as we bear with Christian hearts the parts of life that are shaded with griefs and troubles

Of all the good gifts that we enjoy, friends are probably appreciated most by us. It is our friends who help us in our joys. Every one needs friends. To have friends, we must be friendly.

We can thank God for our very selves. In doing this, of course, we do not assume the attitude of the Pharisee and thank God that we are not as others. But we can thank Him for His goodness in giving us perfect and whole bodies. We can thank Him for the five senses that we have that enable us to enjoy the beauties He has placed in the earth. We can thank Him for our minds, and for our souls. Whatever we may think of ourselves ordinarily, when we consider that we are God's greatest creation it must be with thankful hearts filled with praise for His great name.

Thank God for nature. This note of our thanksgiving song will include the fertility of the fields that give us our food, the richness of the earth that provides us with coal and other fuels, and the sun that purifies and heals as well as furnishes all our energy.

Then, thank God for an opportunity to work. Most people are restless if taken away from the daily tasks. Be thankful for the seat in the school-room and prove yourself worthy of the chance to learn. Be thankful for the task as teacher, mother, nurse, doctor, lawyer, clerk or farmer. It may be a small share of the world's work that each of us can do, but all together we do a mighty piece of work. Let us be thankful that we can work.

"I offer thanks for just familiar things:
The ruddy glory of the sunset sky,
The shine of firelight as the dusk draws nigh,
The cheerful song my little kettle sings.

"The woodland music of my giant pine,
The last sweet tokens that my garden yields,
The mellow tints upon the autumn fields,
The far-off misty mountain's purple line.

"The sense of rest that home so surely brings,
The books that wait my pleasure, true and fine,
Old friendships that I joy to feel are mine—
I offer thanks for just familiar things!"

—Alix Thorn, in New Outlook.

RALLY DAY OFFERINGS.

The treasurer of the Board of Christian Education reports that rally day offerings have already come in as follows: Holland Sunday School, $5.46; Holy Neck Sunday School, $5.51; Spring Hill Sunday School, $7.74; Linville Sunday School, $6.70; Lynchburg Sunday School, $3.39—total, $28.80.

The field secretary and the chairman of the Board of Christian Education accepted invitations to the New Lebanon Christian Church, Elberon, Va., to be present on Sunday evening, November 2nd, and speak about missions. A very large and enthusiastic audience was present and the representatives of the board felt it a privilege to speak on this most interesting part of our Church work.

The chairman of the Board of Christian Education, Rev. F. C. Lester, and the field secretary of the board were present at the Eastern Virginia Conference. Both plan to attend part of the sessions of the North Carolina and Virginia and the Western North Carolina Conferences.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

WALK IN HIS WAYS. By Amos R. Wells. W. A. Wilde Co.; $1.50; pp. 255.

This is a book of meditation based in each instance upon some inspiring Bible passage and closing with a brief prayer. The reputation which Dr. Wells enjoys as a spiritual seer is well maintained in this book.

PELOUBET'S SELECTED NOTES, INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS, 1931. By Amos R. Wells. W. A. Wilde Co.; $2.00; pp. 384.

For thirty-seven years Dr. Peloubet edited his "Selected Notes," and now for twenty years Amos R. Wells has carried on the work in much the same spirit and attitude of the original author. For those who believe in the efficiency of the Improved Uniform Lessons, this book will be of special help. It is well worth the price charged.

CHRISTIANITY IN ACTION. By John Timothy Stone. W. A. Wilde Co.; $1.50; pp. 222.

Dr. Stone is known the world around as the pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and now as the president of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Chicago. In this book he has collected eighty-six little sketches from life and nature, illustrative of the gems that have so distinguished his preaching during his long and successful pastorate in Chicago. Dr. Stone's attitude, with reference to the spiritual life that it is a distinct gift from God, shines out in every page. This volume will be found exceedingly interesting.

THE BUSINESS GIRL CHOOSES. By Marian Lela Norris. The Abingdon Press; $1.10; pp. 191.

So much advice is continually being given young people that we need not be surprised if sometimes they appear to be discourteous, in that they do not give it the consideration which those who offer such counsel consider it to be worth. Miss Norris is the executive secretary of the Eleanor Association of Chicago, and is well qualified to assist young women in making their life's choices, particularly in the business realm. She draws upon her wide and varied experience, and gives cases that will help young women properly to appraise the Church, society, business and other factors that enter into a life program. The book is approved by the committee on curriculum of the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and that means that it is considered worthy.

REIDSVILLE.

The meeting which was mentioned in our last letter was carried out as scheduled. For several weeks we had special prayer circles in preparation for the meeting. On October 12th we began with good interest and a fine spirit. Six members were received into the Church at the first service. Dr. C. H. Rowland came to us on Monday, October 13th, and did the preaching throughout the meeting, ending October 26th.

Few people will read this report who have not heard Dr. Rowland, and to state that he was with us means that the messages were strong and of the sort that leave people thinking of their duty to God. Most of the effort of the meeting was within the Church. Many came and heard and resolved to be better Christians.

The meeting was not a "flurry," as some are, but of the more lasting type. There was plain gospel preaching which went to the hearts of the hearers, and went home with them to help them meet successfully the temptations they shall meet. Fifteen have been received into the fellowship of the Church so far, and we are to receive others next Sunday. We are grateful to Dr. Rowland that he consented to return to us for the meeting; grateful for every message, and for his influence in our community. He has many friends here, even as many as know him, who are glad to have had him. We hope that he may come again.

We came to Reidsville two years ago, and today we had a recognition service, at which pastor and people pledged themselves to another year's work in the kingdom. The Church is in fine spirit, and with the Spirit we hope to overcome every obstacle which may arise. We are looking forward to a pleasant year. The Lord has blessed our efforts, and we are encouraged to undertake more for His glory. By the end of this week we will have our program for next year ready to put in operation when we return from Conference. We desire the prayers of those who are interested in us or in the work of the Master. We owe all praise to Him.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

BY REV. AMOS R. WELLS.

MONDAY.

PRECIOUS PROMISES.

"We are journeying unto the place of which Jehovah said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good, for Jehovah hath spoken good concerning Israel."—Num. 10: 29-36.

When Moses wanted Hobab to go with him, he did not picture the vast desert stretching before him, he said nothing about the fiery serpents, the burning sun, the sparse vegetation, the robber bands, the weary marches, the hostile tribes of Canaan. He was certain that the final result of the expedition would be glorious beyond imagination; he knew that the trials of the way would come upon Hobab only one at a time and would be surmountable, that there was no sense in piling them upon his imagination all at once.

Such confidence every Christian may well have when he urges others to become Christians. No gold mine was ever so profitable as conversation. No investment ever gave such rich returns as Church membership. No expedition ever discovered such wonders as following Christ. With perfect assurance, we can invite men and women, boys and girls, to come in with us. We are presenting to them the most magnificent of opportunities.

Prayer.—With what boldness of beneficence, our Saviour, should we issue Thy invitation! We bless Thee for making us Thy heralds of joy. We are proud that we are Thy agents in doing this unmeasured good to men. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SHINING FOREVER.

"They that are wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."—Dan. 12:1-10.

Modern science has shown us that the stars, though they last for ages upon ages, yet have, every one of them, a birth, a youth, an old age, and a death, as truly as man has. The astronomer can analyze the light coming to him from a sun at an unimaginable distance; light which started toward him before Abraham, and can tell in what stage of its life the star was when the light left it, whether it was then a young star or an old one tottering to its grave. No star shines on forever.

But we have the Creator's promise of eternal shining if we turn men to heaven. Here is the real endlessness, to do God's will. The most enduring thing in the universe, the very stars themselves, will grow dim and perish, but the light of God's evangelists will shine ever brighter as the constellations fade away.

Prayer.—Great blessings, our Father, have those to whom we bring Thy love, and blessings as great have we in the bringing. That happy employment introduces them to everlasting bliss, and us to endless glory. For in no other way do we make ourselves at one with Thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SALT THAT STAYS SALT.

"Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted. It is thenceforth good for nothing."—Matt. 5: 13-16.

In the chemistry of divine grace, much account is made of regeneration, but also there is recognition of the possibility of degeneration. Nothing is more hopeless and useless than old salt, salt which once had preservative qualities but which has not preserved itself. It is thrown away, as Christ said, and becomes mere dirt to be packed down by tramping feet.

Such are Christians who lose the divine saltness, Christians who are no longer a savor of righteousness, Christians who can no longer salt others but need themselves to be salted. They are blind leading the blind. They are lanterns gone out. They are guides who have lost the way.

Prayer.—Be Thou our continuance, our Saviour. Be Thou the abiding grace of our lives. Salt us anew as Thou seest we need. And forbid that any who has saved another soul should himself become a castaway. We ask it in Thy name. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SURE RESULTS.

"Wherefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not vain in the Lord."—1 Cor. 15:50-58.

A certain great life insurance company has discovered that one in eleven calls made by its agents results in the taking out of a policy. Be as persuasive as he can, the agent is turned from door after door; but if he persists, he is sure of his reward in time. He is constantly reminding himself that if he has average knowledge, industry, tact and skill, he has only to make ten unsuccessful calls and reap success with the eleventh.

Winning souls to Christ is not unlike selling life insurance. There are many discouragements in the way of evangelism; there is much to render the worker downcast and cause him to give up. But he has before him the example of innumerable successful workers, workers no more devout, no more faithful, no more believing, no more ardent, and no more tactful than he, though he may be only an average worker. He has the same Helper that they had. The promises that were available for them are available for him. The degree of success that they gained, he will gain also; there is no reason to the contrary. His labor will not be vain, in the Lord.

Prayer.—May we always abound in Thy work, O Blessed Redeemer. No discouragements assail us that did not assail Thee. We have far less opposition than Thou didst meet, and the early disciples. May we plod on, ever seeking souls, and we shall surely find. We shall see of the travail of our souls, and shall be satisfied. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A PROFITABLE PURCHASE.

"Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time."—Col. 4:1-6.

The literal meaning of "redeeming the time" is "buying up the opportunity," as it says in the margin of our Testaments. Here is a vital text for soul-winners. For in this matter of leading men to Jesus, the main fault of most of us is that we do not see our chances, or, seeing, take them as we should.

Opportunities for soul-winning are to be purchased; they are not to be had for nothing. We can buy them with loving sympathy; we can buy them with thoughtfulness; we can buy them with courage, and we can buy them with prayer. When it seems impossible that we should have any opportunity to win a certain soul, God will give us the opportunity if we ask Him. And we can buy them with faith, which is always legal tender in bargains of this kind.

Prayer.—How eager Thou wert, O Christ, to seize upon every chance, to win men and women! How instant Thou wert, in what men called season and in what men thought to be out of season! Help us to Thy readiness, Thou great Evangelist, that we may help men to Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

VISIONS AND VICTORY.

"I was not disobedient unto the heavenly visions."—Acts 26:15-20.

The vision of Moses sent him to be a redeemer of his people. The vision of Isaiah made him a prophet of the Most High. The vision of Paul ushered him into his life work of evangelism. So with all visions of God, of Christ: they have apostolic intent and power, they are ordainings to missions.

Where there is no vision, the people perish. Where there are no visions, the individual soul perishes. With the vision comes life, comes energy, comes courage, comes triumph.

What shall we rejoice over when we get to heaven? Our bank account? Our social success? Our election majorities? We shall not give a thought to such things. A single word spoken for Jesus will far outweigh them all.

Prayer.—Lord, make Thy glory appear to Thy children. So fill us with Thy splendor, that we shall know nothing else as supreme. So enrich us with Thy love that we cannot keep it to ourselves. So make us Thy friends that we must become Thy evangelists. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THINKING LIKE MOSQUITOES.

"Come ye after me, and I will make you fishers of men."—Matt. 4:17-25.

The latest report of the Rockefeller Foundation, in its thrilling account of progress made in the fight against malaria which is introduced into human bodies by the bite of certain kinds of mosquito, says that "a good malaria fighter must learn to think like a mosquito." He must ask: "Which of many kinds of anopheline mosquitoes shall I try to imagine myself? How far is it possible to fly? When and where is food to be had? Which blood is to be preferred, human or animal? How can I get into a screened house? Where shall I rest after a good meal? Where is the best place to deposit eggs?

That is just what Christ meant when He told those fishers that they must become fishers of men. They must, through knowledge and imagination, put themselves in the place of this man and that woman, just as they had been in the habit of thinking like a fish in the Sea of Galilee. And that is what that beloved modern disciple of the Master meant when he entitled his book about missionary work in Africa, "Thinking Black."

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, supreme Searcher for souls, help us to love, that we may know. Give us love's penetrating power. Give us love's understanding might. Give us love's final conquest. Give us Thyself. Amen.

MORAL HOBBIES.

By Dr. C. J. Harrell.

"The child (Samson) shall be a Nazarite unto God."—Judges 13:5.

What good thing does the character of Samson teach us? The writer was one day asked this question by one who was not a little disturbed that Samson should occupy so conspicuous a place in the Book of Judges. It is most evident from the story of his life that he is not to be numbered among the illustrious saints of the earth. One is more impressed by his physical prowess than by his moral excellence. But some men teach us by their failures. "By them is thy servant warned." The career of Samson teaches us one thing emphatically—that it is impossible for one to be saved by a single virtue. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a man who puts his trust in a pet virtue to enter the kingdom of heaven.

The character of Samson is distinguished for one of the outstanding virtues. From his birth he was a Nazarite. The sacred vow of a Nazarite was that he would not touch strong drink. Samson never broke his vow of total abstinence, for which he merits our commendation; but all the while he left himself exposed to many other fiery darts of evil-doings. Samson the Nazarite yielded himself to the enticements of a wicked woman, and led captive by her charms, came to a tragic end.

"What boots it at one gate to make defense
And at another to let in the foe?"

Most of us fail to appreciate how deeply seated is the temptation to overwork one virtue to the neglect of many others that are of equal or greater importance. We are prone to have moral hobbies, as though excellence in one virtue would exempt us from practicing another. One pleads his honesty to excuse his impurity. Another condones his intemperance by pleading his kindheartedness. Another offers his domestic virtues as an atonement for his covetousness. But every moral law is vested with authority, and one cannot choose his virtues. He must defend himself at every point against the encroachments of the tempter. If the line breaks at a single place, the battle is lost. One virtue cannot save a man, but one vice may damn him. "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend at one point, he is guilty of all," says James.

We cannot play life's grand symphony on a single string. There are many tones to be blended into the whole, and we must be careful of them every one. To follow Christ in some things and disregard Him in others does not make one a Christian. He calls us to be perfect manhood, wherein is wrought all that is true and beautiful and good. Thie apostle to the Gentiles gives an incomparable summary of the graces that adorn the Christian's life (Gal. 5:22, 23). When measured by this standard of excellence, how inadequate is some one's one virtue! Wherefore, let us bring "into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

GEORGIA CONFERENCE.

The Georgia State Conference met with the Macedonia Church, October 27-29th. "The best State Conference I have known in the thirty-five years I have worked in Georgia" (Rev. J. F. Blackburn). "The most outstanding Georgia Conference I have known" (Dr. W. Knighton Bloom). And such were the sentiments of all the sixty to eighty delegates and friends of this forward-looking gathering of Georgia Congregationalists.

Dr. H. B. Mowbray, pastor of the college of Demorest, was elected moderator, with C. C. Hamilton, pastor at LaGrange, assistant. Miss Ruth Lot, member of the Macedonia Church, was elected scribe. The opening session was on Monday evening, October 27th. Two keynote addresses were given—one by Rev. C. C. Hamilton, who emphasized the need of awakening to the fact that "Some know not God," and it is our duty to bring Him to light; while Dr. E. H. Willisford, formerly of California, spoke on what we should believe, saying, first in God, second in the Bible, "providing you let me interpret it in the light of modern thought," and third, in Jesus Christ.

Tuesday morning the theme of the Conference, "The Work and Oneness of the Kingdom," was carried forward. Rev. M. J. Sweet introduced the topic by speaking to "Our Common Task—A United Purpose." Rev. A. S. Hess, of Atlanta, spoke on "The One Master." Dr. D. W. Dodge, pastor of Central Church, Atlanta, in a masterly fashion, opened the discussion, himself giving a noble address on the theme.

Perhaps seldom has the note of larger response to our whole missionary program been struck than in the address of Dr. W. Knighton Bloom on "Oneness in Missionary Enterprise."

The "Woman's Work" was ably and most helpfully discussed by Miss Annie Campbell, one of the field workers in South Georgia.

Tuesday evening, President H. C. Newell, of Piedmont College, gave a masterly address on "An Educated Church." It was a far-reaching address and brought the audience to a high appreciation of the necessity of the Church holding high the educational standard if youth is to be served. We need not fear high knowledge. Wednesday morning was given over to business and the discussion of "Training for Service."

The business resulted in the appointment of Rev. M. J. Sweet as "Leader of the Congregational Work in Georgia," acting in the capacity of pastor-at-large to all the Churches. He was also elected registrar and treasurer of the Georgia Conference. In these positions he will be doing very largely the work of a superintendent. It is believed that as pastor-at-large the friendships made in the service come a little bit closer, and any tendency toward officialdom is decreased. Dr. H. B. Mowbray was elected a director and he and Rev. J. F. Blackburn and M. J. Sweet were empowered to fill any vacancy in the board of directors.

In the discussion of "Training for Service," Miss Dora Brackin gave an exceptionally fine introduction to the whole work of religious education. Mr. Blackburn had given an address bristling with points of early Congregational life in Georgia thirty-five years ago and contrasting it with that of today.

The most impressive service of all was the beautiful commissioning service conducted by Dr. Bloom. Miss Annie Campbell, A. B., M. A., Hartford, was commissioned full-time extension worker. The Communion service closed one of the most spiritually inspiring Conferences we have enjoyed in many a day.

THE GUEST BOOK.

Every Christian in the United States and Canada should use the "Guest Book," which is the promotional and informational agency of the united Christian and Congregational Churches. The book may be used by any Church at any time. It should be used soon, however. They are free for every family that will sign a request for one, promising to read it in the family group. For twenty-eight days you will read one page a day, which, in a most interesting way, tells about twenty-eight phases of our united work.

Our people are delighted with it. Words of hearty approval are received constantly. Keep the actual list of requests in your local Church office. It is a beautiful book and brimful of information and inspiration. If your Church does not have a pastor, either the Sunday School superintendent or the president of the Woman's Society should get busy. Get your full order and send it to the undersigned. No Church, large or small, can afford to miss it. See how nearly you can enlist every family in your Church.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We wonder if many of us really stop to think what Thanksgiving means to us. We can look back over the year and "count our blessings one by one," and we have so many blessings to be thankful for. If we stop to thnik, we cannot help but realize that God has been good to us and has richly blessed us through the year.

One wonders if we are really thankful for the blessings God so bountifully bestows upon us. When we pray, do we make it a prayer of thanksgiving for the rich blessings we have received, or do we make it a prayer of asking for more blessings? We never forget self and ask the Lord to do something for us; but how many of us pray that God will let us do something for Him to show our thankfulness for what He has done for us? While we are giving thanks for what God has done for us, will we take time to ask Him to let us give a part, at least, to help some little one of His whom He has seen fit to leave dependent, that we may show our love to Him by helping His little helpless one. While we are enjoying our Thanksgiving and the blessings God has given us, will we give one thought of love and sympathy for the little helpless, dependent, fatherless and motherless children? Will we show the depths of our love to the Master, who has given so much for us, by the gifts we make to help His little ones?

The gift of the value of one day's work—just one day out of 365—for your Orphanage to help it in its work of love and charity. If your salary is ten dollars per day, give ten dollars; if it is five dollars, give five; if it is two, give two. It is just a day's work. I know a Sunday School teacher who made a proposition to his class a few years ago to give the best day's income during the following week to the Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage. His best day's income was something like $100, and he gave it. The other members followed his example. His class sent in a splendid offering that year.

We sometimes think we cannot give so freely—we just cannot afford it. But if something happens and we lose ten times as much, it is gone and we do give it. Jesus said, "Freely ye have received, freely give." More than a hundred children in your Orphanage need help. Will you at this Thanksgiving season give freely to help swell the offering from your Church, and by that act visit the fatherless and widow in their affliction. It is a fine way to help them. You will do a kind and loving deed.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

OBITUARIES.

FARMER.

God, in His infinite wisdom, removed from our midst our sister and friend, Mrs. Roxanna Farmer, on September 10, 1930.

The Woman's Missionary and Aid Society of Pleasant Grove Christian Church, Halifax County, Va., wishes to offer this tribute of respect in loving memory of her.

"Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her" (Prov. 31:28). There is no more beautiful Scripture in the Bible than this; none could better express the life and character of our sister; no greater tribute could be paid motherhood.

Resolved, First: That our Church and society have lost one of the most intensely devoted and loyal members, faithful and willing, always present, if at all possible, wherever there were services, and to the Church steadfast and unmovable in the faith. Her going has left a vacant place that cannot be filled. We who remain will strive to carry on the work she loved and lived for.

Second: That we extend to her bereaved family, husband, children, grandchildren, sisters and brothers, our deepest sympathy in this dark hour, recommending them to look up to the Heavenly Father for comfort and resignation to His divine will.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes and a copy sent to the family and one published in The Christian Sun.

MORGAN.

Mrs. Margaret Upchurch Morgan, relict of the late Chestley Morgan, well and rather widely known woman, passed away at the home of her son, Jeff Morgan, Durham, N. C., August 29, 1930, at the age of 72 years. Industrious, painstaking, religious, faithful to the charges of Church, home and community, was the life which her children reflect and her acquaintances respect as they rise up and call her blessed.

Beautiful and comforting were the floral offerings and the commenting mood of the immense congregation for her funeral at Martha's Chapel Christian Church, of which she was a member, conducted by the writer and Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

B. J. HOWARD.

FREEZE.

Hiram C. Freeze was born April 4, 1869, and died October 3, 1930, at the age of 61 years, 5 months, and 29 days. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, three grand children, three sisters, and two brothers. He was a member of the Disciples Church, and lived and died in Shenandoah, Va. A large gathering of sorrowing friends attended the funeral services at the United Brethren Church in Shenandoah, October 5, 1930.

A. W. ANDES.

McDOWELL.

Mrs. Sally Hammond McDowell was born March 14, 1864, and was called to her reward October 2, 1930, at the age of 66 years. She was the daughter of Wiley and Martha Hammond, and was married to William McDowell February 4, 1892, and to this union were born three children—Artby, Lena and Aubrey, all living; five grandchildren. She also leaves two sisters, one brother. She expressed many times that she was ready to go. She was loved by all who knew her, and will be missed by the entire host of friends.

Burial services at Pleasant Union Christian Church by the writer, in the presence of a large audience. The body was placed beneath a beautiful sea of flowers. May the good Lord, who knows best, comfort the bereaved hearts.

B. H. LOWDERMILK.

LOWDERMILK.

Bro. J. H. Lowdermilk passed from his labors to his reward on September 15, 1930, being aged 88 years and 7 months. He leaves to mourn his departure ten children, 98 grandchildren, and 127 great-grandchildren, besides many other relatives and a host of friends.

Burial was at Pleasant Grove, where he had long been a faithful and devoted member. The large crowd and the beautiful floral offering attested the esteem of his friends and loved ones. Burial services by the writer and pastor, assisted by several other ministers.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

JONES.

Whereas, in the providence of God, on October 4, 1930, Elton Earl Jones, who had been a faithful and loyal member of the I. W. Johnson Bible Class, departed this life to enter upon his eternal reward; we, the members of the I. W. Johnson Bible Class of Oakland Christian Church, offer the following resolutions:

1. That in the death of Mr. Jones, the class has lost an efficient and loyal member; that while we keenly feel that his helpful services will be missed by his class and community, we bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will, knowing that He doeth all things well.

2. To his devoted wife and companion, who mourns his loss, we offer our tenderest sympathy and pray that faith in God may give comfort to her burdened heart.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his bereaved wife, a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy spread on the minutes of our class records.

SHEPHERD.

Inasmuch as our Heavenly Father has seen fit to remove from our midst in Ladies' Aid and Church services our beloved friends, F. R. Shepherd and his wife, Helen Shepherd:

That while we mourn the loss of our dear brother and sister, we bow in humble submission to God's will, knowing that He doeth all things well.

That their life and influence has been a blessing to us and to the community.

That we extend to their sorrowing relatives, friends and loved ones the assurance of our heartfelt sympathy in their double sorrow, that God's richest blessings may be theirs and that He may sustain them with His love.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, a copy to their family, and a copy spread on the records of our Church and Ladies' Aid Society.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

MESSAGE TO MINISTERS.—

Dr. Henry Van Dyke celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday November 10th, and gave out to ministers this message: "Center your ministry on personal loyalty to Jesus Christ, the divine Saviour. He is the only hope of the world. If we love Him truly, believe Him absolutely, and serve Him faithfully, peace will come." The only hope of the world is in faithful, loyal, devoted service of Jesus Christ for the individual, for the Church, for the human race and for the world, and the minister who devoted himself to His faithful will win in His name.

CHURCH UNION.—

The Methodist Protestant Conference, in its recent session at High Point, N. C., voted to unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The spirit of Church union is expressive of good-fellowship among the Protestant Churches of America and will result in a closer co-operation among the people of God in combatting the giant evils that threaten our national life. Even though these resolutions for union may not always materialize in organic union among the Churches, the spirit of co-operation will be promoted and the forces of Christianity will align themselves with a solid front against the enemies of the kingdom.

CHRISTIAN BENEVOLENCE.—

Chicago contributed for benevolent purposes during the past year $160,846,000, as revealed by a recent survey. The contributions include those made to Churches, educational institutions, hospitals, dispensaries, public health service, visiting nurses' associations, organized charities, the fine arts, reform organizations, medical research, institutions for children, the aged and the blind, deaf and otherwise deficient; individual gifts to worthy individuals and miscellaneous social and philanthropic activities. The humanitarian spirit even in Chicago is alive because of the spirit of Christianity which permeates society as leaven leavens the whole lump as taught by Christ.

"CHRISTIAN HERALD."—

The Christian Herald, which has had such a long and successful history as a weekly, changes to a monthly. Dr. Talmage was a regular contributor to this paper in my childhood, and I read his sermons and contributions with pleasure. This change will begin with next February. The reason for the change is for the purpose of the increasing importance of the advertising service department, which appears to function to better advantage in a monthly publication. The Herald has a subscription circulation now of more than 200,000. This is an undenominational paper, and its large circulation is due to its excellent service in the cause of Christ.

BELIEFS THAT GROW.—

Last week, at the fortieth anniversary of his ordination, Dr. William Pierson Merrill, of New York, said, "One faith, above all, has grown more deep and sure all the way—my faith in Jesus Christ, our Lord." He further said, "I can almost say that He has come to fill the whole horizon until all I believe about God and man and Church and life and myself is caught up in the single conviction that he, Jesus, is the wisdom of God and the power of God." As beliefs grow through cultivation, life grows deeper and stronger and sweeter. Cultivate your belief by exercise in good works, and you will come into a closer consciousness of the wisdom and the power of God.

KAGAWA SAYS.—

Visiting China some weeks ago, Kagawa of Japan addressed the general conference leaders of the general assembly of the Church of Christ. He won his Chinese hearers by his first introductory sentences when he expressed his disapproval of and regret for Japanese policies with regard to China in the past, and said: "I love Japan very much, and for that reason I am serving the nation. I belong to God first, and then I belong to Japan." It is reported that he refuses to visit Korea until that country is granted her freedom, lest his message should be hopelessly compromised by the actions of his fellow-countrymen there. His great book on the law of love would be interesting reading for all those who love peace for all humanity.

CALLED AT COLOGNE.—

Dr. Henry Lunn, who was recently honored by a special dinner, celebrating the close of forty years' service in the ministry, at London, said, "That it was in Cologne Cathedral he heard clearly the call to help in building that other holy temple into which each several buildings of God is to be built." He was honored by the presence of men from the left, center and right of the Church, high, low, broad, Anglican and free Church. The Archbishop of Canterbury presided, and with him were classes and conditions. Why all this array and display? Sir Henry Lunn, D. D., was at the same time a Methodist minister and a communicant of the Church of England, and had promoted Christian union for forty years. Those who promote Christian unity and Church union in this day will be honored in the years to come.

UNEMPLOYMENT.—

"Unemployment means insecurity," says Miss Binford, director of the Juvenile Protective Association of Chicago, " and the lessening of self-confidence and the courage of men and women and boys and girls. It means that spirits are broken and that few inhibitions are left. Our child labor laws are breaking down, children are out of school, for they have no food or clothes; men are deserting their families, girls are going into prostitution for purely economic reasons, boys are turning to crime, which is profitable and where jobs seem to be always open. One feels more and more the bitterness in the hearts of those who are facing a situation which they cannot understand and before which they are helpless." Employment is best for the morals and the economic and religious life of the entire nation. Idleness is a menace to society, whether forced or voluntary.

SUPERSTITION.—

Dr. Jefferson, in his lecture on "What Can We Do for Religion?" said, "We can try to keep the spirit of religion sane. It has a tendency to degenerate into superstition. We can use the mind. We can reverence facts. We can stand up for the truth. We can give up old ideas as soon as they have been proven erroneous. We can keep religion thoughtful. The remark often heard that it does not matter what you believe if you do the best you can is insufferably silly. Everything depends on what a man believes. It is its ideas which have kept Christianity alive. We cannot get on without thinking. There is nothing which the Church needs more at the present time than deeper thoughtfulness. We need to think more. Jesus was a thinker. He was a teacher of ideas." If there is any virtue, if there is any praise, think on these things. Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.

GOOD WILL.—

Dr. Fred B. Smith, in his keynote address, as moderator of the National Congregational Council, said, "A titanic contest is on. Upon one side the forces of God, of good will, and enduring peace are aligned; against them are the delayed statesmen and militarists who still believe in the 'ennobling qualities of war' plus the powers of darkness. The final result is in doubt. Another fact is that if the teachers and preachers of peace should cease their efforts, the nations would drift straight into another war. The place and date would be the only unknown elements. . . . The world is waiting for a triumphant Christian Church to be truly Christian by standards of Jesus enunciated in His lifetime and recorded in the four gospels. The utterances of great men have put in concrete form that which many of us believe, viz: that the Christian Church will have to win this issue of world peace if it is ever to be won." Good will alone will win over war and secure world peace.

NOTES-PERSONALS

We learn with regret that the wife of Rev. D. D. Nash, of Hopewell, Va., is seriously ill in the Memorial Hospital, Richmond, Va. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

The North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference was bountifully and royally entertained at Long's Chapel last week while it held its 105th annual session. Dr. C. H. Rowland presided and was re-elected for the sixth successive time. Rev. Stanley C. Harrell is the recording secretary, than whom no Conference has a superior, and Dr. Waldo Boone, of Durham, is the efficient and capable treasurer. The next annual session of the Conference is to be held at Mt. Bethel Church, in Rockingham County.

The editor learns with deep sorrow the passing away of Bro. Hiram Freeman from his home at Ether, N. C., on November 11th. Bro. Freeman was a charter member and may be said to have been the founder of our Christian Church at Ether, and fostered it with loyalty and loving service all the days of his life. He was a familiar figure at the annual sessions of the Western North Carolina Conference, and no man was more deeply interested than he in all that pertained to Conference growth and Christian Church activity.

Two young women made very impressive addresses before the recent session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference—Miss Graham Rowland and Miss Jewel Truitt. These young women declared both in public speech and in private counsel that at heart the young people of our day are not bad and have not gone astray, but deeply long for God and are trying to find the way out. It was an inspiration to the Conference to have these two young women speak as they did. One wonders if in our Conferences we are giving sufficient place and importance to our young people and their problems.

In the death of Mrs. L. J. Fonville, of Burlington, N. C., on Wednesday, November 12th, our Burlington Church loses one of its most faithful and loyal members, and the city of Burlington one of its most noble and beloved Christian women. Sister Fonville was, before marriage, a Walker, the daughter of a pioneer and able Christian minister, and was also the sister of Rev. W. T. Walker, who was once editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and also candidate for Governor of North Carolina on the Prohibition ticket when prohibition was not popular but was making its great struggle upward in this State. Her husband and a daughter, Mamie, preceded her in death, and there survive two sons—Attorney DeRoy, C. C., and Miss Sadie. The burial was from the Burlington Christian Church Thursday afternoon, November 13th, services being conducted by the pastor, Dr. G. O. Lankford, assisted by Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, and THE SUN editor. The floral offering was exceedingly fragrant, beautiful and abundant. This faithful woman surely made a great contribution to the day and generation in which she lived, and her loved ones rise up to call her blessed.

If any CHRISTIAN SUN readers wish to get acquainted with at least twenty-eight missionaries of the Congregational-Christian Mission Boards and Churches, they have an opportunity of doing so by addressing a request for "The Guest Book" to Dr. W. H. Denison, Secretary, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. This request will bring a booklet of thirty-two pages, with covers and maps, giving a sketch of the lives and activities of twenty-eight men and women whose lives are dedicated to the service of their Lord on mission fields at home and abroad. By reading one sketch a day for four weeks, one gets acquainted with these fine souls and consecrated workers. A recent writer in the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty says of the "Guest Book": "I have read my 'Guest Book' through and through. For thirty days, men and women of every color and race have been my guests. They have talked to me of their work, their trials and their triumphs. I have shared their joys and their problems, and again and again I have wished that I could help. And now my chance has come. My gift may be ever so small, or ever so large, but it will all help; and so I shall have a part not only in maintaining the present work, but, I hope, in making the advance which the work so sadly needs this year. With my gift will go a prayer that God will richly bless and multiply his work in which I have taken this extra share. So now, before I forget it, I will place my extra gift in this envelope, and mail it at once, as a proof of my loyalty to the work of the kingdom in the name of Jesus Christ."

HOLLAND.

The first Sunday in November was our first services with the Holland Christian Church after an absence of ten years from this particular pastorate. It was a peculiar joy to return to this field and resume our labors of other days. The services during the two Sundays we have been here were well attended and the spirit of reverence in the worship was very impressive to the pastor.

The Church has had three pastors since we were pastor—Dr. J. P. Barrett, Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, and Rev. W. C. Hook. To these brethren we pay our tribute of honor and respect for the splendid progress and achievement made in these ten years. We have met with a very hearty welcome, and found the parsonage in first-class condition, having been painted throughout on the inside, the floors waxed, and new window-shades installed, with various other improvements as needed.

The Ladies' Aid Society served a sumptuous banquet to the Ruritan Club this week and fifty-five covers were laid. From the proceeds of this banquet and other donations the society expects to net about $75. The pastor had the honor to address this splendid group of men from the community.

We anticipate a year of true worship and consecrated achievement, and to this end we direct our prayers and invite the prayerful indulgence of the whole brotherhood.

BEREA.

With the month of October, we concluded our pastoral services with the Berea Christian Church, near Ossipee, N. C. On account of moving to our new field of labor the last of October, we were unable to fill our last appointment of the year, which was the first Sunday of November. We secured the services of Rev. A. P. Hurst for this Sunday, and we have learned since that he made such a favorable impression that he was unanimously called to serve the Church for the coming year. From our own joyous fellowship with these good folks, I bespeak for Bro. Hurst a rich experience at Berea and a fine opportunity to do good.

We shall never forget the unique surprise we had the week prior to our departure, when several carloads from the Berea Church came to our house. Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Bennett were the heralds sent ahead, not to tell us of what was coming, but to throw us off our guard. After a half-hour or so, the whole group arrived. Soon after, Captain Isley presented us with a document designated as a hunting license. The hunt was to take place at once, and, according to directions, the family was sent outside to make the first catch under a maple tree. During that time the house was ransacked, not to get anything, but to hide the numerous things which they had brought. While they had much sport in watching us conduct the hunt according to directions, the joy was not all theirs. We express our sincere thanks to all who contributed and for the pleasant visit together. May God's richest blessings rest upon this people and their new pastor in the coming days.

MOODY BOOKS.

The Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, founded by D. L. Moody in 1894, continues to distribute its attractive evangelical literature in large quantities to the spiritually needy ones, such as prisoners, mountaineers, lumberjacks, seamen, hospital patients and several other groups. During September and October, the association was able to supply 1,422 mountain schools with 24,820 Moody Colportage Library books, 27,191 evangel booklets, and 40,474 pocket treasuries by reason of contributions to the missionary book fund. The boys and girls in these schools are encouraged to read the books and memorize a number of choice verses. Those who repeat from memory the verses indicated receive as a reward a copy of John, with special helps, or a New Testament for additional verses memorized. In this way, 5,083 scholars thus far earned gospels, and 429 have earned New Testaments. Requests from teachers for additional gospels and New Testaments are being received continually.

One teacher in Kentucky reports: "Each morning the pupils in turn read a chapter out of the pocket treasury. The patrons of the district read the other books, exchanging them, and they are eagerly read. I can easily see an improvement in the deportment of the entire community. We are very thankful for these beautiful gifts."

Another teacher writes from West Virginia: "Words cannot express my deep appreciation for the Testaments. If you could have seen the children's happy faces when I gave them the books, I think you would have felt fully repaid. In some of the homes into which the Testaments went there was no other book concerning religion—not because the people are unbelievers, but simply because there was not money to buy anything of that nature. The parents are as pleased as the children. They also eagerly read the books you sent to us at the beginning of the year."

Christians are urged to pray earnestly that the association will be able to place this helpful literature in at least 7,000 schools during this winter and spring. There is hardly a more effective and economical way of reaching the youth of our land with the messages of life, love and liberty than that employed by the Moody Colportage Association.

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

DR. ROBERT MACDONALD returned to the pastorate of the First Church, Miami, on November 9th. Dr. MacDonald was pastor of the Church for part of last winter season and will serve the Church for the season of 1930-'31. Dr. MacDonald has held large pastorates in the East and is a preacher of outstanding ability.

THE PASTOR-AT-LARGE, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, was most happy in meeting with the West Carolina Christian Conference November 5th. He found a Church chuck-full of delegates, mostly men. These Christians find a way to get away from regular business when their Church needs men in Conference. Looks mighty good.

"FUSING TWO CHURCHES" is the title of an interesting article in the Community Churchman for November, written by Rev. John R. Scotford, a Congregational minister of Cleveland. It is the story of the Federation of Congregational and Disciples' Churches in Chagrin Falls, Ohio. This federation is the result of twelve years of living and working together.

COUNTRY LIFE ACADEMY, Star, N. C., is proving its faith by its works. Not only does it take care of a fine group of students, but, through its talented Bible teacher, Miss Bryant, a week-night school in Sunday School teaching is given once a week for all the Sunday School teachers in the city and country round about. Miss Bryant is an accomplished Bible student, having graduated from some of our country's best schools in religious education.

DR. H. SAMUEL FRITSCH, after an illness of two months, returned to the pulpit of Union Church, Jacksonville, on November 9th. Late in August, Dr. Fritsch was stricken with a hemorrhage of the retina of the eye, combined with a serious heart condition. During much of the same period, his daughter has been ill also. Both are now recovering health and strength, and Dr. Fritsch was welcomed back to the pulpit by a loyal and happy congregation.

LEADER HONORED: The North Georgia Association, at its recent meeting passed the following resolution concerning one of our most faithful leaders: "The North Georgia District of Congregational Churches wish to express their appreciation for the long and unselfish services of Rev. J. F. Blackburn among the Churches and communities of North Georgia. For thirty-five years he has been known and loved by his fellow-pastors and workers and all with whom he comes in contact. He is especially loved by the young people, in whom he has taken a great deal of interest."

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.: In a letter sent by the pastor, Dr. E. A. King, to the members of the Church and its constituency, the following interesting subjects were announced for the month of November: Morning sermon topics—"How We Know God," "How Jesus Reveals God," "God the Great Companion," "Finding God for Ourselves"; evening sermon topics—"Health, Power and Peace," "The Wonderful Law of Suggestion," "The Will to be Well," "God the Great Physician." The Church observed November 9th as "Loyalty Sunday." The Church is entering upon its tenth year under the pastorate of Dr. King.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICE: A striking example of the coming significance of the union between the Christian and Congregational denominations is the great Thanksgiving fellowship meeting to be held at Star, N. C., in the chapel of the Country Life Academy. Five Christian and a like number of the Congregational Churches are invited to share in this service. The Christian Churches are Brown's Chapel, Big Oak, Ether, Biscoe and Shady Grove; Congregational Churches are Star, Providence Chapel, Bailey's Grove, Sophia and Flint Hill. Under the direction of Miss Bryant, the students of the academy will prepare special music and do everything possible to make everybody welcome. Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor of the Christian Church at Greensboro, is expected to preach the sermon, and at least four other preachers will share in the program.

DR. C. REXFORD RAYMOND, of Pilgrim Congregational Church, of Cattagoona, has recently preached two sermons which have been published in the Chattanooga Times. For the first one, the newspaper gives the heading "Calls on Religion to Accept Science." Dr. Raymond deplored the fight made by any part of the Church against science, and particularly against evolution. "Science is what we know, or think we know, about the universe. Religion is our attitude toward that part of the universe which determines our destiny. Religion takes the findings of science and interprets them, asks their meaning and value, what its purpose is and how it is related to our other experience. There is absolutely no need for conflict in religion and science."

The second sermon was on "Science and Immortality." In the sermon, the speaker discusses the extent which science permits people to believe in the life after death. In fact, science does more than admit the possibility of immortality; it gives us facts which encourage us to expect immortality.

DR. J. O. ATKINSON, in an informal address before the Western Carolina Conference of Christian Churches, meeting at Hanks Chapel last week, said: "We really know people only when we know them at their best. And we know Churches in the same way. At the meeting of the American Board of the Congregational Churches, I never saw a more eager hunger for souls, that the world might come to know Him, in my life. I seldom if ever have been so thrilled and lifted as I was in that great meeting. I felt that I was seeing our brethren at their best, and any one in that meeting could but realize we were carried to a great spiritual height in the midst of those great leaders." The occasion was the consideration of the union of our two denominations, and every one present felt that other Churches in communities where there should be but one Church will unite just as soon as they come to "know each other at their best." And so the spirit of co-operative efficiency grows. It is the great way of hastening the coming of Christian civilization. Let us know each other better.

THORSBY INSTITUTE

The library of Thorsby Institute is open free to the public and is used a great deal. It is the only public library in the county. Between seven hundred and eight hundred volumes are given out in a single month. While school is closed during the summer, the library is kept open twice a week.

Miss Fairbank, the librarian, is a Carleton College graduate who has taken library courses at the University of Wisconsin and the University of North Carolina. The library now has about 3,000 volumes. These have been collected since the fire, six years ago, which destroyed about 6,000 volumes.

A recent visitor at the school was Rev. Judson L. Cross, of Boston, who is regional secretary for New England. He expressed himself as much pleased with the work the school is doing and the general atmosphere that prevails.

DR. CROSS' VISIT.

Rev. Judson L. Cross, regional secretary for the American Missionary Association, honored the Southeast with a flying visit of two weeks, ending November 2nd. His itinerary covered parts of Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas. In Atlanta he met with Dr. Bloom and his staff of workers of Georgia and Alabama, consisting of Rev. F. P. Ensminger, Miss Marguerite Davison, Miss Dora Brackin, Miss Annie Campbell, Rev. F. L. Blackburn, and Rev. Milo J. Sweet. Dr. and Mrs. William T. McElveen were guests at the staff luncheon Thursday noon, November 30th. Dr. Dodge was a visitor at the Conference.

Mr. Cross visited Piedmont College and spoke at chapel there. He went to Elon College and was shown the fine equipment and student body under the leadership of President Harper. He also visited the Alice Freeman Palmer Institute at Greensboro. Doubling back, he visited Salisbury Church and preached Sunday morning, November 2nd, at Albemarle. He was delighted, he said, with the South and remarked he had gathered much material for use in his lectures and addresses in the North.

THE CHRISTMAS FUND.

The Christmas fund of the Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief is once more making its appeal in behalf of our aged and disabled ministers, their widows and families. For twenty-seven years this Christmas fund has supplemented the regular grants that can be made from normal sources—apportionment, individual gifts and income from endowment. These regular grants are pathetically small, averaging only $329 to a minister and $258 to a widow. The Christmas fund aims to place in the hands of the more than 800 pensioners of the national and State boards of relief a generous remembrance on Christmas Day. Any portion of the Christmas fund not distributed by Christmas is kept in a special emergency fund to relieve sickness and sudden distress through the year. Last year the Christmas fund amounted to $75,420 and represented the gifts of more than 7,000 friends of our aged ministers. They ranged all the way from $1,000 down. One of the first gifts this year was made by a small Italian boy, who pressed 5 cents into the hand of his pastor, asking that it be given to some one who needed it. It was forwarded to the Christmas fund, his pastor writing, "I hope that this may be used of God in some unpremeditated way to help this great cause."

Any contribution, large or small, may be sent directly to the Board of Ministerial Relief "Christmas Fund," 441 Lexington Ave., New York City, or forwarded through your Church treasurer. "As we have opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them that are of the household of faith."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XV.

S. S. Minnekahda, Thurs., July 17, 1930.

From 6 to 8 this A. M., and from 9 to 11 I read in bed a book called "The King's Passport." It is a fascinating story, historical and imaginary, of the doings in kings' courts and queenly palaces, of the dash and the daring, the adventure and the diplomacy in high circles soon after the conclusion of the great World War.

For our devotions this morning, Dr. Coffin read the first chapter of Philippians. This chapter never seemed so realistic and filled with such life and promise as it seemed while Dr. Coffin was reading it. I recall with what emphasis he read verse 21, "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain." And with what beautiful emphasis he expressed verse 29, "For unto you it is given in behalf of Christ, not only to believe on Him, but also to suffer for His sake." All Scripture is beautiful when properly and appropriately read. Dr. Coffin called on me for the prayer this morning. How grateful I am to be able to once more join in worship with my brethren.

At 10:30, Dr. Coffin talked in the ship's library on "Church Union." His audience was large and mixed, but was delighted, so numbers of those who heard him told me. So far as I know, there were no Congregationalists or Christians in the large mixed audience other than Smith and Coffin, yet they believed in what Coffin said, and one preacher of the company came and wanted to know if I agreed with Coffin. Almost any one gives intellectual assent to the idea of Church union, but it takes more than this. It takes a genuine consent of the heart to enter into Church union.

Smith talks to me today about his problems as a man and a minister. He carries the heaviest burden of any man I know in the ministry. He has a great Church and a great people in a great city. But he has a great debt that burdens him and his people. He carries the weight of that upon his heart, and even while his heart aches he must at all times smile and be happy and seek to carry courage and cheer to the hearts of others. If he and his could lift that debt, what a contribution to the Church and the kingdom Smith and his people would make! I feel this morning if I had the money, or could get it, I can think of no better possible investment in kingdom service than that of wiping out the indebtedness on the Christian Temple and say in the words of our Saviour, "Unloose him and let him go." Maybe he will go the faster and the better when finally the weights are taken off. I recall that the Romans in preparing their horses for a chariot race, would tie sand-bags and weights to their horses' heels, and then remove them on the day of the race so that their feet, being the lighter, they might run the more rapidly. This is where and how we get the word "expedient" in our English tongue. It is from two Latin words, "ex" (off of), "pedes" (the feet). "Expedient" means, then, taking the weight away from the feet, that one might be lighter to run more rapidly. I hope to live to see the weights taken away and to see this wonderful, gifted man of God throw the fervor of his great soul into the cause of winning souls and enlarging the kingdom, not only in the city of Norfolk, but throughout the world.

At 4:30 P. M. today, our captain tells us we are in the Gulf stream. The air is warm and balmy, though blowing quite a little gale. The sea is running high and the white-caps on all sides tip the deep indigo blue, and thus the white and the blue, the soft plush blue and the dashing foamy white, make the eye glad and the heart rejoice. God makes His colors perfectly. I sometimes see a house painted with a mixture of coloring that is painful to look upon, or a person dressed in colors that are offensive to the eye. God never mixes colors save in the most perfect way, restful to the eye and beautiful to look upon. There are vital artists, men and women, in the world who never wear colors that do not properly blend. Nature endowed some persons with a sense of color, and it is an endowment from God, because God never fails to mix and mingle His colors perfectly. I watched the sunset across the sea last evening, and for the life of me I could not find a single color that did not blend with the other colors about it in perfect harmony and loveliness. God has created, and often flings out before us, a rich rioting of colors, but the blending is perfect. I reckon if we are permitted to get to glory land and into that house not made with hands, there will be such a blending of happy and beautiful colors that our eyes can spend an eternity upon it and be restful and contented forever.

NATIONS AND THEIR RULERS.

Nations were once separate units; they are now a closely related Commonwealth. The map of the world is small, compared with a century ago. Distance has been almost annihilated. The world is a neighborhood. This has increased national obligations and opportunities. Responsibility has been transferred from the individual to society. When nations were monarchies, rulers were responsible, and controlled States. The Pharaohs and Caesars did not consult their subjects; neither did Herod. But Democracy has changed the power of rulers, and increased the responsibility of the people. There is no absolute monarchy now, not even in Turkey. Behind the rulers of the world are constitutions to control them. Government derives its just powers from the people, and rulers must respect their rights.

The tragedies in this change in the death of czars and kings are appalling; but it is the penalty of misrule and the abuse of powers. This emphasizes the fact that the world is passing through a crisis in bringing the nations closer together. The world has had theocratic, patriarchal, monarchical governments, and is now passing into democratic government; and the change has put the nations in pains and revolutions.

There is a universal hunger and urge for two blessings: First, world peace. The world is sick of war. Second, rulers who fear God and keep His commandments. Even Turkey has no absolute sovereign, the Nationalists taking the place of the Sultan as ruler of Church and State. Turkey may be a crude democracy, cruel and murderous still; but absolute monarchy in Turkey is dead. It was to be expected that revolutionary monarchy would follow the change; that the reactions were not prepared for peace and good will toward one another. Force and diplomacy have failed to abolish war; but the world yearns for peace. Many efforts have been made to reconcile the nations and prevent war; but, so far, they seem to have failed.

The conferences in Genoa, The Hague, and London failed; and the conference at Lausanne seems to struggle in vain with this great problem. Diplomacy seems to be helpless in the fact of narrow patriotism and greed. Force has failed. The World War left the nations in doubt, and hard times follow in the wake of war. Nations are still afraid of one another, and rulers are powerless while the world waits for God to help. The task of bringing the nations together in peace seems to be the task of the Church. The burden of a ruined world rests on the Church, and her only help is in prayer. Civilization will be wrecked unless God saves the nations from selfishness, lack of confidence in one another, and a deeper consecration to spiritual life.

W. W. S.

SELECTIVE IMMIGRATION.

As a further means of reducing unemployment and hastening the return of affairs to a sound economic basis in this country, it is expected that legislation will be introduced at the next session of Congress providing for strictly selective immigration. This system would give preference to those immigrants who would fill a need in a particular field. And, it is suggested, that the number from each country should be restricted to the present quotas. Under the present system, aliens who first file application and pass the required tests are first admitted.

While such a selective basis of immigration might help solve the problem temporarily, the time is rapidly approaching, if not here, when immigration must be checked entirely. The farms of this country are already overpopulated and production is exceeding the demand. In the industrial fields the same is true.

Therefore, the addition of workmen to fields that are already filled necessarily means increased unemployment, lowered wages and general depression. Those who favor unrestricted immigration into this country must face facts and admit that the absolute restriction of immigration must be adopted in the near future as a self-protective measure.

THE FIGHT AGAINST PROHIBITION

II.

By Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein,
Pastor People's Church, Dover, Del.

The fight against prohibition expresses a heartless and an unsocial attitude of mind. It ignores the purpose and objective of prohibition—to make it impossible for the man to get drink who is unable to resist the temptation; to take the temptation of drink away from youth; to remove the stench of the saloon from the nostrils of society; to protect the interests of the home where fathers squandered their pay-check for drink at the corner saloon instead of spending it for food and clothing; to promote efficiency by sobriety among the industrial classes; to make life safer for all against the menace of drunkenness; in short, to wipe out the curse of the licensed liquor traffic, with all its multiplicity of evils. The prohibition reform is a social reform, purely in the interest of society. And the fight against prohibition is thus an unsocial attempt to oppose the welfare of society for selfish purposes. They declare that their opposition to prohibition is based on its failure to make conditions better than were those it sought to remedy under the saloon regime.

But the benefit prohibition has been cannot fail to be appreciated by all who are unbiased in their judgment and who wish to see. Drunkenness has decreased more than 80 per cent. The savings accounts of the working-classes have grown almost incredibly. The enemies of prohibition blame the present unemployment problem on prohibition, quite forgetting that in the past the unemployment problem, such as that of 1892, in the days of the saloon, was far more baffling. Facts are stubborn things, and the facts are on the side of the friends of prohibition.

Compare conditions today in your own city and community with what they were in the days of the saloon. In those days, women and children did not dare to go on the public streets alone on Saturday night, because of the nuisance of drunkenness—fist fights, shooting scrapes, with their accompanying deluge of profanity.

There are more than fifteen million school children in America today who have never seen a licensed saloon, simply because of what prohibition has done. The United States government, moreover, is no longer participant in the crime of making drunkards. Prohibition has made the liquor business an outlaw and thereby given it its proper classification.

Certainly no one is satisfied with the accomplishments of prohibition. But its friends are thankful for what it has done, whereas its enemies are mad because prohibition has done so much. It is preposterous for the wets to prate about the short-comings of prohibition. Why should people who want more liquor complain about there being too much liquor? They complain one day about there being too much liquor, saying that the prohibition law is a dead letter, and the next day they complain about the prohibition law being too drastic. They say one day that they can get all the liquor they want any time they want it, and the next day they say the prohibition law infringes upon their rights, denying them a personal liberty to which they are entitled. "O consistency, thou art a jewel." Note this: the people who prayed and worked and sacrificed to give our nation prohibition are still supporting prohibition, whereas the same people who opposed this reform at the time it was effected are the ones who are fighting for its repeal.

Certainly the friends of prohibition are not satisfied with what it has done, but they have faith in its objective and its possibilities. Neither are any of us satisfied with what the Churches are doing. But who would contend that because of this failure the Churches should be closed? Neither are we satisfied with the results of our sanitation laws, or of our traffic laws in reducing mortality. We continue to hold them, however, and hope for better results. The most erratic would not advocate abolishing these laws because they are not functioning one hundred per cent.

Not less prohibition, but more prohibition is what America needs. And if the enemies of prohibition were sincere in deploring the bootlegging situation they could put the bootlegger out of business in less than three months by stopping patronizing them. The people who break the law are the only ones who can stop the bootlegging by stopping breaking the law.

Heretofore, we have put all the blame on the bootlegger for the violation of the prohibition law, when the fact of the matter is the man who makes an illicit purchase of liquor is even more guilty than the man who makes the illicit sale, because he is responsible for encouraging the bootlegger in his unlawful business, and moreover he makes the bootlegger's unlawful business possible. Both offenders should be punished by the law, for both are enemies of the law.

THE ELON MILLION-DOLLAR CAMPAIGN.

I have been honored with membership on the "Million-Dollar Campaign" now beginning for Elon College, and also with the chairmanship of the executive committee for this campaign. It has been my privilege to speak in two of our Conferences—the Western North Carolina, and the North Carolina and Virginia—and to encourage our people to put forth every effort to make this campaign the success it will be and ought to be.

When I first mentioned this matter in my own Church, the Graham-Providence Memorial, one of my neighbors asked me why it was that I was boosting Elon College so much when I did not send my own two sons there for their education. I gave him what I think was the complete answer, that these two sons of mine were looking forward to medical careers, and that I gave them the choice of institutions to which they should go for this training. It was a matter of real concern that our college was not qualified in that time in their judgment to give them the preparation they needed. I am happy to say, however, that if they were to go to college now they could spend their undergraduate days in pre-medical work and obtain from it credit in any college in the land. This is true since Elon has become a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, the highest honor, as I understand it, that can come to a college in this section.

And then I went on to set forth to this friend of mine what an opportunity we now have to strengthen Elon, so that it would always be able to meet the highest standards of education, and so that our sons and daughters may, with complete confidence, resort to it for their intellectual development.

I have seen this college grow from nothing to what it is. I was on the location committee that met on the present campus when there was nothing there but trees and underbrush, and I marvel at what has been achieved. But what has been achieved should be an incentive to us to go forward to make this institution an instrument to serve the common people in their Christian education.

I am frank to say that when the campaign committee met at Elon College on October 21st, I was not very enthusiastic about the success of this campaign, but I want my brethren to know that I have never attended a more inspirational meeting than the one held on this day in which representatives of the Congregational and Christian Churches cooperated thoroughly and completely in setting up and launching this campaign. I came away from that meeting satisfied that a new day had dawned for the education of young people in the United Church in the South.

During that meeting there was present the president of the General Alumni Association of the college, Mr. F. F. Myrick, a rising young attorney, and he was anxious that some specific project might be assigned the alumni. He inquired particularly about the cost of the campaign, and when he was informed that it would be perhaps $10,000 a year, and when he further learned that the alumni had been giving from $5,000 to $8,000 a year for the past several years, he requested that the Alumni Association executive committee might be permitted to vote on this proposition as the specific project of the campaign.

Since the committee meeting, the General Alumni executive committee have voted, as I understand it, to undertake to do this, and have requested Mr. George D. Colclough to call upon their members to make contributions for this purpose. We are, therefore, pleased to say to every one who gives to the "Million Dollar Campaign" that every dollar they give goes to the campaign, the expenses having been otherwise provided. I never knew of anything like this before, and I rejoice that this has happened to our institution and that Elon's alumni have taken this stand for the college.

Then, again, this committee decided that our Churches and individual members of our Churches in the name of their Churches would not be called upon to give more than they have been giving in the past several years. This means that the Conference apportionments will be kept at $12,750 for Elon, and all our Churches should pay these apportionments in full. In addition to this $24,000, with appropriate quotas assigned to every congregation, will be expected from our Churches, as has been the case since the Southern Convention met in Durham. The offerings in our Sunday Schools received quarterly for the college apply on this, and gifts of individual members in the name of their Church will also apply. I do hope that it will be the pleasure of our people to raise this current expense account during this period.

The million dollars, however, we expect to get from the foundations, one of which has already given us a pledge of $150,000, and from individuals of wealth and generous dispositions who appreciate a Christian college, such as Elon is, and are willing to help an institution which had the foresight, even in its poverty, to place on its campus the first building on any college campus in the world a building devoted exclusively to Christian education.

I am very happy to report that the attitude of the Congregational brethren who met with us on October 21st was beautiful, as has already been stated by Dr. L. E. Smith, who is chairman of the general committee, and I am delighted to report that we have secured the services of Mr. S. C. Heindel, a man of wide experience in college finances, to be associated with our president in the conduct of this campaign. It seems to me that we have organized our campaign to represent both Churches, and with executives in the campaign who represent both Churches, there should be real and universal success.

I am satisfied that the Christian Church, the Alumni Association, the Congregational Church, and the people at large are going to support this "Million Dollar Campaign," and as chairman of its executive committee I pledge my very best to the undertaking.

Junius H. Harden,
Chairman Executive Committee.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A group of Elon students, numbering more than twenty-five, stopped over in Suffolk on Thursday evening, November 13th, and were entertained at a supper in the Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church by the alumni of Suffolk and ladies of the Church. Forty surrounded the long table and seemed to enjoy the meal.

The group was the football team of Elon College on their way to play a game with Apprentice School at Newport News on Friday night. On account of the Fox Hunters' Association being in Suffolk at that time, the big Elliott Hotel was crowded, and they could not get lodging in Suffolk and had to go on to Newport News after the supper.

The supper seemed to be sponsored by Roy and Howard Richardson, as they had led in the entertainment and called out the speakers at the banquet. The young men seemed to enjoy the supper, and it was a well-behaved company of young men. There was no smoking, no boisterous speech, and no rough voice. It is, no doubt, the rule of the team not to use liquors or cigarettes while off for a game; but, even allowing for the rule, the boys deserve a word of compliment for strict obedience to rules. The group was representative, as there were students from Pennsylvania to Alabama, and all between.

The Elon College-Apprentice game was played Friday night, and the score was, Elon 43, Apprentice 0, as reported to the Virginian-Pilot of this Saturday morning.

The Suffolk alumni, a few high school boys invited as guests, and the ladies of the Church (some of them alumnae) enjoyed the entertainment and asscciation. This Church hospitality was not, primarily, endorsement and encouragement to football as a game, but to Elon College and her students. The pastor of this Church and ten officials in the Sunday School were students at Elon College. This occasion was, therefore, a renewal of friendship and the exercise of fellowship that embraces States, communities, and the college and the Church. College life is the source of unity in thought, in purpose and life-work, and a fountain of pleasant memories in after years. The Church needs to cultivate, more and more, loyalty to Elon and student support. It is more important to send a son or daughter to Elon than to give money and send to other institutions. After all, human contact in study, in work, and in social relations makes up the largest and most abiding friendships and useful service. The song to "Old Elon" by the young men left a note of love for the college and its work.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

This Elon Letter contains the substance of an address prepared for the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, but which there was not time to deliver. The thought I had in mind in this address was to encourage our people in their right, when the "Million Dollar Campaign" is beginning, to rejoice in the decision reached in 1888 to found a college and in the sacrifices that through the years since have perpetuated that ideal and incarnated it in Elon College.

There have been three great critical periods described in our Bible, in the development of the Christian religion. There were the era when the law was being promulgated, the era of the prophets, when the government was passing from that of judges to that of theocratic monarchy, and the era of the establishment of the Christian Church in the first century of Christian history.

In every one of these critical periods God made great use of men who were thoroughly trained and educated. When it became necessary to lead the oppressed children of Israel from under the Egyptians into the promised land which marks the making of the law and its formulation, while there were thousands of people of splendid native intelligence and devout consecration, there was but one man fitted for that crucial time, the great lawgiver, Moses, trained in all the wisdom of Egypt and one of the intellectual giants of human history.

When the disunited tribal organization of the Hebrews faced extinction unless there could be a centralized form of government, again there were no doubt hundreds of splendid men like the judges in former days who were anxious to serve their fellows and to do the will of God. The man, however, chosen for this work was the prophet Samuel. He had not only been brought up according to the best tradition of the times, but he believed so thoroughly in the educational method that he founded the schools of the prophets.

When the Christian era began and there was need to interpret the gospel of love in a world that was imbued with the spirit of force, again there arose in the crucial hour one of the great intellectual giants of the ages, the apostle Paul, of the university town of Tarsus, who had also studied at the feet of Gamaliel, one of the greatest of Hebrew teachers.

It should certainly encourage our people to think on these three eras in the development and advancement of the Christian religion in each one of which God made use of the best-trained intelligence of the time. It should encourage us in this time of depression to do our very best for this campaign that is now in progress and that for the next five years is scheduled to loom large on the financial horizon in our Church.

Not only do we have these positive encouragements to undertake to go forward in the program of education, but we have the negative spur to urge us on in what is known as the dark ages. During this period in the Christian Church, education was neglected and schools fell into disuse and decay. It was not until the renaissance and the period of the Reformation, led by the great Luther, buttressed by the scholarship of the great Melanchthon, that the Christian world came out of the darkness of that dismal period into the period of light and joy and progress that we now enjoy. If the Christian Church has any message based on experience, it is that one of its primary functions is to educate men and women for leadership and service in its ranks.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

Every human being has the experience of two worlds—the internal world of thought and the external world of his sense preception. Many philosophers have contended that the inner world is all we have, for in the last analysis all we really know is our thoughts about the outer world.

Science, as we know, is an endeavor to explain and describe the manifestations of nature. It endeavors to describe and explain the affairs of this world and other worlds. Religion is man's supreme search for a human good and his utmost trust in this Almighty power for this world and the next. This desire grew out of human need, and our religion is the outgrowth of human experience. Our conception of God is based upon human need in this twentieth century.

In this astronomical department of the temple of knowledge, you will find charts of the heavens and catalogues of the stars. Here in this very temple, human knowledge has been led out to the infinitely great. We are made to realize that this little world in which we live is a very small place in the house of the Father in heaven. We are told that it takes fifty years for the light to reach us from the North Star. As we peer out of our window on a stary night and see the hosts of heaven in their splendor, we are made to exclaim, What a wonderful universe this is!

The chemist leads material substances a merry dance; he is able to marshal these little atoms, and so tiny are they that no human eye has ever seen them, and yet they obey the chemist. This is the world of atoms, and each atom is a little world in itself composed of wonderful electrons.

In the temple of physical science is revealed the wonders of electricity, light and heat. Here we are told how a ray of light can leave the sun and travel through millions of miles and reach the earth without losing its way. Here we find how God takes care of burnt candles, so that nothing is lost, shall He not take care of me? It is in this department that we learn that the whole universe is composed of things in motion. Sound, light, and heat, and even the hardest substances are made up of atoms which are continually in motion—as if the Supreme Being had infused the energy of His mind into this whole creation and had said in the beginning, Let there be motion.

In the biological laboratory is studied, in the most wonderful way, life in all its forms, from the amoebs through the cell and processes of generation, through the kingdoms of the botanical and animal.

We learn of the mind of man through the study of psychology, and out of this inner world comes all that we are pleased to call civilization. All religion and the Bible originate in a man's soul; all the splendid philanthropy, all the great achievements of the modern world, all the art and poetry and philosophy, come from this little world.

Religion and all true sciences are at one with each other. Any discovery of truth cannot injure eternal reality. When Newton discovered the law of gravitation, even men of intelligence such as the great John Wesley were afraid he was going to drive God out of the world. Science has driven out of the world the gods of the heathen and the smaller God of an earlier generation, but our notion of God has been enlarged by the discoveries of science.

Lelande swept the heavens with his telescope and reported that he found no God there; there was none to be found by the telescope. I suppose that he expected to find God in the form of a man seated upon a throne in some point of space, and he was disappointed. Such a God would be too small for the purpose of an infinite universe. His dwelling-place is in the atoms as well as in the stars. He is present in the storm, fire and earthquake as well as in the small still voice. He is in the beauty of the landscape; He glimmers in every sunbeam; He is the ebb and flow of the tide; the various forces of nature are but a manifestation of His power; He is the energy within all energy, the force within all force, and every lay traces His footsteps. Drive God out of the universe? This makes every land a Palestine. This makes every human soul a tabernacle of the Infinite. This makes God the internal force of the whole creation, and not something standing on the outside watching it go.

The love of truth which scientific work makes a condition and a contagion could well be copied by the religious thinkers of the world today. The Church has opposed, much to its discredit, every great scientific discovery in the past and has taken a prominent place in the persecution of scientific workers and in frustrating the new light of knowledge. It has failed, or at least it has been reluctant, in seeing that science has been writing the pages of a new Bible; that nature today is revealing more God to us than ever before.

There has been much talk about the antagonism of science and religion. There is no such antagonism; they are co-workers. Nature has a religious heart, and it is perfectly proper that we feel its great throbbing and respond to its appeal. Science is a thing of measurement and balance, a thing of classification and verification, something that is exact, impersonal; religion is a thing of ideal reach, something that is personal, something that considers nature in the light of ideals, hopes and aspirations of humanity.

This power in nature, Paul calls "one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all and in us all." It could aptly be called the great silence. This is the power that inspires poetry, and music, and art, and science, and philosophy, and religion, and every form of the ideal in human souls. Science, then, gives us facts; religion imparts ideals. Science gives us the laws of nature, religion brings us face to face with the great reality whose workings science traces in these laws. Science teaches us of the use of the intellect pre-eminently; religion, as we see it, teaches us the use of the entire soul, intellect, emotion, volition. Religion deals with the last word of science, its ultimate reality at first hand, and takes note of all that is tender and fine, every heart-beat and divine instinct of the human soul.

PROGRESS IN CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN UNIFICATION.

BY FRANK K. SANDERS, Sec'y.

During the sessions of the International Congregational Council at Bournemouth, England, in July, the executive members, Drs. Burton, Coffin, Denison and Sanders, of the Joint Advisory Commission, appointed at Piqua, last October, got together for a meeting, at which the existing situation was reviewed. This commission of fourteen members was created to serve as a body to be available for reference and counsel regarding the many incidental problems certain to arise during the process of drawing the Christian and Congregational Churches into an actual unity. No one can have supposed that this process would be brief and devoid of problems requiring all sorts of solutions. The Advisory Commission was given no authority, and does not even assume a responsibility for initiating action; but it stands ready to serve the two groups of Churches, when requested to do so, in meeting any difficulty growing out of the process of drawing closer together. Many occasions in associations, conferences and local Churches have arisen since Piqua for its good offices.

At Bournemouth the committee tried to estimate the progress that has been made. The two outstanding immediate needs are those of territorial reorganization into State units and locally of departmental adjustment. The Christians have a scheme of general organization which takes little account of State lines; the Congregationalists are organized by States. The "Plan of Union" contemplates organization along State lines, but the process cannot be instantaneous, or a matter of compulsion. The committee reviewed what has happened during the six months since Piqua in New England, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and the Southeast. The Southern Convention and the Congregational Conference of the Southeast, at a recent meeting at Raleigh, N. C., voted to unite at once, appointed joint committees, adopted THE CHRISTIAN SUN as a common organ, and took other steps looking toward intimate co-operation. In these other States, notably, so far, in Ohio, a common State organization is being worked out. There are complications, but a willing spirit. In Ohio a Congregational-Christian State Conference was organized in May, with Dr. Hall as joint superintendent. In other States, union meetings have already been held, committees are working out plans of union, associations are seeking to adjust boundaries, joint programs are being arranged, speakers are being interchanged and the organizations of women are conferring in order to understand more clearly the purpose of each other's program, policy and organization.

In departmental and mission affairs, there has been active progress, especially in the exchanging of projects and the issuance of literature. The actual, formal, legal election of representatives of the Christian Churches to our administrative boards is a technical procedure, which is being worked out as rapidly as possible, and in every case these brethren have been given an actual place such as they will receive at the proper dates of formal election. The Secretary for Home Missions of the Christian Churches divides his time between the two groups. The foreign work of both in Japan has been happily united. Means and methods of common promotion of missionary interests are being worked out. The work of religious education in both groups is being furthered by a joint use of secretaries, summer conferences and literature. Plans have been approved by the publishing interests for uniting the Sunday School literature, after October 1st, with the imprint, "Issued under the auspices of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches." This action is technically anticipatory, but practically wise.

A joint "Year Book" is under way, as well as the program for the first General Council meeting at Seattle, Wash., next May, and the constitution to be presented for the council's consideration.

At a joint conference of officials of the Congregational and Christian Churches, held in New York City, May 26th, it was voted, "That it is the judgment of this group that such an administrative and promotional merger should be completed by January 1st as will enable a united appeal to be made to all the Churches after that date and the money sent to a common treasurer." This action will go far to bring about the sense of unity that develops so slowly.

The commission sincerely hopes that during this transition period every pastor, as well as every official, will not content himself with looking on to see what is to happen, but do his utmost to make it happen. We are committed to this union; may we not seek in fine, unselfish fashion, every one in his own respective field, to make it a speedy reality.

Any Church or Churches not having called a pastor or contemplating a change, and desires my services, I shall be glad to consider the same. I am open for full time. D. D. NASH.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(November.)

Father, for Jesus' sake, make His Church glorious even now. Sooner than outer efficiency, increase inner sufficiency—the soul-caliber that qualifies for the greatest evangelistic outreach. Within Zion bounds, O God, may the Pentecostal pressure of sharing and giving be felt from center to rim, and may stewardship find its place in all of life. Grant to Church officers discernment rightly to interpret and impress stewardship, and lay hard upon the consciences of all who lead the duty and responsibility of securing to the Church and making permanent for its care and expansion, the principle of "God's portion." From self into service, we pray for all, in Jesus' name. Amen.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY.

The missionary has long been the most forceful expression of a vital, indomitable Christian faith. Braving every danger on land or sea, he has made his way into all the world to plant the standard of the cross. Into lion-infested wilds on the African veldt, through fever-ridden jungles under the burning Indian sun, over wind-swept wastes of Mongolian plains, into cannibal-inhabited isles of the South Seas, the missionary has made his way in order to carry the message of his Lord. No sacrifice has been considered too great, no sea too wide, no toil too hard for this representative of Christ in his endeavor to carry out the commission of his beloved Master. Battered by wind and sea, scorched by sun and stricken by plague, maligned by foe and misunderstood by friend, the missionary has nevertheless pressed on, that the gospel of the coming kingdom of His Lord might be proclaimed throughout all the earth.—Watchman.

ADVENTISTS AND HEALTH.

Mr. W. K. Kellogg, famous corn-flake king, recently presented the Seventh Day Adventist College of Medical Evangelists with an endowment of two million dollars for the erection and operation of a special clinic, to be known as "The W. K. Kellogg Foundation for Cancer Research." For some time Mr. Kellogg has been intensely interested in the progress that is being made by medical science in its efforts to obliterate forever the terrible scourge of cancer. Mr. Kellogg does not belong to the Seventh Day Adventist Church, but for many years he has been intimately associated with a number of men and women of that faith. It is peculiarly significant that when he came to choose the group of men whom he desired to carry out his wishes in connection with the cancer foundation, he chose these men of another religious faith and asked them to conduct this study through the regular organized channels of their denominational medical work.

Among others who have made notable gifts to the medical and mission work of Seventh Day Adventists is Mr. Porter, retired wealthy Denver business man, who recently presented them with a gift of $330,000 which made possible the new Porter Sanitarium and Hospital, which has been just completed in Denver. Before the institution was completed, Mr. Porter added to his generous gift another $45,000 for the erection of a nurses' home. The institution is owned and operated by the denomination through its medical department in accordance with its special principles of healthful living. The gift was made without any stipulations on the part of the donor except that it should bear his name.

The principles of healthful living, for which Seventh Day Adventists have stood for the eighty-odd years of their existence, have been a rich blessing to humanity the world over. No other religious sect places the emphasis upon healthful living that they do. They take literally the Bible injunction that the "body is the temple of the Holy Ghost" (1 Cor. 6:19). They religiously believe that intemperance in any form is sin. They do not draw the line of intemperance with the consumption of bootleg liquor, but extend it to any form of dissipation that impairs the body.

The remarkable work that is being accomplished by these people in relieving the physical suffering of the world, as they seek to relieve the spiritual suffering of mankind, is attracting the attention of some of the world's greatest leaders.—Watchman.

C. M. A. TO CONVENE.

The Christian Missionary Association will convene on December 9th, at 10:30 A. M., with the First Christian Church, Norfolk (Berkley), Rev. J. E. McCauley being the pastor.

We trust that you are going to attend this session. We believe a day of real enjoyment and spiritual values will be derived by all those in attendance. You will help us to make a great day by your interest, your contribution, your prayers, your presence. Encouraging reports, to be had from different sources throughout the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, promise much in our assurance that this is going to be the best annual meeting the Christian Missionary Association ever had; awakened interest, increased contributions, a more balanced representation is assured.

We believe you are contributing toward this, or at least that you will do so, beginning immediately. Are you a member of the organization? Is your Church represented therein? If not, won't you make it your business to see that this shall be done. It will cost you just $10 a year for self or Church, or Church organization or society. If a woman or child, the annual fee is just $5.00. It is never a proper question to ask, "How much of my money shall I give to God?" but rather, "How much of God's money shall I spend upon myself?" Clouds give to earth their water; trees their fruit; all nature gives unstintingly; but, above all things else, God gives beyond measure—shall we not do likewise? "He that spared not His Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8:32.)

POUNDED.

When a servant has served a number of years in a certain capacity, he wonders if his services are appreciated. Often he feels as if it might not be better to retire from the field of labor and permit others to see what they may do.

The writer seemed to have run his course at Big Oak, having served that good people for several years, and felt as if he should vacate. But last Sunday our hearts were made to rejoice, and we had reason to be encouraged and to undertake the work of a new year with vigor. After services, our Ford was burdened with a number of good things to eat. Among the articles were potatoes, pumpkins, corn, lard, sugar, peas, beans, syrup, peanut butter and canned fruits of various kinds.

We can only hope that the good Father may richly bless every giver, and that we may have a successful year of Christian endeavor and activity.

AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?

Some twenty-five or thirty years ago, an appreciative patient presented me with a "scrap book," knowing that I was fond of collecting thoughts beautifully expressed. This "scrap book" gave me a good deal of pleasure and real inspiration for years in assembling quotations and periodically reviewing same. For the past ten years my time has been so occupied that the book has been robbed of the usual companionship that it once had, and as a result it became misplaced until a few days ago, when it showed up. I was so delighted in the finding that I ran through a portion of it hurriedly, and came across the following from the pen of Richard H. Edmonds, late editor of the Manufacturers' Record, entitled "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" with a footnote requesting, "Please read and hand it to some one else. Keep it going." I regret that this footnote was overlooked by me years ago, and, to compensate for this oversight, I am asking that it be published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, that it may again take a start and cross the paths of many.

Suffolk, Va. (DR.) J. E. RAWLES.

Above all else, this country needs a nation-wide revival of old-fashioned prayer-meeting religion.

A religion that makes men realize that there is a heaven, there must also of necessity be a hell.

A religion that makes a man realize that every act is recorded on his own conscience, and that, though that may slumber, it can never die.

A religion that makes an employer understand that if he is unfair to his employees and pays them less than fair wages, measured by his ability and their efficiency and zeal, he is a robber.

A religion that makes an employee know that if he does not give full and efficient service, he, too, is a robber.

A religion that makes a farmer who packs bad fruit at the bottom and deceives the buyer by the good fruit on the top, realize that he is a thief just as much as the one who robs a hen roost at night.

A religion that makes a man who robs a railroad of its fare, or its freight bill, know that he robs himself of all right to feel that he is an honest man.

A religion that makes a man realize that by driving too hard a bargain with his servant, his employee, or his merchant, he can be just as much a profiteer as the seller or producer who swindles by false weight, false packing, or false charges.

A religion that will teach Church members who fail to contribute to the extent of their ability to the support of religion that they are robbing God, and that compels them to recognize that if they are paying their pastor less than a living salary they are robbing God and man alike.

A religion that will make the laboring man, who, by threats or by actual violence against the non-union man, strive to keep him out of employment, realize that he is at heart a murderer and is murdering the individuality and the liberty of his fellow-man and is displaying a hatred which, if it has the opportunity, will commit physical murder.

A religion that will make the politician who yields principle for the sake of party, who worships at the feet of any class and sells his soul for political preferment, know that he is not only a coward and a poltroon and unworthy of the respect of any decent man, but which will also make him see that he is helping to murder human liberty, as great a crime as murdering the individual man.

In short, we need a revival of that religion which will make every man and woman strive in every act of life to do that which on the great judgment day they will wish they had done, as with soul uncovered they stand before the judgment seat of the eternal.

Until the people of this nation accept and live this religion, there will be strife where there should be peace; there will be strikes and lockouts and murders where there should be co-operation and harmony, and there will be hatred where there should be friendship and love.

In the Golden Rule, followed in the fullness of the spirit of this kind of religion, there would be found a solution for every business trouble; there would be created friendship between employer and employee; capital and labor would work in harmony and with efficiency—efficiency for the capital and efficiency for the labor, with profit to both.

Religion of this kind is not measured by the hope of a heaven hereafter, but by the full fruition now of "peace on earth to men of good will."

It is not merely the chanting of hymns here or in the world to come, but it is in the recognition and full application by rich and by poor, by learned and unlearned, that each one is indeed his brother's keeper; that we can bring this country and the world back to safety.

A nation-wide acceptance of this, the only true religion in action, would bring business peace and world peace, where there is now turmoil, and men would then cease to seek to gain their aims by lawless acts of immorality, but would, in spirit and in deed, follow the Divine command: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

Zacchaeus the Publican.

Golden Text: "The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke 19:10.

Lesson: Luke 19:1-10.

The Road from Jerusalem to Jericho.

Not all those who went down the road from Jerusalem to Jericho robbed folks and beat them up as did those who did this to the man in the story of the good Samaritan. Here was one going up from Jericho to Jerusalem who went about doing good, seeking and saving that which was lost. And we are truly his disciples when, like him, we lend a helping hand to those with whom we come in contact on the highways of life.

A Man Small in Stature, Rich in Money, Dwarfed in Soul.

Zacchaeus was a publican, a hated tax collector or tax gatherer, who paid a stated sum to Rome for the privilege of collecting taxes in a district, and then proceeded to extort from his fellow-countrymen as much as he could possibly squeece from them. Zacchaeus did this on a large scale, for he was "a chief publican." And because of the large scale on which he carried on his unscrupulous business, he had become rich. He was small in stature and he was also small in soul. Engaged as he was in a business that lent itself readily to dishonesty, and with his passion for money ever growing stronger, the finer qualities of the man had become atrophied and dwarfed. It is quite probable that he was generally hated by the Jews, and it is just as probable that he had lost his own self-respect.

Seeking to See Jesus, Who He Is.

"And he sought to see Jesus, who He was." It might have been unadulterated curiosity; or again it might have been because Zacchaeus felt that after all this young rabbi might have for him the secret of a finer life. In any event, he wanted to know more about the Master. It is always a hopeful sign when there is awakened within a man a desire to know more about Jesus, or to know what manner of man He is and who He is.

Zacchaeus did not allow obstacles to stand in the way of achieving his purpose. He had probably risen to his high position because of that very spirit. The thing he wanted to do was to see Jesus, who He was. He was too small to see Him if he got in the crowd—he was not tall enough to see Jesus at all. He, therefore, climbed up a sycamore tree, and blissfully unmindful of the attention he attracted and impervious to the ridicule which was probably directed toward him, he patiently waited, knowing that Jesus would have to pass that way.

There are barrier and obstacles in the way of coming to Jesus, but they are not insuperable. Where there is a will there is a way. As some one has recently said, we modern folks seem to have lost the will to believe.

An Overture of Friendliness and Ready Response.

Jesus and Zacchaeus were poles apart in many respects, but there was a common language through which they could understand each other. The Master took notice of Zacchaeus, and He undoubtedly saw in the man's enterprise evidences of finer qualities that lay dormant—lost, unquickened—in the man. He called him down, and without formality invited Himself to Zacchaeus' home. It took courage on Jesus' part to do this, but Jesus always had the courage to put human values first.

There was a ready response on the part of Zacchaeus. That evidence of friendliness, that personal interest in him on the part of this young Rabbi quickened something within this apparently hardened tax collector, so that he made haste, came down, and received Him joyfully. Down in the human heart, crushed by the tempter, chords that are broken will vibrate once more when they are touched by the spirit of unselfish interest and friendliness. In our modern Church life, with its emphasis on plans and programs, we need to keep in mind the place and power of personal friendliness

Carping Criticism.

"He is gone in to lodge with a man that is a sinner." These Jews did not see the main point at all. They themselves were not in the kingdom and they were doing all they could to keep others from entering into the kingdom. They were sticklers for form—it was not the thing for a Jew to eat with a publican, and they showed in no uncertain way their disapproval and displeasure. They tithed mint and anise and cummin and neglected the weightier matters of the law, the merciful heart and the sympathetic spirit. The species is not extinct.

A Little-Big Man.

Zacchaeus was small in stature and he was small in soul, but there was a potentially great soul in him. We do not know what Jesus said; we do not know whether He said anything or not. But something took place in Zacchaeus' life; something so vital that it made him a new man. He was no longer the hard-hearted, bargain-driving, selfish money-grabber; he was generous to the extent of giving a full half of his riches to help the poor. He was no longer the unscrupulous extortioner; he was willing to restore to any one whom he had wronged four times as much as he had taken. Call it what one may, the thing took place in Zacchaeus' life that ought to take place in every man's life when he professes religion. There ought to be a new standard of conduct and there ought to be, as far as possible, a righting of old wrongs. There are a great many people in every Church who need to do the same thing in one way or another that Zacchaeus did.

A Son of Abraham.

To his fellow-citizens of Jericho, he was only a publican, a renegade Jew, a traitor to his country; but to Jesus he was a son of Abraham—there was within him infinite possibilities for finer manhood. Jesus Christ is the world's supreme Discoverer.

Seeking and Saving the Lost.

This was the mission of the Son of Man and the Son of God. It is the supreme business of the Church. The Church has many functions, but underlying them all there ought to be the definite purpose of bringing men to know Him whom to know is life eternal. The Church ought to be first and last and always evangelistic.

Topic: "Our Responsibility to Spread the Gospel."

Scripture Reading: 1 Cor. 9:6; Rom. 1:14-16.

The daily Bible readings bring out some good thoughts on the topic. Have members of the society look them up and comment on them.

Monday: "His Last Command" (Matt. 28:18-20).

Tuesday: "Give Power in the Work" (Acts 1:8).

Wednesday: "Stewards of God's Work to be Faithful" (1 Cor. 4:1-5).

Thursday: "Jonah Afraid of God" (Jonah 1:1-16).

Friday: "How Responsible are We for the Spread of the Gospel?" (Ezek. 33:1-5.)

Saturday: "He Died for Us." We are to live for God; we are new creatures in Christ; all things are of God; we are His servants to minister to men in His stead because Christ bore our sins (2 Cor. 5:14-21).

Sunday: "Why Spread the Gospel?" (1 Cor. 9:6; Rom. 1:14-16).

The great need is to have the Christian life saved. The missionary task is a way of making all of life, everywhere, more Christian.

We believe that in Christianity we find something that is worth sharing. Other nations and people have their religions, but none of their religions has a Christ like the Christ found in Christianity. He gave us what we think is the best way of life, and He followed that way Himself. Men of all time and ages have gained inspiration from Christ and His teachings. The message of Christ brings healing to sin-sick souls and peace and rest to weary lives. Though the people of India and China and Japan are brave enough and sincere enough to tell our missionaries that they are not interested in our civilization, they say that they want our Christ; Him and His way of life. We have the privilege of giving to them if we will earnestly seek to live as He lived.

We would not have to send missionaries to other countries if we, as a nation, really lived as Christians should live. The rest of the world would soon find out that we were really Christian. Nations would send missionaries to us in order that they might learn how to live the Christian life, just as they now send men to study our educational system. But, although it might not be necessary for us to send missionaries under those conditions, we would probably send more than we now send. We would want to share the good things that we enjoyed.

It is impossible to be a Christian and not share the message of Christ. In the early days of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (the Congregational Mission Board), the board was refused a charter by the Legislature of Massachusetts. Members of the Legislature objected to mission work because they said it was useless; the money was needed at home and should not be sent away to other countries; and, besides, we had no religion to spare. Some one made this reply to the last objection: "Religion is a commodity, of which the more we export, the more we have remaining."

The early Christian found that the love of Christ increased in their own lives when they shared this love with others. Christianity increased with dividing. It became more when some of those who embraced it were sent away. These early Christians learned some other things that

THE ENLARGEMENT OF PERSONALITY. By J. H. Denison. Chas. Scribner's Sons; $3.00; pp. 340.

What may be described as the anthropological approach to psychology is set forth in this book. The author contends that as a man thinketh, so is he—not strange thinking for those who are acquainted with the Christian Bible. What he means is that we change ourselves by the way we think of ourselves. The book offers proof of this conception and outlines a program by which it is achieved.

THE PREACHER AND HIS MISSIONARY MESSAGE. Stephen J. Corey. Cokesbury Press; $1.50; pp. 221.

Dr. Corey has been so long identified with the missionary enterprise, that any book which he publishes becomes an epoch in missionary thinking. He modestly suggests that it would have been better for a pastor to write this book, and says that he writes it specifically for pastors. However, the charm and straight-forwardness of Dr. Corey's approach make this book a valuable source of information and inspiration to the layman as well as to the minister. It is the type of book we need respecting the missionary problem in this time of crisis for the entire missionary enterprise.

THE DREAM POWER OF YOUTH. By Percy R. Hayward. Harper & Bros.; $2.00; pp. 177.

Dr. Hayward is thoroughly acquainted, as the director of young people's work of the International Council, with the achievements of youth today. He also knows what has been achieved through organization and leadership of youth in the past, and has very definite ideas as to the character of youth, the dependability of youth, and the success that will attend youth when properly related to the kingdom and its program. Dr. Hayward is thoroughly convinced that the dream power of youth holds the prophetic key of the Christian world's progress in its grasp. He is not speaking of day-dreams which pass away effervescently, but of that dream power of youth which dreams pictures of some future achievement and stirs the whole life to commitment to its accomplishment. Not only should youth read this book, but those who work with youth and those who love youth.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

we still find true today. The Christian knowledge of God gives power to those who have and share it. It is power. It drives away fear. This message of salvation, love and power is for every person. It is the best message the world will ever hear. It is ours to carry to those who know it not. What will we do about it?

It is our responsibility as Christians to try to spread the gospel of Christ. We have no reason for not doing it. Other generations will have the same difficulties that we face. If we do not carry the gospel to the men of this generation, they will never hear it. The world longs for our voices and for the message that we have. If we do not speak, some will never hear.

General Discussion.

In Korea, converts to Christianity must win some one else to Christ before they can join the Church. Would such a requirement be beneficial for us in our Churches? Do you think it a fair requirement? Why?

What do you think is the best plan to follow in trying to win others to Christ? Would your plan include "foreign and home missions"?

If you were a missionary evangelist, what passage of Scripture would you use in trying to win others to Christ?

Suppose you were not a Christian, what in Christianity would appeal to you? Are there things that would stand in the way of your accepting Christ? What are they? Are these things the fault of Christianity, or the fault of Christians?

THANKSGIVING WEEK.

MONDAY.

THE PURPOSE OF THANKSGIVING.

That we may not forget God amid all the vicisitudes of life.

That we may regard our daily mercies as from Him, and not as a matter of course.

That we may be awakened from all indifference to a lively consciousness of Him as the Giver of all good gifts.

That we may realize that we are what we are by His grace, and that we owe Him our lives in return.

Prayer.—Dear Lord God, we desire to give Thee unfeigned thanks for the return of the earth's bounty, and for Thy soul-stay and hope when there has been no bounty, for Thy love and grace which has always been beautiful to us. We desire to turn our thoughts to all Thy blessings which Thou hast given us in friends and favors, in love and mercies, in pleasures and happiness, and in religion and hope. As we approach next Thursday, our annual Thanksgiving Day, day by day, guide our thoughts along those lines which acknowledge Thee and impel our gratitude. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HISTORY OF THANKSGIVING.

"Beside the Sabbath of the Lord, when ye have gathered the fruit of the land . . . ye shall keep a feast and rejoice before the Lord."—Lev. 23:39.

The history of Thanksgiving is as old as God's dealings with man. It is traced through the ages from the Canaanites to the judges, when they went out and gathered of their vineyards and made merry. This thanksgiving was first called "The Harvest Festival," but later called "The Feast of the Tabernacles," which was established in memory of the years of the wilderness.

The Greeks held a feast of this kind called Demeter, which is the name of the godess of the harvest and who was the foundress of agriculture. This was held in the month of November and was the occasion of great mirth and much rejoicing.

The Romans held a like feast under the name of Ceres. It was held in the month of October and was called Cerelia. This was an occasion of great ceremony, when they held great processions in the fields and had music and engaged in lots of sports.

The English hold what is called a "Harvest Home Festival." This is traced back to the ninth century. The program consists of special services in the Churches, followed by sports and festivities of all sorts. The Churches are usually decorated with harvest products and flowers.

America's Thanksgiving dates back to 1621, when the first settlers held their memorable Thanksgiving after that memorable year of plenty which saved the nation. But as a permanent celebration, it dates back only to 1863, when, under President Lincoln, it was made a national holiday.

It is essentially a Church celebration founded upon the true and beautiful idea that God governs, provides for, and is the Author and Inspirer of humanity.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, we thank Thee for the faith, patience and godliness of Thy people throughout the ages gone by; for the memorial of Thanksgiving Day in the hearts of the people, and that we still turn to Thee with praise. Make this week one of fullest and sincerest thanksgiving and praise, not only by us, but by everybody. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"In Him we live and move and have our being."—Acts 17:28.

If the world were a mechanical thing, wound up like a clock to run forever, we would thank mechanics, chemicals, laws of nature, etc., for what it does for us. But if it is the result of God and His beneficent foresight and endeavor, and if the qualities inherent in it are God Himself acting perpetually and persistently for the welfare of man, then we owe our thanks to Him.

In order that we may comprehend what should be the extent of our Thanksgiving this year, let us look to the yield of the harvest which has come to us from the resources of the soil and industry; let us look for the provisions He has made for us where these things have not been in bounty; let us look for the increase in faith which is the impelling power of man; let us look for those hundreds of mercies which have bridged the hard places; let us look for that divine guidance which has enabled our nation to grow in fraternal relations with other people, and let us prepare our own hearts to say, "In Thee we live and move and have our being," and praise Him forevermore.

Prayer.—Dear Father, prepare our hearts to enter into tomorrow's light with full homage to Thee. Help us to count our blessings and be overflowing not only with the knowledge of them, but with gratitude for them. Where there have been dry places and hardships, make us thankful that they have not been too great to be borne. Even in them pity and assistance have been rendered the needy, there have been healings of broken hearts, joys have sprung out of sorrow, and the homeless and unfortunate have been cared for. O Lord, help us to do a lot of thinking about these things and to prepare ourselves to worship Thee aright tomorrow. Amen.

THURSDAY—THANKSGIVING DAY.

Lessons for worship: Psa. 65:9-13, 51:67, 103:1-5; Rom. 8:31-39; Rev. 3:14-32.

Be grateful for the eyes that see life's beauty,
Be grateful for the ears that hear life's mirth.
Be grateful for the willing feet and fingers
To help, so much, your progress through the earth.
Be grateful for the speech that you can utter,
Be grateful for the health that you may own;
Be grateful for the strength that helps you onward,
Be grateful for firm flesh and sturdy bone.

Be grateful for those things you take for granted;
They are your greatest blessings from God's hand—
The fine ability to look and listen,
To lively move about, to touch and stand.
Be grateful with the heart and soul and spirit,
And register your gratitude in prayer;
The simple things of every day are able To make the world, for you, both fine and fair.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

Thanksgiving Prayer.—Almighty God, the Sovereign commander of the world, we desire to offer to Thee today the homage and fealty which is Thy due. Thou, by whose hand the universe is sustained, by whose knowledge the clouds drop down their rain, by whose power the earth giveth its increase, and by whose love man is sustained, we praise Thee for Thy bounty in all these things this year. We magnify Thy glorious name for all Thy mercies vouchsafed unto us in health, in truth, in righteousness, in liberty and love; and for the powers that struggle to save our country from lawlessness and violence, discord and confusion, pride and ignorance, and from every evil way. We thank Thee for that power that seeks to preserve peace and unity among the nations and for Jesus Christ who directs the motives of hearts always to victory. We pray that this heritage of the past may be transmitted unimpaired to the generations of the future and that all people may come to know that thou art the loving sovereign Commander, and Saviour, and Deliverer of all.

Grant Thy favor, dear Lord, to the President of the United States and to those who are associated with him in power. Inspire them with wisdom and judgment. Grant Thy favor to all the people of the United States, that peace, harmony and brotherly love may prevail, that families and homes may live right and in harmony, that there may be healing for every breach, and perfection for every adjustment.

Accept, dear Lord, today our offering of thanksgiving and praise, in the name of Him who hath redeemed us, Jesus our Lord, and to Thee shall be the honor and the glory, world without end. Amen.

"We thank Thee, Lord, each day we live
That Thou hast spread such homely fare;
Courage and patience Thou dost give,
Bread of the Spirit for our care.

"We thank Thee for Thy shelves low spread,
That even small new souls like mine
May reach on tip-toe and be fed,
And every hungry heart may dine." Amen.

FRIDAY.

THANKSGIVING RECESSIONAL.

"I will bless the Lord at all times. His praise shall continually be in my mouth."—Psa. 34:1.

Our thanksgiving is a tribute we lay on the altar of God as a sweet smell to Him. The sanctuary of worship is a symbol of thoughts and lives harmonized with the great "I Am," and it points forward to the time when all that sullies shall be forever cleansed from our souls. It is a foretaste of the glory to come when the kingdoms of this world shall be the kingdoms of God, and man shall learn the divinity of life, the forgiveness of sin, and shall rest in Him. Yes, it is a type of that unending day when thanksgiving shall be no longer confined to a few, or to a special class, race or nation, but when the unity and solidarity of the people shall be realized and the voices of the universe shall resound with the melodies of heavenly choirs ascending as a perpetual incense unto the throne of the king and crown Him Lord of all.

Prayer.—Our dear Heavenly Father, we praise Thee to echo and re-echo the sweetness of Thy love and blessings from this day on, so that every day may be a day of thanksgiving to us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WHO IS SAVED?

"They that walketh uprightly and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart."

"If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." —John 1:7.

These Scriptures draw a beautiful picture of the life of a Christian. The impressive question

THE UNITED HEART.

By Rev. C. J. Harrell.

"Unite my heart to fear Thy name.—Psa. 86:11.

There is not a nobler prayer in the Psalter than this. There is nothing like it in the Bible. "Unite my heart to fear Thy name." In this petition the psalmist borrows from no one. So beautiful is it, so original, that it should be set down as one of the great prayers of the Scriptures.

The man who wrote it knew the tragedy of a divided heart—a heart torn by rival affections. What civil concord is to a nation; what affectionate agreement is to domestic happiness; what concentration is to the intellect—just that heart unity in the love of God is to one's religious life. There can be no conquering faith unless all the energies of the soul are united and merged in God. Anything less than that is a pitiful subterfuge and the source of all manner of moral failures.

And yet the divided heart is the most common of all faults among Christian people. We serve God with a part of our being; we consecrate a portion of ourselves to Him, but how many really make a serious and persistent attempt to bring every thought and deed into captivity to the mind of Christ? Until the power of God unite our faculties in one controlling purpose, our hearts are like a litter of beasts as one desire contends against another for mastery. Who does not hear a Babel of voices there?

"Within my earthly temple there's a crowd:
There's one of us that's humble, one that's proud;
There's one that's broken-hearted for his sins,
And one who, unrepentant, sits and grins;
There's one who loves his neighbor as himself,
And one who cares for naught but fame and pelf.
From such corroding care I would be free
If once I could determine which is me."

The purpose of religion and the great business of life is to unite every faculty of the soul in God. There is no way of the difficulties of the heart except by making God supreme and rallying every power around Him. Let pleasure and business, and culture, and philanthropy, and religion all converge in Him. If one centers his life about a little thing, he is a crank; if he dissipates his energies in all things, he loses his soul. God alone is able to unite them all to serve eternal ends. All interests that do not converge in Him tear the heart asunder. No prayer more truly sounds the deeps of the soul than this: "Unite every power that I have in Thee." United in Him! Submerged in Him! We in Him and He in us! This is saving faith.

AFTER CONFERENCE.

The district Conferences of the Southern Christian Convention are over, and those who attended are busy at their regular tasks again, yet with a different view of life and its responsibilities. To one of the delegates, returning to her home after two days of Conference, the words spoken by Job kept repeating themselves over and over, and all through the following busy days of picking up the work that had been laid aside during the wonderful Conference day, "He knoweth the way that I take."

Yes, He knows, and when we need the spiritual uplift He permits us to enjoy the fellowship, the blessed inspiration of some conference or other such meeting together with His people.

So it was with this delegate at the Conference drinking in the blessed devotional services and being inspired and instructed by the addresses and reports. The heart-thrilling message of our Mission Secretary which gripped our souls and will not let go; the Communion service which brought us so near to God, making us realize more fully that "the fellowship of kindred souls is like to that above," and the joy unspeakable and full of glory filled our souls.

As we wended our way homeward, we could appreciate somewhat Peter's impulsive plea on the Mount of Transfiguration; but we, like those of old, must go down from the mountain to minister to those in the valley below. Our way homeward led along lonely and dark, narrow and broad roadways, some smooth, some rough, but ever the headlight showed us the way, making us to think of the fiery pillar that led the children of Israel.

Our way in this world, made dark by sin, is still led by the Light divine which ever guides us to the eternal home. And though the road, many times, is rough and tiresome, yet God has placed us in our little corners to shine for Him, even though after our mountain-top experience the cares of this vale of tears press upon us, yet may we ever keep the reflection of the Shekinah glory in our hearts, that it may show through our lives unto others who need just the encouragement that we can give.

The houses along the roadside made us think of people along the journey of life. Some of the houses sent forth rays of light which cheered us on our way, for they seemed so friendly; others could not be distinguished in the darkness, for the shades were drawn so that the light could not shine out. Jesus, the Christ, said: "Let your light so shine before men." Are we letting the light of His glorious gospel of salvation shine forth to those who are fellow-travelers with us, cheering and encouraging their hearts? God forbid that any should cover the light so freely and so gladly given for us to hold.

"Say, is your lamp burning, my brother?
I pray you look quickly and see;
For, if it were burning, then surely
Some ray would fall brightly on me." W.

FAMILY ALTAR.

awakens the yearnings of the soul after the fellowship of God. It sets forth that a Christian is the same within and without. It measures a man according to his relations with God. It impels a man to deal uprightly.

In the eyes of a Christian, vileness, it matters not where it is found, is condemned, and he honors the man who fears the Lord, be he ever so lowly. He does not lay up treasures in earth, but he is thinking of the things that heaven is made of and places his treasures there.

Prayer.—Give us this grace, O God, for Jesus Christ's sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

How Shall I Spend Today?

"Then thy light shall break forth as the morning . . . and thy righteousness shall go before thee, the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward." —Isa. 58:5-8.

There are a lot of folks who show an appreciative sense of God and are members of the Church but who do not sanctify the Sabbath to holy ends. They worship their stomachs, and pleasures, and business, and politics. On the other hand, there are others who so worship God with prayer and song and with the reading and the hearing of His word; who associate with other believers, who abstain from pleasures of the every-day life; who live quietly, meditatively and decently, and who spend the most of the day in thoughts that regulate their conduct by the true Christian ideals—that the Sabbath is their most delightful day.

True Christianity is in the heart's fellowship with God, and to promote this acquaints us with God and causes us to love one another in the Lord. There is more to Sabbath-keeping than the mere observing it as a rest day and a holiday, and keeping from work and sinning. We must look after the mainspring of our lives—the fellowship of the soul with God.

Go, then, all ye, for all ye are brethren, and God will give thee strength. At the entrance of the Sabbath, behold we stand at the fountain, draw for thyself and for all others possible, and scatter the blessings everywhere.

Prayer.—O God, kindle Thy love in us by the power of the Holy Spirit. Let Thy sacred flame burn in us, and make us ripe in fruits of love. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Every Church and Sunday School in the Southern Christian Convention is appealed to to make a liberal Thanksgiving offering this year. We are calling earnestly and from our heart because we are in need. The Churches and friends have always stood by us. You have made our work lighter because of your love, your sympathy, and your loyal support. When times were good, you stood by us and rejoiced with us in the success the Orphanage had. But this year has been hard financially. The income has been smaller than usual. We could not turn the children out because our money was low. We did not have the heart to do that. We had too much faith in you to do that. You have been loyal to us fourteen years, through all our problems. I cannot believe that you will withdraw your support at this time of need when business depression has hit us so hard. This is a time that it will be necessary for us to sacrifice. It may be necessary for us to do without something we really need or would like to have. Will we do it? Do we really know how to sacrifice? When did we do without anything that we had need of in order to help some one in need?

At this Thanksgiving season, when we consider how good and kind the Lord has been to each of us, should we not in return really want to extend a hand of assistance to those who are really in need? The Christian Orphanage has more than one hundred children in its care, and they are here because it was necessary for them to come to this institution. It takes money to buy food and clothes for that many children. The Orphanage depends on the special Thanksgiving offerings from Churches and friends to help finance it through the winter months.

At this Thanksgiving season, when you are enjoying the good things of life and the offering is taken in your Church, won't you make your offering liberal? Surely you will be generous. The need is so urgent. If you really have to sacrifice to make your offering liberal, don't you believe it will make you the happier and this Thanksgiving season more enjoyable to you? Remember, the little children in the Orphanage are depending on you for the support they need. We have passed through the years of the World War, but we hardly think we have ever had to meet a situation as it exists today. It is a real challenge to the Church folks. Will we meet the challenge?

Rev. Florence L. Squires has returned from her summer residence in Ohio, and is located in Columbia, S. C. It was here she did notable service in missionary instruction and religious education last year. In connection with the Congregational Church there, she was very much in demand. She served several Baptist and Presbyterian Churches in leading the women in branches noted above. She is also a good preacher and does evangelistic work effectively at nominal cost. She can be reached at Box 51, Columbia, S. C.

OBITUARIES.

LEE.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father, in His great wisdom, to call from labor to reward our greatly loved friend and member, Mrs. M. J. Lee, who has been a faithful worker in this society since its organization; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the Divine will, knowing that He doeth all things well and that our loss is her gain.

2. That we try to follow her example by always giving our best service to this work which she loved.

3. That we offer our heartfelt sympathy and prayers to her loved ones and bid them look to Him from whom cometh our help.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and one be spread on the minutes of our society.

EDWARDS.

Our community was made sad on Friday, October 3, 1930, when the spirit of Mrs. Frank Edwards took its flight to the home beyond. While in declining health for more than a year, she was confined to her bed for only four days. Mrs. Edwards was the wife of Rev. Frank Edwards, of the Baptist Church, and was a member of New Bethel Baptist Church. She was a tender and devoted mother and greatly loved by all that knew her. In her going, the Church, home, and friends sustain a great loss.

The funeral service was conducted from her Church on Sunday, October 5th, at 3 P. M., by her pastor, Rev. J. F. Mitchener, assisted by Rev. E. R. Nelson and Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, and her own dear husband. Standing beside the casket and the last to look upon her, the bereaved husband faced the audience and spoke as Christ's ambassador. After spending thirty-eight years as her bosom friend and companion, he urged every one to accept Christ as their Saviour. It was a sad but glorious occasion. The funeral procession of one mile long reached the Church to find every seat taken except those reserved. The floral offerings were unusually beautiful.

She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted husband, two sons, four daughters, two sisters, four half-sisters, four half-brothers, several grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends. She has left to us the unfinished task of carrying on His work. May we labor with the zeal that characterized her noble life.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON.

BABB.

Mrs. Barcia E. Babb, widow of the late Robert E. Babb, died at her home, near Holland, Va., October 26, 1930, in the eighty-fifth year of her age. The funeral services were conducted at Holland Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. E. Brittle, and the body interred in the Holland Cemetery.

Mrs. Babb leaves four children: Mrs. J. W. Russel, Gates, N. C.; Miss Gertrude E. Babb and Harry R. Babb, R. F. D. Holland, and Mrs. B. J. Fowler, Route 3, Franklin, and four grandchildren. The deceased had been a member of Cypress Chapel Church since childhood, and passed away in that humble faith and trust which had been hers through life. May our kind Heavenly Father comfort and keep her loved ones.

N. G. NEWMAN.

TUCK.

Mrs. Flora Lee Tuck, daughter of Capt. Henry and Margarette Tuck, was born September 2, 1864, and died Saturday, September 27, 1930; age 66 years and 25 days. In 1884 she married Riley Tuck, who died several years ago. Seven sons and one daughter survive: Balum, Perm, Henry, Enzie, Hobson, Ned, Ted, and Mrs. Mary Young, all of Virgilina; there are nine grandchildren.

Sister Tuck had been a member of Union Church for fifty years and was an excellent Christian. She was a devoted mother and kind neighbor. Her loved ones are sad at her departure, but are comforted in the hope of her having entered the rest of the faithful. The writer conducted the burial service at the grave in Union Cemetery on Sunday afternoon, September 28th.

ELON COLLEGE

of the
CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

WHITE.

We, the members of the Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Rosemont Christian Church, feel that we have suffered a great loss in the passing from this life, on October 13, 1930, of Mrs. Ira L. White, one of our faithful and much-loved members. Our hearts have been saddened for several months because of her intense suffering. However, we feel that God doeth all things well, and in her going, those of us who remain will be brought closer to Him. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in submission to God's will.

2. That the memory of her life will be constant inspiration and help to us.

3. That our deepest sympathy to her loved ones is hereby extended.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy recorded on the minutes of our society.

RAY—COPELAND.

On September 25th, Eddie Clarence Ray and Miss Beulah Copeland, along with a few relatives and friends, drove to our residence, in Hemp, where they were united in marriage. Immediately after the ceremony they started to their home in Kentucky, where Mr. Ray has a position with a telephone company.

Mrs. Ray is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Copeland, of Eagle Springs, N. C., R. F. D. 1. She taught school in her native county for several years.

Here is wishing them all the joy and longevity of life and happiness that the future may hold for them.

SCHOOL IN HONOLULU TO BE REBUILT.—

Iolani School, one of the oldest educational institutions for boys in Honolulu, will be rebuilt at a cost of from $500,000 to $700,000. It is an Episcopal school, and funds will be sought in the United States among the Episcopal Churches.

COMMUNITY CHESTS.—

Detroit, the great industry city, hard hit by the depression, launched, a few days ago, its community chest drive. The Fisher Brothers, builders of Fisher bodies for automobiles, are major contributors to that drive. Their normal gifts annually amount to $100,000. This year, on account, as they expressed it, of the inability of many people to give at all, their gift has been increased to $125,000.

DIVORCE EVIL.—

The State of New York, contrary to its reputation, in 1929, had the lowest divorce rate of all the States in the country, with one divorce to 23.6 marriages. Nevada heads the list, with one divorce to every 2.3 marriages. The former is doubtless due to the fact that the Roman Catholic Church does not so easily grant divorces, and the latter because divorces are so easily obtained in Nevada that many go there from other States to secure divorces.

INDIA.—

Dr. E. Stanley Jones is receiving a wide hearing in a series of meetings in India. He has spoken in more than a dozen colleges and schools of India, besides Church meetings. At Madras, a twenty-day series was arranged for, and he had a hearing from 700 to 1,000 the first week, chiefly non-Christians. Two to four hundred persons remained each evening for consultation and questions. Personal interviews and personal evangelism is the ideal way to deal with people on religious questions.

CRISIS IN PALESTINE.—

The Jews of New England share the general disappointment and indignation of their race at the recent decision of the English mandatory government. Governor Frank G. Allen, of Massachusetts, on October 23rd, in a statement to the press, declared that the closing of the door of Palestine to the Jewish people is closing the gates of hope to them. They do not go to Palestine; they return. They love America too much to return to Palestine to remain there. America gives them greater opportunity.

PEACE PROGRAM.—

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, at the instigation of Fred B. Smith, moderator of the Congregational Churches of the United States, and others, has undertaken a nation-wide program of lectures on international peace and the movement for the abolishment of war. He has already addressed meetings in Oklahoma and will be in the far west until mid-December. The peace movement will result in great good in the prevention of war if Churches and preachers will advocate peace in times of peace and practice their preaching in times of war. The best antedote against war is the expenditure of the cost of war for peace conditions.

INTER-RACIAL MEETING.—

A hundred leaders of the principal white Church groups of Virginia met October 29th in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Richmond, where Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee attended in Civil War days, and discussed racial relations and plans for their improvement. Leading colored speakers discussed schools, health and housing, courts, etc. White speakers considered what Church people could do to better conditions. Dr. Ben R. Lacy, president of Union Seminary, of Richmond, presided over the meeting, and Dr. R. R. Moton, of Tuskegee, made an address. Racial rancor is one of the barriers to the universal good will and the coming of the kingdom of God.

CRIME RATE.—

During the first nine months of this year, in the United States, marked increase of crime in general and particular, an increase in murders. In a survey just completed by the Department of Justice, it is revealed that the average of murders has risen from three a day at the beginning of this year to five a day in September. In that period, Chicago led all other cities, with a total of 282 murders, an average of about one a day. Philadelphia was second, with 109; Detroit, third, with 104. Burglaries in this period averaged about 150 a day, with more than fifty hold-ups every twenty-four hours. The Christian forces of the world have much to do yet.

BETTER CONDITIONS.—

According to Professor Irvin Fisher, of Yale, drinking under prohibition has decreased between 80 and 90 per cent. Much wet fervor is used to prove that the Constitution of the United States is no place for prohibition law, and yet, according to Judge Andrew A. Bruce, president of the American Institute of Crimnology, the Constitution already lays upon the States forty-four separate and distinct prohibitions of one kind or another. According to some of the most brilliant writers in Europe and America, prohibition alone is responsible for the leading industrial position of the United States in the world. They predict that in the next twenty years the present lawbreaking will have ceased.

PORTO RICAN HEALTH.—

Of the population of Porto Rico, which is a million and a half, the tuberculosis death rate last year was over four times that of continental United States, and that from malaria more than twice as many. In this exceptionally healthful land, besides these 35,000 suffering from tuberculosis and 200,000 from malaria, there are 600,000 infected with hookworm, resulting from the wretched economic conditions there. Now, far-reaching plans are under way to rehabilitate the country, to get the people back to the farms, where they can raise fruits and vegetables with governmental assistance in modern, scientific ways. With these projects must go health work and child feeding. Some 40,000 undernourished children are now being fed through the country's efficient school system, with the Porto Ricans themselves co-operating according to their ability.

"CO-EDUCATION."—

Dr. L. P. Jacks, editor of the Hibbert Journal, maintains that the body and mind must be trained together and that the present method of separating athletics and studies as is done in American schools is not the ideal method of education. He said that we do our thinking with more than the brain. Modern competitive athletics teach a man to run at maximum speed; co-ordinated physical and mental training would enable him to walk with a minimum fatigue. The technique of such education has been best worked out in Sweden, "the most cultured nation in the world." In an English factory, where the system has been introduced among the employees, the day's toil is borne with less fatigue and a new sense of physical vigor gives zest for evening and cultural courses. Such education would completely change the theory of exercising the strong for the amusement of the weak.

SOUL CLINICS.—

At Pittsburgh, soul clinics are held daily in the Diamond Bank Building. People keep coming in, asking what is the matter with them. Modern psychology is combined with deep religious convictions to set these people straight. The case records of these interviews would make a valuable book. The interesting thing is that people do come, and that they are positively helped. Hundreds of volunteer workers are in the ranks, and so many requests for meetings come in that they have difficulty in meeting the needs. Here is a movement which offers profitable study and imitation by other cities. Doubtless this quiet, spiritual, psychological method of Christian service holds rich deposits for other cities all over the world. Such personal evangelism by trained Christian workers offers hope to soul-sufferers resulting from sin, emotional complexes, moral delinquencies and spiritual repressions.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Any Church will be unhappy if it lives beyond its means; and any Church will be happy if it lives to the full measure of its means.

God is looking for men on whom He can put the weight of all His love and power and faithful promises. When God finds such souls, there is nothing He will not do for them.

Mrs. W. A. Warner and Mrs. Edward S. Ryan, of Hopewell, Va., were in Richmond on Tuesday, visiting with Mrs. D. D. Nash, who is somewhat improved at this writing. While in the city they visited THE SUN office.

Rev. D. M. Spence changes his address from Ocean View, Va., to Lillington, N. C. Brother Spence is one of our well-prepared, consecrated and able young ministers. He is now open for work in Churches that may wish his service.

Rev. J. D. Dollar, Lanett, Ala., of the Georgia and Alabama Conference, writes: "Our work starts off in a splendid way here for the new Conference year. We have the best organization, and are getting the best co-operation that we have ever had. Our Sunday School and Church attendance has increased wonderfully, and we are expecting a good year at Lanett."

The Eastern North Carolina Conference, in annual session last week, ordained to the ministry Rev. J. H. Lee, R. F. D., 3, Raleigh, N. C.; licensed Revs. Sam B. Wilson and Wray Dickens, and authorized the licensure of Numa Franks, son of Rev. J. E. Franks. Rev. D. M. Spence has recently moved within the bounds of this Conference, and these brethren are ready for work in that Conference or in others needing their service. Another licentiate of the Conference is Rev. H. C. Hilliard, now in Elon College, and who is also ready to take work.

The universal week of prayer, as appointed by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, is Sunday, January 4th, to Saturday, January 10, 1931, inclusive. The one subject running through all the prayer topics of the week is "World Evangelization." The program, as printed, seems a most interesting one, and the Churches and missionary societies will certainly profit by observing the week of prayer and using the program, copies of which may be secured at $1.50 per hundred from the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York City.

Miss Ethel Freddle writes: "Sunday, November 16, 1930, was observed as 'Memorial Day' at Mt. Bethel Christian Church, Rockingham County, N. C. Rev. F. C. Lester, of Waverly, Va., but a son of Mt. Bethel, was present and delivered two sermons. In the morning he used as his text, John 14:1, 'Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, bleieve also in me.' In the afternoon he used, John 3:1, 'Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God?' Both subjects were handled very well indeed. The Church and cemetery were made beautiful by autumn flowers. Special music was furnished by friends from the Reidsville Christian Church. A fine Christian fellowship prevailed through the entire service, and the day was enjoyed by all."

Walking in the light means walking with Christ, for He is our Light. Perhaps no truer description of a sincere Christian life would be given than this. The association is a sacred one, and yet we need not be afraid. The glory of His face will be veiled because we could not bear its brilliance, even as the disciples on the Mount of Transfiguration could not behold the glory of their Lord. But we will be conscious of His presence and hear His voice and hold His hand and try to walk in His footsteps. Loneliness will be gone. Fear will be conquered by love. Sorrow will be as the shining of the bow in the cloud. We will not ask to see the distant scene. And there will come a peace which can only be found when we walk with Him.—Floyd W. Tompkins.

On Sunday, November 23rd, the Suffolk Christian Church observed its seventieth anniversary. The following program was greatly enjoyed by those present at the morning service: Organ prelude (processional), Schuber; doxology; invocation, Rev. W. W. Staley; hymn 442; responsive reading No. 1, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle; hymn 447; prayer, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle; anthem, "Fear Not Ye, O Israel," Dudley Buck; Scripture, Psa. 122, Rev. W. W. Staley; quartet, "In the Light of His Face," Mrs. Telza Miller, Mrs. Randolph Chapman, Mr. Robert Speight, Mr. W. T. Matthews; announcements and offering; solo, "How Lovely are Thy Dwellings," Mrs. Vernon Holland; history of the Church, Dr. W. W. Staley; anthem, "I Waited for the Lord, Mendelssohn; hymn 448; benediction; postlude, March in E.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference, the last of our Southern Convention Conferences of the year, was held last week at Catawba Springs, Wake County, N. C. Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, is president of the Conference; Prof. L. L. Vaughan, Raleigh, secretary, and Bro. W. J. Ballentine, Fuquay Springs, treasurer. These officers served the Conference efficiently and were re-elected for the coming year. The Conference was royally entertained by the people of the Church and community, and the days were delightfully spent as pastors and delegates and visitors took counsel together in the house of the Lord. The spirit of the Conference was delightful, and the fellowship sweet. All were pleased to see that faithful soldier of the cross, Rev. G. R. Underwood, Pittsboro, N. C., sufficiently restored to health as to be able to attend and take part in the deliberations of the Conference.

It is learned with genuine pleasure that a generous friend of the American Board has supplied Dr. M. J. W. White, of the Cagayan Hospital, Philippine Islands, where Bro. White is a medical missionary, with an X-ray machine. Bro. White has been handicapped in his great work for the relief of human suffering because he had no X-ray, and his heart has been made glad. He and Mrs. White have just finished their first year in the Philippines, and they write that they have had a wonderful year of work and success, with perfect health, and that the Lord has surely and abundantly blessed them. Dr. White, the son of Deacon M. J. W. White, of Norfolk, Va., prepared himself well before going out as a medical missionary, and is well equipped and trained for the great service to which he has dedicated his life.

In his report and address to the Eastern North Carolina Conference last week, Rev. T. Fred Wright, chairman, said there were three methods of evangelization in use at the present time—educational evangelization (through the Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, etc.); mass evangelization (through the annual revival conducted by the pastor or minister assisting him); and personal visitation evangelization. Of the three, Bro. Wright emphasized from his point of view and experience the last-named as seeming to be the most effectual for our day. This, he declared, has a two-fold blessing and benefit. First, to the person who goes out on a visit to win a soul to Christ, and, secondly, to the one who is thus won by such a visit in the quiet of the home or the place where the visit is made. Mass evangelization cannot be abandoned, the speaker urged, but should be used as a power-house or starting-point, and that individual Christians must go out after the unsaved if they are to be reached effectually in our day.

Among the outstanding addresses at the Eastern Conference, Catawba Springs, last week was that by Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, Raleigh, N. C., under the discussion of the report on education. The report had recommended the Elon "Million-Dollar Campaign," and, in the absence of President Harper, Dr. Kirbye addressed the Conference. He showed a familiarity with the college life of America and the history of education, particularly of Church-owned colleges, that was exceedingly refreshing and inspiring. We little reckon with the marvelous contribution to our civilization and to Christianity that the Church-founded and Church-owned institutions have made. Dr. Kirbye declared that at least one-half of the students now in the colleges, universities and secondary schools for higher education in America were in those institutions owned and supported by the Churches, and that these institutions had in the past made, and were at the present making, a contribution to Christianity and the cause of the kingdom that could not be estimated in dollars aand material substance.

One of our firm believers in tithing and stewardship is the consecrated and resourceful pastor of our Reidsville Christian Church, Rev. J. H. Dollar. Under date of November 20th, a letter entirely personal from Bro. Dollar, and certainly never intended for print, carries this interesting paragraph: "I have been saying a great deal at times since I have been here about tithing. I hold it to be the only remedy to our financial troubles. I have felt that the time was ripe to make a move. Last Sunday I announced that all those who are tithing, together with those who are willing to study it and who would be willing to follow the leadership of the Spirit, to be our guest for a time tonight, the purpose of the meeting being to study tithing with a view of our practicing it. I am glad that eighteen responded and came. After prayer, the meeting was opened for inquiries and information as to the methods by which one might determine the tithe, etc. We studied it and answered several questions. The interest was good. After the discussion, I asked if it was deemed wise to organize a 'Tithers' Study Club' to meet monthly and have and hear programs and discussions on the subject. It was decided to organize such a club, which shall meet each fourth Monday evening at the Church. The pastor was asked to become director of study, with Bro. Monroe Rascoe as assistant, and with Mrs. Herman Kernodle as secretary. Pamphlets were given out at the close of the meeting, and those who received them are to report on their contents at the next meeting of the club, which will be next Monday night. We plan to invite those who wish to study with us, and we feel that great good is to come from the work. The organization will be perfected at the next meeting."

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL will meet in Seattle, Wash., June 25th to July 2nd. This is a change of date, the original plan having been to begin on June 30th. The change is made to avoid a conflict with the national meeting of the Elks.

MRS. A. P. VAUGHN, wife of the pastor of the Congregational Church of Avon Park, Florida, has recently undergone a serious operation at the hospital in Tampa. The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. Vaughn will be glad to know that she is making satisfactory recovery.

WINTER PARK CHURCH recently suffered a great loss in the death of Deacon C. H. Ward. Deacon Ward was eighty-three years of age and one of the pioneer residents of the city, having lived there forty-five years. He has been an honored and beloved member of the Church almost since its beginning.

MR. & MRS. ROBT. G. WILLIAMS have returned to their winter home at Lake Worth, Fla. Mrs. Williams was formerly associated with the State work as director of young people's work, and was well known as Miss Mary Ann Jefferys. Mrs. Williams is now president of the Florida Federation of Congregational Women.

REV. O. H. DENNEY, who has been acting as summer supply minister of First Congregational Church, Miami, has moved to Coral Gables, where he will assist the pastor of the Coral Gables Church, Rev. Don G. Henshaw, as director of parish activities. This will enable Mr. Henshaw to assist President Ashe, of Miami University, in some special activities.

A FORUM for the discussion of current events will be conducted on Sunday evenings at the First Congregational Church, Miami, by Dr. Robert MacDonald, pastor of the Church. This forum was inaugurated on a recent Sunday evening, with a marked increase in attendance and interest. The questions considered were live and pressing current world problems.

ORANGE CITY, FLA.: A special supper and meeting in the interest of missions was held in this Church under the leadership of the superintendent, Rev. E. C. Gillette. The other speakers were Dr. Edgar S. Rothrock, of Holly Hill, formerly superintendent of Ohio, and Miss Dorothy Allen, of Rollins College, a student summer service worker in Georgia. The pastor of this Church is Rev. Thomas H. Derrick. The Church is making plans for the entertainment of the State Conference in April.

LAKE HELEN, FLA.: The ladies of this Church recently held a thankoffering meeting, which was largely attended and an offering of $75.00 was received for the apportionment. In addition, there were special gifts amounting to $200.00, part of which was for the apportionment and part for other benevolences and special needs of the Church. Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, superintendent for Florida, was the guest-speaker. The pastor of the Church is Dr. Scott F. Hershey. Dr. Hershey has been giving an interesting series of sermons based on the book, "Who Moves the Stone?"

CHARLES FULTON, son of Dr. Lillian B. Fulton, pastor of the Congregational Church at Lake Worth, delivered a lecture on "Prohibition as a Young Man Sees It" at the Sunday-night forum at the West Palm Beach Church. The Church was filled and words of high commendation for the address were spoken and also written. Mr. Fulton has been a student at Washington and Lee University, and is teaching for a year in the junior high school of West Palm Beach, expecting to return next year to pursue his college course. He is available in other Churches in the region for this address.

NORTH AMERICAN H. M. CONGRESS will be held in Washington, D. C., December 1-5. Among the Congregationalists attending from the Southeast will be Dr. Fred P. Ensminger, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Miss Marguerite Davison and Miss Priscilla Chase. Among the important subjects to be discussed will be "Undenominational Relation and Co-operation," "The Overhead in Home Missions," and "The Financial Policy, Buildings and Equipment and General Policies." The matter of reduction of competitive Churches will undoubtedly be the matter of greatest consideration.

DR. PIERCE GOES TO NASHVILLE.

Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., has accepted a call to the Collegeside Church, Nashville, Tenn., with an appointment on the Atlantic Seminary Foundation to the chair of preaching in the Vanderbilt School of Religion. Dr. Pierce has been for ten years pastor of this great Church, and during the presidency of Calvin Coolidge he was known as the "President's pastor." All those interested in Congregational development of the Southeast will be gratified to learn of his acceptance of the Nashville call.

Educators recognize the great and growing influence of the group of colleges and universities at Nashville, Tenn., as the most potent educational influence in the South. Within a stone's throw of each other are Vanderbilt University, Peabody College, Scarritt College, Y. M. C. A. Graduate College, Ward-Belmont College, enrolling upwards of five thousand students; while across the city lies Fisk University, whose president, Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, is a trustee of Collegeside Church to which Dr. Pierce has been called.

Collegeside Church is a new enterprise, located in the heart of this group of colleges. Dr. William E. Barton, one of the most distinguished preachers and writers in America, became its minister two years ago. The Church has a splendid parish house fronting the campus, and holds its services of worship in the auditorium of Peabody College. Because of protracted critical illness, Dr. Barton has been compelled to relinquish his work, and Dr. Pierce is called as his successor.

In addition to the pastorate, Dr. Pierce is called on the Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation to the chair of preaching in Vanderbilt University School of Religion.

To this chair, Dr. Pierce will bring a large experience as a preacher and as a Church administrator. His fine friendliness in broad human sympathies will be a great factor in his relationship with the students preparing for the ministry.

Dr. Pierce's resignation as pastor of the Washington Church was accepted with appreciation of his devoted service to the Church, and he will be able to assume his new duties in Nashville December 1st.

HOW CHURCHES ARE ADVANCING.

Eight important questions about the Churches in the United States are asked and answered in a book recently published, which seems to have reliable facts and figures. The source is the Federal Census of Religious Bodies compiled by our government's Census Bureau in 1926. The book that explains it is "The U. S. Looks at Its Churches," by C. Luther Fry; Institute of Social and Religious Research; $2.50.

The eight questions and partial answers follow:

1. What proportion of Americans belong to the Church? Out of every 100 persons over thirteen years of age in the United States, fifty-five are Church members. Only 52 per 100 are in rural Churches, and 58 per 100 in cities are in Churches. Five women are Church members to every four men.

2. To what denominations do people belong? There are 212 denominations listed in the census, not counting Buddhist temples, Mohammedan mosques and other Oriental religions. More than half of the denominations have less than 7,000 adult members. The Roman Catholics lead, with 13,300,000—three out of every ten adult Church members are Roman Catholics. Second is the Methodist Episcopal Church, with 3,700,000. The South Baptist Convention comes third, with 3,300,000. Jewish congregations have 2,930,000. Negro Baptists have 2,900,000; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 2,190,000; Presbyterian Church in U. S. A., 1,800,000; Protestant Episcopal Church, 1,300,000; Disciples of Christ, 1,275,000; Northern Baptist Convention, 1,230,000; the Congregational Churches are approaching, but have not yet reached, 1,000,000.

3. How are Churches geographically distributed? Of course, the Churches are most numerous where the most people are, but it seems that in proportion to population Church members are most numerous in the East and South, less so in the Middle West, and still less in the Far West. Neither the Roman Catholic nor Jews constitute a majority in any States. In nine Southern States Protestants are more than half the population. In Utah more than 82 per cent are Mormons or Latter Day Saints.

4. How rapidly are Churches growing? Church membership is keeping pace almost exactly with population increase. Denominations increase, and at the same time Churches decrease through mergers and local federations.

5. Is the Sunday School declining? Steadily increasing, but at a lower rate than some year ago. The total number is larger—over 21,000,000 compared with 24,740,000 in the public schools. Week-day and daily vacation religious schools increase. Roman Catholic Sunday Schools decline, but their parochial schools, in which religion is taught, increase rapidly.

6. To what extent are ministers academically trained? Nearly three out of every eight ministers in the eighteen leading white denominations and three out of four of the three leading negro bodies are not graduates of either college or seminary. The Roman Catholic priests are proportionately better trained than Protestant ministers.

7. What is the value of Church property? The Church property in the United States was eported valued at $3,840,000,000 in 1926. This is clearly less than the facts, as many were not reported. To these figures also should be added $500,000,000 for parsonages alone, which was included in the census, but not included in figures above. Adding further, the Roman Catholic parochial schools and Jewish Talmud Torch schools, the total rises to $7,000,000,000.

8. How much do Churches spend? In 1926, the Churches reported expenditures of $817,000,-

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XVI.

S. S. Minnekahda, Friday, July 18, 1930.

I was up at 11:45 A. M. today. There were many callers at room 54, and the morning was exceedingly pleasant. The conversation turned on one's call to the ministry. Dr. Coffin related his own experience. He was brought up on a farm in Iowa, and there, in the open spaces, got impressions that have stood him in good stead and never departed. Years ago, Dr. Coffin received direct and unmistakable answer to prayer. Even now in extremity he does, but does not carry as many matters in detail to God in prayer as he did in previous years, as he feels that God wants him to work out all he can. His first impression, as a boy and seemingly an answer to prayer, was that of being a physician. Then one day an old ignorant but a very pious man said to him, "Maybe God wants you for Himself and His ministry. If He does, you yield, and it will be well with you." That suggestion went home, and he was not able to get away from it. Then for two years in college and while preaching at Churches nearby, he fought it through, still being concerned, but in great hesitation and doubt. Dr. Coffin is a mystic. He believes in Communion, close and silent, with God. Now, very often he spends one or two hours alone, usually in his house, with God. These periods are spent without book, pen or paper at hand, but solely in meditation and in reverential frame of mind and in prayer, and from such seasons he always comes out strengthened for his task whatever it is. Dr. Coffin believes in prayer.

Another visitor of the same hour was a woman across the hall from room 56. She has been in college three years and has two years yet. She is going on a visit to her sister in Long Island, N. Y. She lives in England and goes out every week-end and preaches. She is a Congregationalist. She believes in the gift, and in the direct and overwhelming Person and power of the Spirit. She deplores the loss of spiritual life among college students of the present in her country and wishes to know of us Americans if this same condition prevails in colleges in the United States. She says that students become so busy with study and preparation that they crowd God out and thus grow lukewarm and begin to doubt. She thinks college authorities are to blame, as they should, in the name of the Church, whose they are, keep alive the spiritual as well as the intellectual pursuits. Teachers in colleges seldom in class direct the minds of their pupils to the necessity of spiritual development and purusit. She believes that colleges, Church colleges especially, should deepen and quicken instead of tone down or destroy the spiritual life. She is a fine conversationalist, and after a visit in America she hopes and expects to return to England and pursue her studies in the finest preparation she can get for the ministry to which she has dedicated her life.

Dr. L. E. Smith gives his experience in being called to the ministry. He was nineteen years old, and when the call came to him to preach he knew he must prepare. Fortunately, he had the courage and the good sense to overcome his embarrassment, and entered the sixth grade in school. He was a grown, stalwart young man, and it was exceedingly embarrassing to be in class with youngsters of ten and twelve. He stayed in the grades eighteen months, picked cotton on Saturdays, chopped cotton, worked and preached in the summer, and then came to Elon College. While in Georgia studying in the grades of the public schools and also while in Elon College, every Church he took seemed to improve, add to its membership, to pay him well for what he did and respond liberally to all the enterprises of the Church. This encouraged him and made him believe that God had unmistakably called him to preach. He entered college with $100.00—the amount paid him for revival services and work in Georgia during the summer prior to his going to Elon. He left Elon four years later with all of his debts paid and $1,000 in bank. This all came as salary for his preaching. During this time he gave little heed to the salary and the income, but gave all heed and strength to preaching the gospel and building up the Churches which he served while a student. He sought in season and out of season during these years to live close to God and let God use him to prove whether or not he was truly called to the ministry.

This is a wonderful day out at sea. The sun is shining. The sea is calm and sweet. There is health in the briny breeze. To sit in an easy chair on deck of a ship in the balmy sun and look out over a calm, boundless sea is an unspeakable joy. The sea as well as the heavens "declare the glory of God."

I cannot quite get used to women smoking cigarettes. I just asked a lady in a deck chair close by what was the character of her work. She said she was a social worker, giving her life to social uplift and betterment in New York; that she was employed for this purpose and was doing all she could to improve social conditions of her city and community. And yet I note that she smokes incessantly. As one cigarette is finished, she lights another. Other ladies all about on shipboard are smoking also. Some one has said, and I think truly, that men always smoked because of his inferiority-complex. He wants to make himself feel a little bigger and better than he is, and his smoking is an acknowledgment of his inferiority. Now women have begun to acknowledge their inferiority-complex, which seems to me a great pity, because they are not inferior except as they make themselves so by adopting habits which help make men inferior. Some one said, or wrote, a long time ago that when God made woman He did not take a piece out of man's head from which to make her, that she might rule over man; nor out of his foot, that she might be trampled on by man; but a rib was taken from under the arm of man, that he might protect her; from very near the heart of man, that he might love her; and from the side of man, that the two might walk together side by side, on equal terms, neither being inferior to the other. It seems a pity for women to adopt a symbol of man's inferiority-complex, viz: the befouling of their lungs, mouth and breath with nicotine and the unsavory odor of dead tobacco.

The captain (and commander) of our ship is a Lutheran, but he likes all denominations. He seems to be more of a churchman than a seaman, though he evidently knows his ship and the sea which he has sailed for nearly a half-century. He thinks Dr. Coffin is great on the subject of "Church Union," and wishes that all the Churches could hear and heed the talk Dr. Coffin made in the assembly-room a few days ago.

Our ship has come 379 miles in the last twenty-four hours, and we are now 2,090 miles out at sea. There are many children on board our ship from fourteen months to five years of age. They run all over and about the boat at their pleasure. One not accustomed to such, fears that a little tot might fall overboard, but parents and seamen seem to have no fears and the children have great fun.

THE BASE OF PROGRESS.

Ex-President Coolidge has been writing some exceedingly illuminating articles, each 150 words in length, for the New York Herald-Tribune. In a recent number, Mr. Coolidge comes to grips with the real factors of progress in these words:

"This country was not made on the theory that we should 'eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die.'

"Its founders were more accustomed to prepare themselves with fasting and prayer that might meet sources of obligation to live through the morrow. They had their feast days, too, for they found great happiness in their work, but these were times of thanksgiving and praise.

"Instead of falling back and falling down on the claim that the world owed them a living, they moved forward and moved up on the principle they owed the world a duty in providing for themselves.

"They sought to live in things of the spirit. They put first things first. They set small store on things that are temporal, but strove mightily for things that are eternal.

If this nation is to endure, we shall have to continue to walk in their light. We cannot give all our thought to material success. We cannot be relieved of all hardships. We should not faint at the first obstacle.

"We must accept the lot of finite beings and, with deeper faith and higher courage, work out our own salvation through our own sacrifice."

Any student of history must agree with Mr. Coolidge that those who make real progress in this world seek to live in things of the spirit. In fact, there is no progress other than that which is moral and spiritual. Ancient civilization had great wealth, many of them reveled in luxury and abundance. They deemed that with material wealth they were making progress. They were headed for their doom, however, for back of material is the moral, and unless material progress is based on the moral and the spiritual it is not progress. The founders of America and those on whom progress depend are the moral and spiritual leaders of our land. If we, as a nation, have made any progress the past half-century, it is not because we possess more wealth than our ancestors, but because we handle that wealth better, morally and spiritually. J. O. SELLING CHRIST.

I have seen the "Passion Play" three times within the past month. Twice it was presented with slides and an illustrated lecture; the other time it was presented by a cast of German characters, who are touring this country, presenting the play in the light of their own interpretation of the last week of the Lord's stay on earth. The privilege of seeing these different viewpoints has caused me to be a little more careful in the study of the life of Judas. In the play, he is one of the outstanding characters. As I read the accounts in the gospels, I find that he is one of the outstanding characters. As I study His relations to the lives of men, I find Him to be one of the outstanding characters; for in each of these instances He is portrayed as selling Christ. He sold Him not on the spur of the moment, but as a result of an accumulation of events in His life which gave Him a chance to make good but failed. The transaction as recorded in Matt. 26:14, 15, "Then one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests, and said unto them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver Him unto you, and they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver," was a result of failing to heed the teaching of the Master of former days. Judas had heard the Master say, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." He had heard Jesus say, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." But little by little, Judas let the cancer of unrighteousness eat its way into his own soul until he could barter with the enemies of Christ for a very small sum.

As was true of Judas, the same is true of individuals of today. We think thirty pieces of silver was a very small sum to sell the Master for. We feel that if we had been there we would not have sold Him. But some of the same people who condemn Judas most severely will sell Christ for even less than Judas did. It is selling Christ anew to sacrifice a Christian principle for temporal gain. To nourish the selfish interest of one's own self at the expense of others' welfare is selling Christ at the cheapest price. To live for self and see the interest of the Church of Christ neglected, is another way of selling our Saviour. To live to satisfy our own personal desires rather than to live for the cause of Christ is selling Him on the cheapest terms.

Judas heard the teachings of Christ, but rebelled against them inwardly until he could finally sell his Master for the small sum of thirty pieces of silver. By refusing to obey the higher impulses that come to us, we can get to the place where it is an easy matter to ally ourselves with the enemy and sell Christ for a mere pittance.

Following Christ was not what Judas expected it to be, therefore he sold Him. He did not obtain the temporal power, gain the social prestige or find in this new relation what he had hoped to find. How true to real life of all ages this character is! So many do not find it as they expected before. Those who would follow for selfish interest, sell out and come to naught. But those who come truly seeking Christ and trusting Him until then, find even more than they had anticipated. J. E. McC.

HISTORY OF THE SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

By Dr. W. W. Staley.

In 1859, friends of the Christian Church decided to erect a house of worship in the town of Suffolk, and organized a Church. The following persons were named as a board of trustees: Rev. W. B. Wellons, Rev. W. H. Boykin, Thomas J. Kilby, R. C. Wells, Willis S. Riddick, Richard L. Brewer, Robert B. Brinkley, James A. Parker, and Robert M. Darden. W. B. Wellons was chosen president and treasurer of the board.

A subscription list was opened, and within a few months enough money was pledged to justify the trustees in proceeding with the work. Rev. W. B. Wellons, Thomas J. Kilby, and Jesse B. Brewer were appointed as the building committee.

In 1860 a contract was made with Thomas J. Kilby for the erection of a brick house of worship on the east side of Main Street in Suffolk, and the house was completed March 1, 1861, and dedicated March 11, 1861, the sermon being preached by Pastor Wellons from 1 Chron. 29:5. The Church was really organized in November, 1860, with the following charter members: W. B. Wellons, Sarah S. Wellons, Rives Chapel Wells, Julia A. Wells, James A. Parker, Lucy Ann Parker, Robert B. Brinkley, James Pugh, Frances Pugh, Mary A. Higgins, Sarah E. Norfleet, James A. Turrentine, Thomas J. Kilby, Ann M. Kilby, Willis S. Riddick, James A. Norfleet, Emma Norfleet, Caroline V. Riddick, Thomas S. Kilby, Annie E. Cutchin, Louise Norfleet, W. T. Duke, Louisiana Turrentine, Elizabeth Ward.

At the first meeting of the Church, Rev. W. B. Wellons was elected pastor; Thomas J. Kilby and R. C. Wells, deacons; Robert B. Brinkley, secretary; Willis S. Riddick, collector and treasurer; Josiah Smith, sexton. The five Cardinal Principles of the Christian Church were adopted. The Church was received into the Conference at Cypress Chapel in November, 1860.

In April, 1861, a Sunday School was organized, with Robert B. Brinkley and James A. Turrentine as superintendents, but both of them were called into service, as the Civil War had just begun; hence, the Sunday School did not operate until the close of the war. Robert B. Brinkley fell in battle at Hanover Junction, in May, 1864, as captain of a Cypress company.

June 11, 1862, Rev. W. B. Wellons had to leave Suffolk on account of the war and his loyalty to the Southern cause. His brother, Rev. James W. Wellons, held services in the Church until November, 1862. The Church was then used by Federal army chaplains for a time, and later as a hospital until November, 1865. After that, Dr. Wellons returned to become pastor again at a salary of one hundred dollars a year. He continued as pastor from 1866 until October 24, 1876, when he resigned on account of failing health; and upon his resignation and personal request, Rev. Jesse T. Whitley was chosen as pastor, and he continued as pastor until February 28, 1879. During the pastorate of Dr. Wellons he did a great work, became a leading advocate of temperance, and, through The Christian Sun, introduced the cultivation of peanuts as a farm crop. He was a great preacher, a great editor, a great reformer, and became a national figure in the field of temperance.

Rev. Jesse T. Whitley was succeeded by Rev. William T. Walker, of North Carolina, who served until November, 1882. Walker was succeeded by Rev. W. W. Staley, who served from November, 1882, to November 1923, and Rev. H. S. Hardcastle has served from November, 1923, and has been elected for 1930-'31.

In 1884, the addition of a Sunday School room 30x30, and a pastor's study 21x13 was erected in the rear of the Church, a connection made so that the main Church and the Sunday School-room could be used as one, and the Church was renovated, a new organ placed in the gallery, and new pavement and iron fence on the front at a cost of $2,075.40.

In 1892-1893, the whole Church was torn down and a new Church erected at a cost of $40,000, and a seating capacity of 800, and a new Jardine pipe organ was installed at a cost of $3,500. This Church was dedicated on January 28, 1894, Rev. Dr. C. J. Jones, of Memorial Temple, Norfolk, Va., officiating and preaching the sermon. It was a great occasion, a great congregation, and a great service.

The addition of three Sunday School rooms and toilets were initiated October 27, 1905, and reported by C. A. Shoop, chairman of the committee, on July 30, 1913, as completed and paid for.

In 1926-1928, a third addition was made to the Church of fifty-two rooms at a cost of $120,255.25. The total number of rooms is now sixty, and the cost about $200,000. As a Church and departmental Sunday School building, it has no superior, though others have cost more money.

The following are the officials of the Church from its foundation:

Trustees.—Rev. W. B. Wellons, Rev. W. H. Boykin, Thomas J. Kilby, R. C. Wells, Willis S. Riddick, Richard L. Brewer, Robert B. Brinkley, James A. Parker, Robert M. Darden, W. H. Jones, John T. SUFFOLK LETTER.

The public meetings of the Jews were not only religious, but festival. The Passover was called the "Feast of the Passover." The Feast of the Tabernacles was also kept as a real feast. The Feast of Pentecost was likewise a time of eating as well as worship. The Jews gathered from all quarters and brought their lambs and cattle, and these were slaughtered and prepared for food and the worshipers enjoyed the feasts. In the early days of this country, all-day meetings were held and big dinners were served on the ground, and people enjoyed the meal and the house of worship. Always feasting has been enjoyed and friendships have been cultivated. Hospitality is a part of the Christian religion, and it has been cultivated in the home, the Church, and the social organizations that have sprung from the Church of Jesus Christ. Eating together really binds people together in a way that nothing else does. Banquets are fruits out of the garden of Christian teachings and practices of Christian individuals and organizations.

On Friday night, November 21st, in harmony with the above idea and in the spirit of Christian fellowship, the Baracca Class of the Suffolk Christian Church held a banquet in the Fellowship Hall of the Church, a group of women from the Woman's Home and Foreign Miscsionary Society served a turkey supper with accessories that harmonized and all enjoyed the appetizing meal. One hundred and thirty-five members of the class and guests sat down together by the long white tables. Dr. I. W. Johnosn invoked the divine blessing and then the feast began. T. Cover Johnson is president of the class, and Col. E. E. Holland is the teacher, and R. C. Harrell is the treasurer. The class has done some splendid charity work, and maintains a good attendance with good results. At the banquet, songs were sung, interesting stunts performed, brief messages delivered, and the two hours filled with innocent fun and whole-hearted enjoyment, in harmony with the teachings and spirit of Jesus Christ. The total number present, including the ladies who served, was one hundred and fifty. If all the class could have attended, the number would have been over two hundred. The Sunday School is a wonderful agency for the exercise of the Christian spirit in a social, intellectual, financial and spiritual way, and has the capacity and opportunity to win babies, young people and mature men and women to Jesus Christ and His Church. One weak spot that needs healing, and that is the neglect of attendance upon the preaching service on Sunday after the Sunday School closes. The adult class that will cultivate going from the Sunday School to the Church service until it is one hundred per cent in both will get on the honor roll for time and eternity. That is a challenge that should stir all that is wisest, best, and most Christian in the hearts of a fine Baracca Class. The great banquet could not have been enjoyed if Jesus had not come, and men and women had never gone to Church.

ELON LETTER.

Success in education depends on a correct philosophy of life and procedures congruent therewith. If we are to conform to certain desirable ends or objectives as conceived by the faculty or board of trustees of the college we attend, education is one thing. If we are to develop and express our life capacities in terms of the gospel of Jesus as we understand that gospel, then education is another thing. If "personality" is the most precious concept in the world, education is one thing. If mass production and alikeness are the objectives sought, education is another thing.

We know that human beings are born with certain capacities based on unlearned tendencies. We also know that human nature is modifiable by the educational process.

What shall educators do in the face of these facts? Shall they put over certain ideas, ideals, programs of life on their pupils? Or shall they assist their pupils to self-realization in the light of the Christian standard of life? Will they aid personality to fruit in Christian character? Or will they mould life according to their own views and interpretations? Will they, in a word, aim at conformation or transformation?

Certain big business interests, concerned for the perpetuation of the status quo, sensitive to profits rather than to human welfare, are determined to subject our educational system to review and to say what shall and what shall not be taught in our schools. Almost weekly utterances come to me indicative of such intention.

How different the method of Jesus as a Teacher! He did not suppress any capacity of any one of his disciples. Neither did he always encourage free expression of it. He frequently redirected its use, so that transformation took place. Peter was a cursing fisherman, with an urge for passionate verbal expression. Jesus' method did not eradicate this capacity, this tendency. It redirected it, while conserving it, caused it to function on a higher plane. And so on the Day of Pentecost, this cursing fisherman is a Christian evangelist, leading thousands to conviction of sin and repentance by his talent of passionate and vigorous speech.

Matthew was a publican, advancing his own interests at the expense of his fellow-Jews by cooperation with the alien and oppressive Roman government. He was a self-server. When he comes out of the school of Jesus, he writes the most humanitarian of the gospels, and in its 25th chapter gives us the most vivid description ever penned of the social gospel, the gospel that makes service of others central in life. A server still, but not a self-server. His inborn capacity has been sublimated, has come to functioning on a higher plane.

This is true education. Its test is not what the pupils know or what they believe nor what skills they have acquired, but what they have become and are. It is the acid test of educational procedure. Its essence is not in conforming, but in the transformation that has been achieved by the entire renewal of the mind. It develops personality and it fruits in character, and if it be Christian education it fruits in Christian character, the disposition to act in every life situation as Jesus would act.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

The American people have ever been interested in education. Sixteen years after the pilgrims landed, they founded Harvard College, which was the beginning of higher education in America, and for over a century it furnished education for the professional classes. Secondary education for the masses is a contribution of the nineteenth century.

The twentieth century is interested in collegiate education for the masses, but this does not necessarily imply education in masses. The great universities of the country are interested primarily in specialization and research. These institutions are swamped with thousands of immature youth, and parents are hesitating to lose their children in the university mass.

The answer to this situation is the junior college. This offers a more widely diffused opportunity for two years of college work in smaller units—an institution where closer contact is possible with instructors more interested in teaching than in research, making transition easier from high school restrictions to university freedom.

There are more than four hundred junior colleges in the country, with more than fifty thousand students. The movement is in its infancy, but it is beginning to occupy a unique position in the American educational ladder, unmistakably higher than a glorified high school; distinctly lower than the scholarly specialization of the university.

The junior college graduate compares favorably with the university-trained freshman and sophomore when they meet on common ground in the junior and senior years. A detailed report was made of over three hundred graduates of thirty-seven different junior colleges who had entered Stanford University. They were compared with groups who had received their freshman and sophomore training at the university. After the first quarter, the junior college group showed a distinct superiority in actual class-room accomplishments, a superiority which increased regularly with each successive quarter until the end of the senior year. At graduation, twice as great a proportion of junior college students received final honors as the university-trained students, and almost twice as many remained at the university for graduate work.

Another study from the athletic standpoint of over seventy thousand students in California's three largest universities showed that a much greater proportion of students from junior colleges made places on varsity athletic squads than those who entered the university as freshmen. Such avidence indicates that the junior college is making good, both scholastically and athletically. It is a permanent addition to higher education, and educators and the general public see in it a major movement for improvement in American education—the development of an institution which promises to popularize and democratize collegiate education.

ENGLISH LAW.

The way England curbs the use of firearms among the criminal elements was strikingly illustrated recently when a burglar who fired one shot at two policemen, but did not hit either of them, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment on the charge of "shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm." In passing sentence, the judge made this comment: "Police officials are engaged in duties that require protection by law against attempts to intimidate or incapacitate them by firearms. It would be an unfortunate thing in this country if the use of firearms became common. I feel it is the duty of the court to visit such conduct with condign punishment. I hope this sentence will have the effect of deterring others from carrying loaded revolvers while pursuing their vocations of burglary." And policemen do not carry guns in England. Yet armed bandits are almost unknown in that country. It is not healthy to imitate the American brand of gangsters over there.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

FIRST THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Few Americans know that the original presidential Thanksgiving proclamation was lost for over a hundred years; that it was found at an auction sale in 1921; that it was bought by the Library of Congress for $300.00; and that it now reposes in the archives of that institution—one of the most valuable documents in the world. The Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, in a statement issued recently, relates the story in the House of Representatives:

"Resolved, That a joint committee of both Houses be directed to wait upon the President of the United States, to request that he would recommend to the people of the United States a day of public Thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging, with grateful hearts, the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity to establish a Constitution of government for their safety and happiness."

Harmless as this resolution seems, there were objections to it. In reading the annals of Congress of that period, we find that Representative Aedanus Burke, of South Carolina, thought we should not mimic Europe, where they made a mere mockery of Thanksgiving.

Representative Thomas Tudor Tucker, also of South Carolina, argued that it was not the business of Congress to ask for a national day of Thanksgiving. "They (the people) may not be inclined to return thanks for a Constitution until they have experienced that it promotes their safety and happiness."

These objections, however, were over-ruled; the resolution was passed and sent to the Senate for concurrence. The Senate approved and appointed its committee to wait on the President. The joint committee was made up of Ralph Izard, of South Carolina, and William S. Johnson, of Connecticut, from the Senate; Elias Boudinot, of New Jersey, Roger Sherman of Connecticut, and Peter Sylvester of New York, from the House.

Washington complied with the request, and, on October 3, 1789, issued his proclamation, calling for a national day of Thanksgiving on Thursday, November 26th.

The original proclamation of Thanksgiving, and, indeed, the first presidential proclamation ever issued in the United States, reads as follows:

"By the President of the United States of America.

"Whereas, it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey His will, to be grateful for His benefits, and humbly to implore His protection and favor; and, whereas, both houses of Congress have, by their joint committee, requested me 'to recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity to establish a form of government for their safety and happiness.'

"Now, therefore, I do recommend and assign Thursday, the 26th day of November next, to be devoted by the people of these States to the service of the great and glorious Being who is the beneficent Author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be. That we may then all unite in rendering unto Him our sincere and humble thanks for His kind care and protection of the people of this country previous to their becoming a nation; for the signal and manifold mercies and the favorable interpositions of His providence which we experienced in the course and conclusion of the late war; for the great degree of tranquility, union, and plenty which we have since enjoyed; for the peaceable and rational manner in which we have been enabled to establish constitutions of government for our safety and happiness, and particularly the national one now lately instituted—for the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed and the means we have of acquiring and diffusing useful knowledge; and in general for all the great and various favors which he hath been pleased to confer upon us.

"And also that we may then unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and Ruler of nations, and beseech Him to pardon our national and other transgressions; to enable us all, whether in public or private stations, to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually; to render our national government a blessing to all the people by constantly being a government of wise, just, and constitutional laws, discreetly and faithfully executed and obeyed; to protect and guide all sovereigns and nations (especially such as have shown kindness to us), and to bless them with good government, peace and concord. To promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and virtue, and the increase of science among them and us, and generally to grant unto all mankind such a degree of temporal prosperity as He alone knows to be best.

"Given under my hand at the city of New York the third day of October, in the year of our Lord, 1789.

C. E. CONVENTION.

A Christian Endeavor Convention of the Western District of the Virginia Union was held at Woodstock, Va., on November 1st and 2nd. Christian Endeavorers from the major post of the Shenandoah Valley attended this fine convention. New officers were elected, with Miss Margaret Richards, of Winchester, as president. She also holds the office of young people's superintendent in the Virginia State Union. The high points in the convention were the C. E. school of methods, addresses by C. E. State and international leaders, and the playtime-supper banquet. The delegates who attended this convention received true Southern hospitality in the small city of Woodstock.

Convention leaders and speakers: Mr. Stanley B. Vardesall, superintendent of Christian vocation, International Society of C. E.; Mr. W. Roy Brey, Southern secretary, International Society of C. E.; Mr. C. E. Barfield, president Virginia C. E. Union; Mr. W. H. Baker, treasurer Virginia C. E. Union; Mr. Wood, former president of Mississippi C. E. Union; Mr. Floyd Hines, social and recreational superintendent of Virginia C. E. Union; Mr. V. L. Phillips, former president of New Jersey C. E. Union and president of Shenandoah College, Dayton, Va.

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅝ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3⅜x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(November.)

Father, for Jesus' sake, make His Church glorious even now. Sooner than outer efficiency, increase inner sufficiency—the soul-caliber that qualifies for the greatest evangelistic outreach. Within Zion bounds, O God, may the Pentecostal pressure of sharing and giving be felt from center to rim, and may stewardship find its place in all of life. Grant to Church officers discernment rightly to interpret and impress stewardship, and lay hard upon the consciences of all who lead the duty and responsibility of securing to the Church and making permanent for its care and expansion, the principle of "God's portion." From self into service, we pray for all, in Jesus' name. Amen.

WORLD SERVICE SCHOOLS.

One of the splendid new terms which is coming into our Christian Church vocabulary in our plans of working with Congregational Churches is "World Service School." Every week, Sunday Schools are taking the action which makes them merit this name, and we are trusting that every Church in the Southern Christian Convention will soon have a "World Service School."

Missionary education is an essential part of religious education. It ought, therefore, to be included in the work of the Church school. The "World Service" plan is a plan for including missionary education in the program of Congregational and Christian Church schools. It has been adopted in the interest of a more effective missionary education in the local Church.

Any Church school may enroll as a World Service School if it agrees:

1. To include missionary education in its religious education program.

2. To include in its regular benevolences Congregational and Christian missionary work.

3. To appoint one or more leaders or correspondents to receive program material from the Department of Missionary Education and World Friendship to make reports to that department and to use the materials to the best possible advantage.

The above sentences have been quoted from a leaflet entitled "World Service Schools," which gives full information regarding the plan, and which may be secured from Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C.

After your school or whatever body is responsible for making such decision, has considered the matter and voted to adopt the World Service plan, you should send in your enrollment to Dr. J. O. Atkinson on a card which will be furnished. This enrollment will be sent to our mission office, in Dayton, and arrangements will be made at once for you to receive the very suggestive and interesting missionary program material which is prepared for World Service Schools. You will find special programs for the general Sunday School and also special material for junior and primary groups.

The advantages in enrolling as a World Service School, as given in the leaflet, are five:

1. It gives a school a sense of fellowship with other Congregational and Christian Church schools.

2. It brings to a school regularly missionary programs and missionary suggestions.

3. It brings to each school, from time to time, valuable educational material in the field of world friendship.

4. It lessens a danger which confronts every school which is not enrolled and which, therefore, does not receive World Service material—the danger of omitting missionary education from its program entirely.

5. It gives to the various State and national offices the names of one or more leaders in each Church whose interest in missionary education can be depended upon.

Will you give this matter immediate consideration in your Church? There will be a meeting of the Missionary and Education Committee soon after the middle of December, and at that time we hope to present a creditable list of Christian Church World Service Schools. We hope yours will be among them.

MISSIONARIES MASSACRED.

Since the days of Carey, Judson, Livingston and other heroes of the faith who went out for their Lord more than a century ago, missionaries have been massacred. There has not been a decade in more than 100 years during which some faithful servants of God on the far-flung battle-line for righteousness and truth have not fallen at the hands of those they were seeking to help. They, like their Lord, were crucified in the crusade for righteousness and man's salvation; and yet these faithful followers of the Lord and soldiers of the cross are undaunted and still penetrate to all parts of the earth, loving not their lives unto the death.

These reflections are called to mind as the papers last week brought to us, who are at ease in Zion here in America, the sad news of the massacre of a man of God and his little daughter, two and a half years of age, and a devoted lady missionary in the wilds of South America. The bare facts of this massacre reveal to us a sacrifice for our Lord, such as we think of in the far past, but seldom witness in our easy-going age. It is through such servants as these that the blood-stained banner of the cross is carried on. We would like every CHRISTIAN SUN reader to carefully read and meditate upon the following, which reads like a page of daring and heroism from the Church history of long ago:

"An assault by the savage Nhambiquara Indians was made, late in October, upon American missionaries serving under the Inland South American Missionary Union, of New York, at Juruena, Brazil. Rev. Arthur F. Tylee, his daughter, Marion Neill, two and a half years of age, and Miss Mildred Kratz were slain. Mrs. Tylee, formerly Ethel M. Canary, of Memphis, Tenn., was painfully injured, but is recovering. The bodies of the slain were buried at Juruena by a fellow-missionary, Albert E. W. McDowell.

"The mission station at Juruena was opened by Mr. and Mrs. Tylee five years ago. It is located two thousand miles inland, fully five hundred miles from a railroad, and is a well-nigh impenetrable jungle. The missionaries had been steadily winning the favor and friendship of the primitive people whom they had in every way sought to help. An epidemic of pneumonia had caused the death of several natives, and letters from the seat of trouble, received within recent weeks, justify the inference that the unfriendly chief, or witch doctors, aroused the superstitions of the natives, placing the blame upon the missionaries, the massacre resulting.

"Mr. Tylee was nobly furnished for service, a graduate of Amherst College, with further training at the University of Besancon, France, and the Harvard School of Law. He fitted himself for his missionary ministry at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, where he and his wife each were graduated in 1922. Miss Kratz, also a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute, took her college training at Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and had been graduated in nursing by the Augustana Hospital, Chicago. She had but recently come to this field of service when the tragedy occurred. The names of these devoted workers will be remembered as of the noble company who loved not their lives unto the death."

We are indebted to W. M. Runyan, of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, for these facts.

(5) Solo, "Gracious Spirit, Dwell With Me."

(6) Prayer.

(7) Offertory.

(8) Hymn, "The Lord be With Us."

Leader's preparatory talk:

We have seen a Hindu village. We have compared our own communities with Mange, and have seen the difference in social conditions. Christianity is the power lifting and blessing our villages and cities. But how we neglect Christ! Does our community invite Jesus to dwell and rest with us? consider Bethany, a small village out from Jerusalem. Here Jesus visited many times because of the calm peace. Jesus found love, contentment, thrift, conservative luxury—in short, all the elements of a refreshing welcome in Bethany. It was in Bethany that Jesus wept when His friends wept, and brought comfort and joy in place of tears. Here He was happiest. It was to Bethany that Jesus retired when the strain of "Passion Week" was so exacting. And after death had been swallowed up in the victory of the Resurrection, it was from Bethany that Jesus ascended into heaven. If each of us invites Jesus into our hearts, He will dwell in our communities, and how He will bless us! He will so illumine our village that the light will shine all the way to India and brighten the villages there.

Willing Workers or Junior Society.

Theme: "Heroes of India."

Decorations: Create atmosphere with top monkeys, parents, schools.

SOUTH GEORGIA CHURCHES.

Some time ago a good sister was "jacking me up" about not writing to THE SUN. She said that the paper would be better supported if our pastors would contribute oftener. I told her that I was busy and did not have time for much of that and I thought that such fellows as Dr. Atkinson, Bro. Johnson, Bro. Hunt, "John" Dollar, and others should do that. They do not have to work like I do. However, if the people want a report from my work, in view of the fact that it does not gleam with brilliant success, here goes.

I am glad to report that my work goes steadily forward. In spite of the financial depression, my Churches raised more money than they have in any previous year since I have been on the work. I serve Enigma, Antioch, Ambrose, and Vanceville. The membership of the four Churches was increased by twenty-one. We were disappointed in our preaching help at Enigma, which forced the pastor to do all the preaching except one sermon by the pastor of the Baptist Church and one by Bro. Estes, of the Holiness Church. Great crowds gathered promptly. The co-operation of the local pastor was beautiful. A gracious revival was the result.

Rev. T. J. Ponder, of Waycross, did the preaching for us at Antioch very acceptably. Great interest was manifest. Many old settlers expressed themselves by saying that it was the best meeting that Antioch had had in many years.

We held our meeting at Ambrose in union with the Methodist people. Rev. G. D. Hunt did the preaching in a forceful way. Rev. Mingledorph conducted the devotionals, and I conducted the singing. The spirit of union was beautiful and a great revival was the result.

Bro. Hunt also helped me at Vanceville and seemed to be at his best. So great was the interest that the people refused to allow it to close and continued for two days and nights after Bro. Hunt had gone. A great revival resulted here also.

We have a Woman's Missionary Society, a union Sunday School and a union prayer meeting at Enigma. We have a Christian Endeavor Society at Antioch. We have a live Sunday School, Woman's Missionary Society and Christian Endeavor Society at Ambrose. We have a live Sunday School and Woman's Missionary Society at Vanceville.

I enjoyed Rev. J. A. Blanton's article in THE SUN some time ago greatly. He is a personal friend of mine. For many years he was president of the South Georgia Free Will Baptist Association, ceasing to be only when he would not consent to serve longer. Possibly no man wields a greater influence for good in this part of the country. Why can't our Free Will Baptist brethren come into this union? There is no reason why they should not.

We are praising the Lord for the success we have had, and are praying for a greater year in His name this year. I greatly enjoy the Congregational page in THE SUN. May the Lord bless every pastor and every member of our constituency in a wonderful way another year, and help us to rise to our opportunities, for ours is a wonderful opportunity now.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson X—December 7, 1930.

Stephen.

Golden Text: "They chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 6:5.

Lesson: Acts 6:1-7:60.

In Stephen, we find an outstanding character of the New Testament, and a representative Christian of all time. Comparatively little space is given to him, but he has left an indelible impression on Christianity. And his indirect contribution to Christianity has been even greater than his direct contribution for his faithful witnessing, and his martyrdom undoubtedly led to the conversion of Paul, who, next to Jesus, was the most towering personality in all Christian history. As Augustine has said, "If Stephen had not made a speech, the Church would not have had Paul."

A Deacon.

Stephen was not a deacon in a technical sense as we find the word used later in the New Testament, but for our purpose we can refer to him as a deacon. With six other men, he was appointed on a committee of seven to see to it that justice was done in the distribution of food among both the native and the Greek-speaking Jewish Christians. Stephen was chosen because of certain qualities. He had a good reputation in the community, and people had utmost confidence in him. He was full of the Holy Spirit—there was a deep spiritual note about his life, a winsomeness of personality that was the flowering of a vital knowledge of Christ in his heart. He was a man of wisdom—he had practical judgment and common sense. He was a man "full of faith"—he had an enthusiastic, because it was a deep, faith. He believed in the abiding reality of spiritual things. In short, Stephen was a somewhat unusual man, combining in himself a rare combination of unquestioned integrity and righteousness and sweetness and winsomeness of personality, and also possessing practical wisdom and sound judgment.

A Preacher.

They selected Stephen to minister to material things. But that was his side line. His main business, as he interpreted it was to witness. He felt that he must first of all bear witness for Christ, and anything else was secondary. And God had given him special gifts. He had a logical mind and a warm heart. He had found the secret of power and he spoke with persuasiveness and with authority. And yet he had a fine spirit that gave tone and vitality to all that he said. He was a little too keen and he was a little too liberal for those Jews to whom he spoke, and because they were not able to meet him in argument and in moral character, they proceeded to resort to physical force. They stirred up the people, trumped up false charges against him, and brought him before the Sanhedrin—the supreme court of the Jews. They charged him with blasphemy—a personal charge, and with dangerous and false teaching.

An Apologist or Defender.

The word as used here does not mean that Stephen apologized for his actions or his teachings, that he admitted that he was wrong. It rather means what the root meaning of the word suggests, "a defense of" himself and his teaching. The word apology comes from two Greek words meaning "in behalf of" and "to speak." Stephen was the first of that long list of Christians, especially in the early Church, who spoke in behalf of, who defended Christianity.

Stephen's apology or defense is a masterpiece, both in arrangement of material and in directness and in spirit. A close study reveals the fact that he refutes both the charges against himself and against his teaching. He shows how God first appeared to Abraham the "father of the faithful" outside of what they looked upon as "holy land." He showed how Moses—and Moses was a name to conjure with by those who laid so much emphasis upon the law—had himself said that God would raise up Jesus as a Prophet whom they were to hear. He showed how Jesus, this prophet to whom Moses had referred, had emphasized the spiritual aspect of religion, making both worship and religious practice a matter of inner spirit. And then, with a directness that was startling and a courage that is inspiring, he told his hearers that all along the line they had resisted the Spirit of God. It was plain speaking, but he knew it was the truth and the truth that they needed.

A Martyr.

His words—because they knew that what he had said was true—aroused them to a wild fury. Sticklers as they were for the law, they proceeded to disregard the law in their burning desire to do away with him. Without passing sentence on him, they dragged him out of the city—they were careful not to kill him in the city—and, laying their clothes at the feet of a young man named Saul, they stoned him to death. And it is quite likely that they threw a few stones after they knew he was dead just to vent their spite and their hatred. Through it all, Stephen exemplified the spirit of His Master. There was a calmness and a sense of poise that was manifest to all that saw him. In the hour of crisis there was permitted to him a vision of the risen Christ, standing at the right hand of the Father, and with child-like simplicity and faith, Stephen committed his spirit unto his Master. And then, like his Master, he prayed for them that did him wrong. Jesus had said, "Ye shall be my witnesses." Stephen was a faithful witness. It might be said in closing that the word from which we get the word witness is the same word from which we get our word martyr. Is it not possible that there are all too few of us bearing witness for Christ because we are not willing to pay the price?

Topic: "The Best Christmas Gifts."

Scripture Reading: 2 Cor. 8:1-5.

For a discussion of the topic, it would be well to think about the beginning of our celebration of Christmas. The following paragraph gives a little of the historical background of our present-day customs.

Some writers say that the observance of Christmas began about the year 150 A. M. This statement is not given as an historical fact. Christmas began to be observed, although at different dates, in the fourth century. In the Eastern Church, dates in April or May and January 6th were observed as Christmas. The Western Church early chose December 25th as the time for observing the birth of Christ. By the fifth century, the Eastern Church had adopted this date. December 25th was probably chosen for the celebrations in order to offset some of the big celebrations of the pagan Churches which came about this same time of the year. For this same reason, there were written the "manger songs" and carols. And later the Christmas tree, with its lights and gifts, came into being. As the Christmas celebration became more and more a time for universal celebration, special dishes and customs added themselves to the other customs. Thus our Christmas.

Discuss the question: "Why I like to give Christmas presents." Do you think your reasons would apply to the average person who gives at Christmas time?

List on the blackboard the things that should guide one in the selection of gifts for the Christmas season. Discuss these points. Just how much should the idea of "useful gifts" enter into the consideration of gifts? Explain the desire to give something beautiful at Christmas. To whom should we give our gifts? Why?

Ask each member of the society, if the group is not too large, to tell of the Christmas present that he or she received which brought him more happiness than any other present. Let each one give the reason why he appreciated one gift more than the others. How do the lines,

"Not what we give, not what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare"

apply to Christmas gifts?

"Art thou lonely, O my brother?
Share thy little with another!
Stretch a hand to one unfriended,
And thy loneliness is ended.
So both thou and he Shall less lonely be,
And of thy one loneliness
Shall come two's great happiness."

—John Oxenham.

If your society would like to give a Christmas gift to your Church that would be appreciated and valuable, you can do it by working a few hours at a task you will enjoy. Secure a good Christmas play or pageant, one that will bring the real story of Christmas, and give it as a part of your Christmas program. Miss Jewel Truitt, Waverly, Va., will be glad to help you in the selection of suitable plays and pageants for Young People's Societies for Christmas. Write her today.

The topic for next week is, "How to Make Others Happy."

QUIET HOUR.

Christian Endeavorers have the privilege of being comrades in the observance of quiet hour. Comrades of the quiet hour make it the rule of their lives to set apart at least fifteen minutes of every day for meditation and direct communion with God. This quiet hour meditation usually comes in the early morning before the day's work is begun.

Members of your society should be given an opportunity by the president or the chairman of the prayer meeting committee to join the comrades of the quiet hour. Enrollment cards may be secured from Mr. E. P. Gates, 41 Mt. Vernon St., Boston, Mass.

Each week the Christian Endeavor notes in this paper will include the quiet hour Scripture readings, in order that those who read these notes may keep in step with their Christian Endeavor comrades of the quiet hour. The readings for this week are: Monday, 1 Cor. 13:1-13; Tuesday, Eph. 1:15-23; Wednesday, 1 Sam. 18:1-4; Thursday, 2 Cor. 9:15; Friday, Psa. 42:1-5, and Saturday, Heb. 12:1, 2. Jewel Truitt.

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

SIN AND THE NEW PSYCHOLOGY. Clifford E. Barbour. The Abingdon Press; $2.00; pp. 269.

Sin is not done away with by the new psychology, only technically described, according to Dr. Barbour. The book strikes a note that psychology has long needed, and strikes it well.

The new psychology, the author contends, is psycho-analysis. Surely if any psychology can eliminate sin, psycho-analysis can. But it doesn't, and that is the charm of it. Sin is a fact, and even psychology cannot abolish a fact.

Sin is the transgression of the standard accepted by the individual or his group as having ethical and moral validity for life. When this standard has been consciously violated, conscience condemns the guilty party. He can repress the sting of this accusing mentor, but it will linger in his unconscious mind and plague him. To rid himself of the sense of guilt, he must confess his sin and seek forgiveness—confess it to Christ and seek God's forgiveness—confess it also to the injured fellowman and seek his forgiveness.

A man may sin unconsciously, in which event he is not guilty, though he suffers the consequences of this sin—a broken and incomplete fellowship with God. When later his comprehension of the Christian standard advances and he sees he unwittingly sinned in the past, let him repent, but especially let him follow the gleam of his larger light.

A man who is suffering from a psychosis, a diseased mind, needs a physician; but the man who is suffering from sin needs God.

A saner book in the realm of religious psychology has never been written. Dr. Barbour clearly shows that there is no real conflict between the new psychology and Christianity. Psycho-analysis he demonstrates, but adds the weight of its evidence to the eternal truths originally revealed by Jesus. A scholar strengthens Christian faith with an apology for Christianity that does not apologize.

RELIGION IN LIFE ADJUSTMENTS. By Samuel Nowell Stevens. The Abingdon Press; $1.50; pp. 147.

"The elder passion to save men's souls has gone long since," according to the author, but this does not necessitate the passing of pastoral ministration. For "here in our day is a new basis for an old passion. The minister as pastor may come to the aid of men and women who are in the process of becoming souls. Let the minister intelligently approach this great task with new tools and modern understanding, and the dynamic power of an earlier day will be regained."

That there is undoubted need of this new approach to the pastoral relationship is evidenced by the fact that a survey of any parish will reveal such maladjusted personality situations as lonesome people, aged persons out of touch with life, flaming youth, persons making vocation choices, vocational misfits, persons handicapped by poverty, blindness, deafness, lameness, etc., chronically ill persons, egotists, skeptics, cynics, fearful and worried persons, materialists, the commercially-minded, persons in home and family situations sadly maladjusted. Has religion any balm for these aching hearts? Are we hopeless as Christians in our desire to serve in such situations?

Not at all. Religion has great and wholesome therapeutic value for such maladjusted persons. To one who is loved and trusted as the pastor is, or should be, such sufferers as we have described will in confidence pour out their souls' secret in confession. If the psychoses in particular cases have proceeded too far or if the hidden causes of the maladjustments are so deeply repressed in the unconscious mind that the sufferers themselves are unaware of them, then a trained psychiatrist may be necessary to bring them to light. When the sufferer, either by confession or by the findings of the psychiatrist, however, stands revealed in the presence of his pastor, what an opportunity is presented to remake life in terms of the Christian challenge and program! Prayer and faith work wonders in such situations, achieving what expert psychological practitioners are incapable of doing when they lack the spiritual tools in which the minister is professionally and experientially habituated. In such situations, the older passion to save souls becomes sublimated in the ministry of religious recreation of the soul.

But the chief service of religion in life adjustments is not in the realm of therapeutics, but in the realm of prevention. The integrated personality is not in danger of maladjustment. The Church, through its program of religious education, should enable persons to orientate themselves egotically, socially, and rationally. The individual has an urge toward self-expression, another toward social oneness with his own kind, and a third toward unity with the world as a whole.

Religion, as involving the whole being and with its prerogative of evaluating all experience, both present and past, offers to men his only dependable chance to satisfy these three basic urges of his being. Religion, therefore, is debased when it becomes a defense mechanism, and is maligned when it is described as the refuge of the ignorant, the stupid, or the cowardly. For religion, rightly understood, is the synthesis of those spiritual values which yield to integrated personality in the individual man and a progressive spiritual reconstruction of the social patterns in terms of which men live in society.

The book is a suggestive rather than a scientific treatise. In his basic positions, however, the author stands on solid foundations. As an introductory discussion, the book will serve to send the reader, who would be proficient in the use of religion for life adjustments, to the source materials listed in the bibliography and to other works of equal importance, or better still, to seek opportunities for clinical experience.

It is a book you will not agree with in toto, but which has many good suggestions and which, above all, will make you think and search for further light.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

BY DR. AMOS R. WELLS.

MONDAY.

HIDDEN SACKCLOTH.

"And the people looked, and, behold! he had sackcloth within upon his flesh."—2 Kings 6: 24-30.

The King of Israel was sorely moved by the fearful sufferings of his famine-stricken people, and when a particular instance of horror came to his attention and he rent his clothes, the bystanders perceived that underneath he wore sackcloth; so the people knew his hidden grief.

Longfellow once wrote sympathetically: "If we could read the secret history of our enemies, we would find in each man's life sorrow and suffering enough to disarm hostility." Even the highest in their pride, if we could look beneath their armor, would be seen wearing sackcloth. So let us move tenderly among men, knowing that though misery does not often flaunt itself or beg for fellowship in grief, the unutterable need is still there, hidden below the surface.

Prayer.—May we be strong to help, O Heavenly Partner in human distress. May we find in Thee the one surcease of pain, the one remedy for anguish, the one everlasting joy. And, having found it for ourselves, may we share it with all around us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

PLEASURES CONTROLLED.

"They are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life."—Luke 8:9-15.

Our Lord's parable of the good seed choked among the thorns of worldliness found a sad parallel the other day in Lynn, Mass., when a toy balloon which a boy was inflating suddenly burst and the tin whistle at the opening was breathed in and stuck in his throat. The poor little fellow had passed beyond recovery before a doctor could be brought.

In a less obvious but equally real fashion, very often we children of a larger growth choke on our toys. Many different playthings kill us—money, ambition, pride, vanity, power, frivolity, passing pleasures—but all of them are as transitory as a toy balloon, and each of them is likely to choke up.

Prayer.—May we examine ourselves, Infinite Judge, in the light of Thy judgments. May we discover our true tendencies, may we see our lives as Thou dost see them. And if we are living for the emptiness of the world, turn us, we pray Thee, toward the real satisfactions—Thy joys that endure and grow. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

"My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go."—Job 27:1-7.

In the great drama of Job, the proud man may see himself as in a clear mirror. Job was almost invincible in his persistent pride. Job was royally sure he was right. Job knew his own heart, or thought he did, and in it saw nothing impure. Job scanned his whole life carefully, or thought he did, and found no unworthy action. Job charged the Lord with unrighteousness because, in the midst of the fearful disasters sent from heaven, he was sure of his own righteousness. That righteousness the patriarch held fast and would not let it go.

Not all of us are so outspoken as Job, but in our hidden souls are we less hesitant to upbraid the All-Wise, the All-Loving? Do we hold our righteousness less tenaciously than Job held his?

Prayer.—Thy pure eyes behold us, O All-Seeing One. Thy vision pierces to the uncleanness beneath all our confident shows. Force us into Thy judgment hall. Strip off our self-conceit. Make us Thine by way of the truth. We ask it in the name of Thy Son, and in His lowliness. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CHEAP LABOR.

"They that plow iniquity, and sow trouble, reap the same."—Job 4:1-9.

An economist quotes the advertisement of a certain chamber of commerce, urging men to establish their business enterprises in its city, adding, "We offer free factory sites and plenty of cheap labor." Cheap labor, says the economist, is dear in the end. It means hopeless labor, sodden and degraded labor, inefficient labor, quarrelsome and unproductive labor. "Free factory sites" in such a community cost too much. God never asks any one to serve Him for naught, but always pays liberal and amazing wages. The wages of sin, however, are nothing; nay, they are worse than nothing—the wages of sin are death!

Yet no one ever sinned but he expected big profit from it. But instead, he has seen only the black mischief and red iniquity which he sowed. God is never mocked. From the beginning of the world, it has been ordained that whatever a man sows, that he shall reap.

Prayer.—Lord of the harvest, choose our seed for us and direct our sowing. Drive the devil from our land. Become our Blessed Partner, with Thy rain and sun and the fruitful elements of the soil and air. Then, when the angel reapers come, they will carry off a glorious harvest to fill the barns of eternity. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ENTERPRISING AGE.

"Even to old age I am He, and even to hoar hairs I will carry you."—Isa. 46:1-7.

It is said that when the British War Office decided Quebec must be taken, they called in the generals one by one and proposed the plan. The oldest of them said it could not be done. The middle-aged declared the task was so hard that it was almost impossible. Every one of them declined the commission. At last they came to Wolfe, the youngest of all the generals. He said, "I will do it or die in the attempt."

This is thought to illustrate the characteristic qualities of youth and age, but the distinction is largely traditional. For every fervid and daring young man, you may find a coldly prudent and crassly conservative youth, and for every fearful and over-prudent old man you may find one of dashing and imperious ardor. Those whose early years were with God find that He is the same even to old age. Courage and confidence do not grow less with the years, but rather increase.

Prayer.—Thou, our King, art our reliance. We will begin our days with Thee, sure that Thou wilt go with us all the way. We will set out with Thee on the road of the morning, certain of reaching with firm step the goal of the evening. "All the way our Saviour leads us." Amen.

SATURDAY.

STRONG BELIEF, STRONG LIFE.

"The word of God, which also worketh in you that believe."—Thess. 2:13-20.

Paul, the apostle of faith, is also and of necessity the apostle of works. He constantly links together belief and life. If men believe in Christ, they will work for Christ. And this is not merely a matter of the head, it is a matter also of the heart. Men are constantly deprecating what they call "mere intellectual belief," when there is no such thing to deprecate. If one could have a mere intellectual belief that twice two is four, and then deliberately add two and two to make five, he would prove that he was an arithmetical infidel.

Let us, then, test our beliefs by our deeds and feelings. Do we think we believe that Christ is the Son of the Almighty God, the Saviour from sin, the Lover of good and truth and beauty, and at the same time do we live ugly lives, selfish lives, false lives, lives that are sad and lonely? Thereby we shall know that we have no such belief as we supposed we had.

Prayer.—Lord, we believe; help Thou our unbeleif. Perfect our beliefs. Render them vital in our living. Help us out of assumed beliefs into felt beliefs. May we not cheat ourselves, making ourselves the victims of silent hypocrisy. In Thy name. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE ONE FOUNDATION.

"The priests that bare the ark of the covenant of Jehovah stood firm on dry ground in the midst of Jordan."—Josh. 3:14-17.

One of the worst traffic jams that ever occurred in Boston was caused by a heavily laden coal truck which broke clear through the newly laid asphalt on one of the busiest and narrowest of the crowded city's down-town streets. It was three hours before the truck could be extricated, and for more than an hour traffic in three directions was stalled for many blocks.

The exasperating event pictures what happens in any life which attempts to carry heavy loads of responsibility and labor without securing the firm foundation of faith in Jesus Christ. There is sure to be a breakdown in such a life, when all its operations come to an embarrassing stand-still. On the other hand, when one's life is underlaid by sound reasoning, solid belief, and assured faith, then its working is steady and swift. The mishaps of life do not distract it, the frets and fumes of life do not drag upon it, but it rejoices in constant advance and sure results. God's people know the full meaning of the promise, "Underneath are the everlasting arms."

Prayer.—Thou art our firmness, O God! Thou art our stability, O Son of God. Thou art from everlasting to everlasting, and Thy children abide constantly in Thee. For Thy wheels are never clogged and Thy swiftness is never stayed. Amen.

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

THE UNIVERSALITY OF PRAYER.

BY REV. FLOYD BALLARD.

Jesus was a man of prayer. He believed in the efficacy of prayer. He Himself prayed and He taught others to pray also. Christian people have been slow to recognize the authority of Jesus as a teacher, but slower still have we been to follow His teachings. "Master, we know Thou art a great Teacher," are the words spoken to Jesus in recognition of His authority. But did Jesus really mean it when He said, "Men ought always to pray?" It is no longer a question of pedagogical authority, but of our willingness to obey.

It is not necessary for one to look long or far to discover that phase of our religious life called prayer is being sadly neglected. The loss of attendance at Church prayer services, the disappearance of the family altar, and the apparent neglect of private devotion which grows increasingly more serious in a world with so complex a civilization, are all evidences of disobedience to the teaching of Jesus. Shall we continue to neglect our prayer life and thus conclude that the suggestion which Jesus gave to the world while on earth has no vital relation to the present age? Shall we say that prayer is merely subjective in its effects, and only as it produces certain psychological effects on the mind of the individual does it become vital? Is prayer something with which we can control God at will and bring to pass anything we may desire? These and other questions, equally as grave, face the individual in a modern world. What shall our answer be?

In search for an answer to the issue raised, let us look first into the history of prayer. Jesus did not instigate a movement of prayer. The prophets that preceded Him prayed, Abraham prayed, Jacob prayed, Elijah prayed, the priest that conducted the services in the temple prayed. Jesus was not, then, the instigator of prayer. He only came to fulfill the law of prayer. Sabatier said, "The history of prayer is the history of religion." Prayer is as old as the nations of the earth. It is an age-long custom. It is found everywhere, in all ages, and among all people. The heathen prayed, the Hindu, the Mohammedan, the followers of Zoraster all prayed. The Christian people of the earth do not have a monopoly on prayer. It is the common heritage of all mankind.

In the second place, prayer not only had its origin outside of Jesus, but it is a natural phenomena of life. James the psychologist, in speaking of prayer, says, "The reason we pray is simply that we cannot help praying." Prayer originated then with a first cause, which we would name God. It is an instinct of man. Therefore, we have no reason to believe it will cease to function in practice. Man will never outgrow prayer. Along with increased knowledge and understanding of God and the working of the divine will, will come an increase in the practice of prayer. Jesus doubtless had proven the worth of prayer in His own experience when He said, "Men ought always to pray."

Jesus was not primarily a historian, but He knew the history of human nature. He knew the value of prayer to the individual and to society. Jesus was not primarily a psychologist, but He could perceive of the psychological reformation wrought in the individual who prayed without ceasing. Jesus was not primarily a philosopher, but he understood the nature of prayer and practiced a philosophy of it we could well afford to emulate.

In the next place, looking at prayer in the light of the past and its relation to man, we find it is latent in the life of every one. Men may and do abandon prayer for a while, but when some crisis arises they immediately resort to prayer. During the recent World War, a striking example of this was demonstrated. Both individuals and society united in prayer for a common end. The Church held special prayer services, mothers prayed for their sons, wives uttered petitions for their husbands, fathers knelt before the throne of prayer as never before. It may take the scene of the garden of Gethsemane to drive men to prayer, but when it comes they, without hesitation, yield. It seems to be spontaneous in their nature. We do not stop to question the value of it or to analyze the function of prayer; we simply kneel, and "out of the depths we cry unto God."

If prayer is then latent in human nature, and we acknowledge its naturalness, why do we neglect to pray? The fact that prayer is a tendency, we are prone to let it become spasmodic. Jesus, doubtless, had in mind this problem when He said, "Men ought always to pray." The tendency to pray at times is not sufficient. There is great danger in neglect to discipline, to develop and to understand these tendencies. There is the danger of prayer becoming a selfish motive, unintelligent, occasional, spasmodic, a cry in time of need. The need in Jesus' day was that men might always pray. It is the need in our day.

Finally, looking at prayer from the viewpoint of history, it has been practiced, adopted and urged upon others. Jesus, too, followed this course. First, He practiced it daily in His own life; second, He adopted prayer as a practice for those who would follow Him, and last He urged prayer upon others. This has been the doctrine of the Church. Prayer is included as a part of each and every service of worship conducted by the Church. It has been adopted by both Catholic and Protestant; it is the practice of the Jew as well as the Gentile. It has been urged upon others through the teaching agencies of the Church. It has been accepted as a part of our religious heritage with little or no consciousness of its real value. The time is now ripe when prayer should be reinterpreted in the light of a scientific age and not accepted as mere tradition. It should continue in practice, but on a sound basis. It should be adopted, but its adoption will be based on a scientific, psychological and philosophical understanding of the true meaning of prayer as a spiritual dynamic. It should be urged upon others, but we can do it only in so far as we can demonstrate by our own prayer life that we have taken Jesus at His word and believe it to be the only true philosophy of prayer to follow. Unless we can demonstrate by our own acts which are stimulated by and through a life of prayer, and thus prove that prayer is more than tradition, more than a tendency, more than a form and more than a mystical communion with some invisible being we call Deity, prayer will cease to function in these realms.

Christ loved the religion that prayed and glowed in the closet, and that radiated its influence out into the street; but a mere street-religion He hated.

HISTORY OF SUFFOLK CHURCH.

Church as the gift from Mr. John T. Griffin, a banker, of Portsmouth, Va., and a great admirer of Dr. Wellons. The portrait was painted by Mr. Mac Robbins Long, son of Judge B. F. Long, of Statesville, N. C.

Many individual and union revival meetings have been held in this Church, from which many members have been received into the Churches of Suffolk and much real spiritual value added to the life of the city.

In the early history of the Church, the record showed male members present and then females; sometimes men, and then women present. Members were arraigned before the Church for nonpayment of dues, dancing in public and drinking. Studied in all its aspects, the Church of today is far ahead of those early days when rigid rules took the place of Christian atmosphere and public influence over men in all the walks of life. Seventy years is the normal life of man, but not of the Church; the older it is, the better and stronger it should be.

The choir of this Church has always been efficient and faithful, which has added much to its worship and permanent growth. The psalms are in the middle of the Bible and the choir is in the heart of the Church. Praise ye the Lord. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

When this letter reaches you, you will probably have had your Thanksgiving dinners. We hope you had a real good dinner and enjoyed it. We trust you enjoyed it better because you had already contributed or that you have fully decided to make a liberal contribution to help make the little children in your Orphanage happy at this Thanksgiving season. They have appealed to you because of the fact they need your help. The Orphanage needs ten thousand dollars as a special Thanksgiving offering. Will you do your part in raising this amount?

Other denominations are very liberal in their thankofferings each year in the support of their orphanages, and send them many thousands of dollars to feed and clothe the fatherless. Let the Christian Church at this Thanksgiving season show their love by their liberality.

Our Churches can contribute this amount and be the richer. Let every Church member make a liberal offering and the amount will be raised. Our richness of joy in the next world will not come to us from the wealth we may accumulate and leave behind; but it will come from the good use we made of it in helping others. Have we used what God has placed in our care as we should, or have we let self come first? How about it?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

OBITUARIES.

LONG.

Joseph Thomas Long passed from time to eternity at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. A. Riddle, Raleigh, N. C., November 13, 1930, in his 84th year. He is survived by two children, a son and a daughter. He was a member of New Providence Christian Church and had been for a number of years.

The funeral services were conducted from the home of his son, Mr. J. Dolph Long, Graham, N. C. The writer was in charge of the services, assisted by Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Opie, Burlington, N. C., and Rev. Dr. J. E. Kirbye, Raleigh, N. C. His body was laid to rest in the New Providence Christian Church Cemetery. A number of friends and relatives were present and the floral tributes were beautiful. May the dear Master comfort those who mourn.

P. H. FLEMING.

Burlington, N. C.

NICHOLAS.

The town of Virgilina and the surrounding community have recently experienced great sorrow and an irreparable loss in the death of Josie Tuck Nicholas, who died at the Hill Top Sanitarium on the afternoon of Sunday, October 5, 1930, after an illness of several weeks. She was the daughter of the late Dr. John and Flora Tuck, of Virgilina, Va. Her husband, Charles H. Nicholas, a veteran of the Spanish-American War, died several years ago in Danville, Va.

Mrs. Nicholas is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Hope Nicholas Adams, wife of Dr. Adams, of Winchester, Va.; two grandchildren, Keister and Octalonie; one brother, L. O. Tuck, of Louisville, Ky., and three sisters, Mrs. C. A. Brooks and Miss Nora Tuck, of Virgilina, and Miss Bessie Tuck, of Richmond, Va.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. Bray and Johnson, of the M. E. Church, and Rev. E. R. Harris, of the Baptist Church, from Calvary M. E. Church, Danville, Va., and interment was in the North Danville Cemetery by the side of her husband and infant daughter. A number of relatives and friends from Virgilina and Danville attended the service. The floral designs were numerous and beautiful.

The deceased was my next-door neighbor for fourteen years, and as such there was none better. She was kind, generous and sympathetic towards all. She experienced continually that higher joy of giving to and doing for others. She loved the beautiful things of life.

C. E. NEWMAN.

STRADER.

Thomas H. Strader, youngest son of Adam M. and Temple Ann Strader, was born in Alamance County, N. C., July 16, 1893, and departed this life on November 1, 1930, being 37 years of age. He was ill only a few days. His death was a great shock to his family, his Church and the entire community.

He is survived by his wife, two little girls—Annie Ruth and Helen Marie—and by two brothers, Frank J. and Jerry D., and by one sister, Mrs. Wesley D. Lee, all of Burlington. He became a Christian when only a boy, uniting with the Burlington Christian Church, in which he spent his entire Church life. He was a most worthy, loyal, active member of the Church, interested in every department of the work. A regular attendant upon the preaching of the gospel, faithful in Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and in the mid-week services of the Church. He was superintendent of msisions in the Sunday School. As a man, he was quiet, unassuming, but firm in his faith and a great believer in prayer. He has a Christian home. The family altar was a part of his daily program. A good friend and a devoted husband and father.

His funeral was held in the Burlington Christian Church by his pastor, the writer, and was attended by a great concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. His body was laid to rest in Pine Hill Cemetery.

As his soul rests in peace, may the grief-stricken family be comforted in their deep sorrow by the presence of Christ and the hope of the resurrection unto life eternal.

G. O. LANKFORD.

We need to watch for prayers as well as for answers to our prayers. It needs as much wisdom to pray rightly as it does faith to receive the answers to our prayers.—A. B. Simpson.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

RITENOUR.

Arthur C. Ritenour was born May 2, 1880, and died at his home, near Dry Run, September 29, 1930, aged 50 years, 4 months, and 27 days. Bro. Ritenour was a kind, good man, a member of the Dry Run Christian Church, having united with the Church during my early ministry there about nineteen years ago. With a calm faith in God, he approached the end, which he knew for several years could not be far off. He is survived by his aged mother, six children, two brothers, and two sisters. Funeral services at the home, September 30, 1930.

A. W. ANDES.

PICKARD.

The sudden death of Mrs. Samuel M. Pickard came as a shock to her friends and relatives, September 22, 1930. Mrs. Pickard was born April 6, 1869. She was the daughter of W. W. Boswell and Mary E. Boswell and spent her early life in Caswell County. On January 19, 1888, she married Samuel M. Pickard, who died several years ago. They lived in Burlington for a number of years before moving to Chapel Hill.

Mrs. Pickard was a faithful member of the Christian Church. All with whom she came in contact knew her for what she was—a loving mother, a generous friend, a kind and charitable neighbor. The good she did and the results of her life live after her.

A real loss has been suffered by her death, and to her children—Mrs. P. H. Perry, Mrs. Grady Leonard, Miss Maggie Pickard, and Mr. Charles Pickard—we express our sincere sympathy.

MRS. W. M. PUGH.

The writer knows of no one more genuinely loved and respected by more nearly all of one's acquaintances than was Mrs. Nannie Boswell Pickard. We who knew her shall continue to rejoice in the abiding influence of her wonderfully sweet and godly life. She was a Christian in spirit and in deed. Revs. Eugene Olive, Excell Rozelle and W. D. Moss, pastors of the Chapel Hill Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian Churches, respectively, assisted the writer in the funeral service.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Mrs N T Farmer

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

MRS. HILLIS PASSES.—

The widow of Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, former pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, died in Bronxville, N. Y., on November 13th. Mrs. Hillis was an active worker and leader in Congregational mission affairs up to the time of her death. Her book, "The American Woman in Her Home," published in 1911, had a remarkably wide sale. The books of her distinguished husband were written in classical style and were read by a wide clientele. The workers fall, but the work goes on.

LARGE MISSION GIFT.—

A mission gift of $50,000 by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pfeiffer, of New York City, as an expression of friendship between the United States and South America, has been made to the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions for the erection of a dormitory at Colegio Americano Ward, i. e., Ward American College, Buenos Aires, Argentina. If some of our people will open their hearts and purses with similar generosity for the million-dollar endowment of our own college, it will make the constituency of the college happy.

MARRIAGE SACRED OR SECULAR.—

Statistics for the first half of this year show that of the 149,080 marriages in Italy during that period, 144,121 were performed by priests under the sanctity of the Church. Only 4,886 took place before a civil magistrate, fifty were performed by rabbis, and 23 by ministers of Protestant denominations. Marriage is either a religious institution or it is not. It is sanctioned by religion or it is not. It should be considered as one of the most sacred and most binding obligations of those who enter into marriage, and when it is so considered and so conducted there will be fewer divorces.

WORLD ALLIANCE.—

Dr. William P. Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City, was reelected president of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches at the annual convention held in Washington, D. C.,; Dr. S. Parks Cadman, of Brooklyn, Mr. Clifford W. Barnes of Chicago, and Judge Florence E. Allen of Ohio Supreme Court were elected vice-presidents. With these great leaders at the helm, the ship of international friendship should sail to all seas and visit all lands and establish the kingdom of peace on earth. Christianity alone will solve the problem of world peace.

PEACE vs. WAR.—

On Armistice Day, Coffeyville, Kansas, conducted a celebration service by conducting a peace contest in oratory on world peace, and the close was a climax in the reading of the pact for the renunciation of war. The legion offered the prize for the winning oration. The college furnished the speakers. The Church created the service, supplied the inspiration and the materials and secured the publicity. There could not have been a more fitting service held as memorial service for Armistice Day. All Christian colleges and Churches could better enter such a celebration than to encourage further way by athletic contests.

MEDICAL MISSION.—

The Presbyterian Church is creating a great medical mission in Pittsburgh, Pa., and have just broken the land for two units in the plan. It was decided to spend at once about $2,500,000. About $500,000 for the eye and ear hospital, two millions for the general hospital. There plans for the two hospitals are part of a general plan involving ultimately an investment of from six to fourteen million dollars. Applied Christianity is what the world needs today, and that kind will convince the world of the reality of the message of Christ. He says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

RURAL CHURCHES.—

Bangor Seminary has established a new rural department, with Ralph S. Adams in charge. He was formerly superintendent of the department of country life of the Home Mission Board of the Reformed Church in the United States. The colleges and theological seminaries do well to prepare the recruits of the Church for the needs of rural Churches. Most of the preparation and most of the writers of books for the preparation of the leaders of our Churches seem to give more attention to workers for city than rural Churches. We need to save the rural Churches and the rural people. With us, the rural Church is vital to our future and the rural people furnish the vital strength of our city Churches.

GRANGE DRY.—

At the annual convention of the National Grange, held in New York, beginning November 12th, Louis J. Tabor, master of the grange, said that the eighteenth amendment is the greatest moral reform of the country and asserted that the Grange stands absolutely dry. If all the fraternities, secret societies, organizations and Churches which teach temperance as one of their moral teachings would stand squarely in support of the eighteenth amendment, there would be no doubt that the few wet forces that would be left would not have enough hope for a change to put up a fight. Too many teach one thing publicly and practice another privately. Conventionality and respectability often muddle reality in the practice of our professed principles.

FEDERAL COUNCIL OFFERS AID.—

The industrial relations secretary of the Federal Council, James Myers, offered Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the National Unemployment Committee, the aid and council of the Churches in a document presented on November 12th. The Federal Council is understood in this document to have a series of special recommendations as to how individual congregations throughout the country might be brought into line with the government's emergency program. Christian workers, where there are large numbers of unemployed, should write for copies of this document and make practical application. A hungry man cannot support his family on theory about religion. He needs religion applied immediately. Application is more convincing to the hungry man than logic as to the reality of religion.

MEN'S WORK.—

The International Congress on Men's Work, to be limited in attendance to 1,000 delegates, appointed by twenty-two denominations, will meet at Gibson Hotel, Cincinnati, December 11-12th. A half-day will be given to the following subjects: "The Place of the Church in Modern Life," "Religious Movements Among Men," "Programs for Men in Local Churches," and "The Meaning of Christ in Personal Life." It is hoped that the Congregational-Christian Church will have representatives there and reap the benefit of these discussions. If the Churches can really enlist the men of the Church in some worth-while work, as the women are in many of our Churches, the Church will become a wide-awake institution. Why may the men of the Church not become as wide awake in religion as they are in the civitan societies?

HOLY SUNDAY.—

How shall we spend Sunday? Newark, N. J., is entering upon a new idea. A newark newspaper announces that the first bull fight to be held in the United States will take place there on Sunday, November 30th. A fighting ring built in the baseball park with a diameter of 150 feet, and four blooded bulls, imported from Madrid, will be on hand to entertain the spectators. A native of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has recently returned to this country from Spain, after unparalleled triumphs in the bull rings there, will have charge. The Brooklyn bull-fighter will be assisted by two Spaniards. There will be the requisite number of horses to be gored. Sunday football, golf, prize-fighting and other brutalities are not sufficient. Which way are we headed anyway? The Church and the Christian religion and the Church college have a great task to perform in cleaning up the morals of the American people.

NOTES-PERSONALS

It is pleasant to report that Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, the beloved pastor of Elon Community Church, who has been ill for four weeks, is now convalescent.

Rev. J. H. Warren, pastor of the Ocean View Church, makes a hopeful report of his first month at Ocean View, there being a considerable increase in Sunday School and Church attendance. The opportunities at Ocean View are very promising, and the outlook, Bro. Warren thinks, is hopeful.

Order your "Peloubet's Select Notes" or "Tarbell's Teachers' Guide, 1931." These are adapted for use in primary teachers' classes as well as junior, intermediate, and senior classes. Send check with order to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

Hopewell Christian Church has extended a unanimous call to Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., now of North Girard, Pa. Dr. Kendall is no stranger to the South, having become well acquainted with our Southern constituency while pastor of our Burlington Church, where he made many friends.

Superintendent C. D. Johnston, circulation manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, advises that now is a mighty good time for a few hundred good folks, whose subscription to THE SUN has expired, to renew. They need THE SUN and THE SUN needs them, and the printer must have his money. Please renew.

Dr. Daniel Poling, head of the Christian Endeavors of the United States, but perhaps better known because of the Sunday afternoon broadcast under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches, spoke to an appreciative audience on Monday, the 24th, in the Richmond City Auditorium. The First Christian Sunday School orchestra gave a half-hour concert preceding his address, and the chorus singing was under the direction of Mr. Baker, of our Newport News Church.

The Suffolk Church had a great day on Sunday, November 23rd. It was the celebration of the seventieth anniversary of the Church, which was founded in 1860. The succinct history of the Church, as presented by Dr. Staley in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN and read by him on the anniversary, tells but little of the contribution this Church has made to our denomination, to righteousness and to the kingdom of our Lord. There are liberal and loyal souls, numbers of them, in this good Church, who never fail to respond liberally to the needs and the demands of the various enterprises of the Church. In it are some of our ablest and most loyal and progressive laymen, and their influence is felt throughout the denomination. Dr. Staley's abundant and fruitful life has made its impress on that great people, and they in turn have helped to make Dr. Staley the liberal and resourceful man that he is. In Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, a most competent and beloved successor as pastor has been found, and the loving spirit of confidence and esteem between the pastor and the pastor-emeritus is heartening and inspiring to all who know them and love the way of righteousness. The Suffolk Church, pastors and people do great things for God and humanity, because they keep their eye and their heart fixed on the great, good objectives for which the Church militant is laboring, toward which the Church triumphant moves.

WINCHESTER, VA.

The Woman's Missionary Society held the annual thankoffering service the fourth Sunady evening in November. Rev. Wayne Bowers was present, on invitation of the society, and preached a splendid sermon on "The Word," using as his text John 17:17: "Sanctify them through Thy truth: Thy word is truth."

Mr. Bowers was for several years a missionary in Spain, under appointment of the American Board. He gave several illustrations to show the general ignorance of the Bible on the part of the people. He also showed the effect of the Word when read and understood, emphasizing the great need of missionary effort in that country.

He also spoke interestingly of the work of the Congregational Church in general, stating that the American Board was the first board organized in America.

Our people show an increasing interest, we think, in missionary effort. We are, of course, far from the goal, both in interest and achievement, but we are moving forward, which fact seems encouraging.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

A SURPRISE.

On November 8th we held our last quarterly conference at Ingram Church, Va. The reports from the various departments revealed that the Church was getting along real well. The deacons stated in their report that we had the largest Sunday School in the history of the Church. This was very encouraging to all and especially to the pastor. I may say we are hoping, in the near future, to have four new Sunday School rooms added to the Church.

At the close of the conference, the pastor was invited out to view his car. It was a great surprise when I reached the car to find it filled as full as could be with a large pounding. We will not attempt to enumerate the many things we had, but will say that we had an abundant supply of just such things as one would need to supply an empty pantry. This was one of the largest poundings the pastor has ever received, notwithstanding we have received some large ones in the past.

I want to take this means of thanking all the good folks at Ingram for their kind remembrance of Mrs. Sorrell, O'Kelly and myself. May God richly bless each of them and add to them daily such things as may be needed.

THE FOE PROHIBITION FACES.

A small group of American multimillionaires, actuated by a desire to evade their proper share of the financial burdens of the Federal government, constitute the newest and most powerful foe of prohibition, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, told the Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Oxford, recently.

"While we still face, on the battle line, the old foes of prohibition, including the former brewers, the old distillers, the saloon gang of former days, the barflies of the underworld, as well as the more respectable friends of the old liquor traffic, these forces, weakened as they have been in the public mind by a century of education and enlightenment, could not accomplish much in direct opposition to the present policy of government," he said.

"These anti-social forces in recent years, however, have been augmented by a half-dozen multimillionaires, interested from another point of view, thus tending to submerge the liquor issue in the larger issue as to whether a small oligarchy of a few multimillionaires, controlling vast business interests, may dictate political action to the Federal government and determine the nation's policy on a great social problem.

"The evidence uncovered by the United States Senate lobby investigation committee and the testimony of the wet leaders in that investigation, demonstrate beyond a doubt that the eighteenth amendment and the prohibition law are making marvelous headway in actually decreasing the manufacture, sale and consumption of beverage alcohol, and that this fact is responsible for the tremendous propaganda efforts of this small group of financial wizards. The clear objective appears to be either to coerce or subsidize the press, to blind the public with a barrage of wet propaganda, and to compel great business enterprises even in matters of social welfare to do the bidding of these few men who control great systems of industry and finance.

"This evidence throws a flood of light on the recent extreme wetness of certain national weekly magazines, which, in their earlier years, were stanch advocates of prohibition, and which have been household weeklies in the homes of preachers, teachers and leading professional and business men throughout the nation.

"The novel and interesting idea which these barons have fostered is to have the income tax of great corporations taken from their broad shoulders and placed upon the backs of the industrial workers of the nation. The fact that those industrial workers would need to spend for beer alone probably $5,000,000,000 annually in order that the government might collect such a tax is a mere incident for these wizards of finance, as is also the whole question of the terrific indirect economic cost to the nation of such a policy and the general social and political consequences thereof.

"These few men associated together today are said to control forty billions of dollars of American wealth and industries employing more than three million men and women. Incidentally, it appears that one of these corporations has perfected the largest and finest distilling equipment in the world, which equipment might easily be called to extra service if either the government sale system or a license system could be substituted for prohibition. No brewer, distiller or saloon-keeper in the old days ever more definitely personified the spirit of greed.

"Tyranny in popular government ofttimes makes its entry with a loud voice, shouting in patriot tones and demanding that the people shall have their liberties. William Pitt understood this as well as the science of government when he said, 'Where law ends, tyranny begins.' "

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.: On Thanksgiving evening an augmented choir gave a beautiful rendition of Haydn's "Creation."

HOLLY HILL, FLA.: Under the leadership of the pastor, Dr. Edgar S. Rothrock, the Young People's Society has been reorganized and is having fine attendance and interest. Thirty-eight were present last Sunday evening.

DR. NEIL McQUARRIE left his daughter's home in Atlanta, November 25th, for Deland, Fla., where he will visit another daughter and try to recover his health sufficiently to enable him to go on with his work at Columbus about January the first.

MR. LEWEY ROBISON, Church editor of the Birmingham Post and a member of our Birmingham United Church, was elected to the State Legislature at the recent election. He came from the parish in South Alabama, of which Rev. N. A. Long is pastor.

REV. J. F. BLACKBURN is visiting several of the South Georgia Congregational Churches these two weeks in the interest of missions. Incidentally, he is fraternizing with many of his old friends with whom he has been associated for about thirty-five years in Church work.

A NUMBER of the Alabama Congregational Churches are making earnest and sacrificial efforts these hard times to raise the missionary apportionment. We feel that they will not fail, even in this difficult year, when credit has been cut off by banks and crops have brought so little.

REV. EDWIN E. WHITE, of Pleasant Hill, Tenn., believes that deeds are as important as words when the community-house unit of his Community Church needs completion. Recent days have seen him toiling in his overalls on the building, in company with the workmen.

JAMES T. LUNSFORD, of Hackleburg, preached recently at the United Church, Birmingham, and about twenty-five of his old friends were out to greet him and to hear him. Brother Lunsford is an important figure in Hackleburg, being chairman of the school board and engaged in several community movements.

PRES. E. F. GREEN, of Country Life Academy, Star, N. C., was recently called home from his work in the North on account of the severe illness of Mrs. Green. There seemed to have been a shock. She was unconscious for a long while. It was reported that Mrs. Green was some better and there are hopes for her recovery.

REV. J. A. GANN, while teaching in the Hackleburg schools, has been supplying our Church there. The Rev. James P. Lunsford, of this Church, made a spirited campaign for Congress during the last election, but was with the party receiving the lesser number of votes. At one time, his prospect for success in the campaign seemed good.

THE FRIENDS of Rev. J. P. Blackwell, of the Indian Creek Church, Ala., sympathize with him in the loss of his wife, who had been declining in health since spring. He recently supplied for Rev. M. L. Thrasher, at Antioch Church, where he was formerly pastor, and was notified of the sudden death of his wife by telegram as he was preparing to speak. He was prostrated by the sad event.

DR. GEORGE MORGAN WARD, who for over thirty years, has been the pastor of Poinciana Chapel, at Palm Beach, and was formerly president of Rollins College, is spending a few weeks at his summer home in Tampa and recently preached at the Tampa Church. Dr. Ward returns for the season at Poinciana Chapel, but during part of the season Dr. Hugh Black, of Union Seminary, will preach.

A NEW CHURCH has been organized by the Rev. M. L. Hargraves just south of Haleyville, Ala., and near his home. It will be known as the Rocky Creek Congregational Church. One of its foundation principles is to give an offering in the Sunday School once each month to missions. It was a pretty sight to see two of the men who were to become Church officers immersed in the pond, and to witness the installation of deacons.

WINTER PARK: Three hundred and twenty-nine Christian Endeavorers, representing the Orlando district, held an enthusiastic meeting recently at the Congregational Church, Winter Park. Marcus Fagg gave the address on Saturday night. Dr. Clarence A. Vincent preached the sermon on Sunday morning, and Dr. Karl Lehman gave the address on Sunday night. These addresses and sermon were vigorous and stirring and dealt with the vital matters of character and relationships of today.

A MISSIONARY TEAM, consisting of Rev. Walter Metcalf, of Tampa, and Superintendent Edwin C. Gillette, D. D., visited Avon Park and St. Petersburg, in each instance the occasion being the annual thankoffering meeting promoted by the Woman's Missionary Society. At Avon Park, there was also given a very interesting missionary pageant, composed by Miss Alice Davidson, a member of the Church. Miss Davidson was not present, as her mother's funeral had been held in the Church that afternoon.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.: Among the many union Thanksgiving services held, one of special interest was the service at Jacksonville, held at the Jewish Temple, in which the following Churches united: Congregational, First Baptist, First Methodist, Snyder Memorial Methodist (North), Jewish Temple, and Uniter Liberal. The sermon was preached by Dr. E. O. Heath, pastor of the First Methodist Church. These union services have been an annual affair for a number of years, and credit for them is largely due to Rabbi Kaplan, of the Jewish Temple.

PRINCIPAL SAMUEL ELDER, of Pleasant Hill Academy, in Tennessee, is a man of fine family traditions and culture, who has left the Harvard circle to work on the Cumberland Plateau. Some one who was commiserating him about his sacrifice of advantage, learned that he did not consider it any sacrifice at all, but rather a pleasure to be working for people to whom he might be useful. He is bringing his fine personality to bear upon the student life. One of his plans is to introduce to the student body some of the citizens of Tennessee who have achieved success and to have them tell the Pleasant Hill group of their work.

A LARGER PARISH: The Churches of Macedonia, Trinity, Sardis and Liberty are working out a plan of grouping which promises to make this a unique and outstanding field of cooperating Churches. It is hoped and believed that Duncan's Creek will soon find it possible to join this group, but at present it is hardly free to do so. When, and if, she does, this parish will constitute a star of five points, and when a strong man is chosen for pastor, there will begin a work of untold possibilities. The pastor-at-large, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, recently visited all these Churches with Mr. James Mahaffey, of Macedonia.

ALABAMA Congregationalists are much pleased at State-wide union with the Christians in the Alabama Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches. The Congregational local associations will be carried on as before, and the Christians will have an additional meeting, as their former Conference will function after the manner of the Congregational Associations, while they will, in addition, have the State meeting with the larger group. As business is chiefly done in the local meeting, the programs under way can be carried out as usual. A happy development of the situation is the acceptance of the Christian Church, Dingler's Chapel, as a part of his circuit by the Rev. Joseph Bean, Congregationalist. Rev. J. H. Hughes, pastor of the Pisgah Christian Church, must have been surprised and pleased when he was asked to take over the leadership of the Mountain Grove Church, of Steppville. The local people chose approved men who were nearby in these fraternal adjustments.

COLLEGESIDE CHURCH.

It was a great shock to the congregation of Collegeside Church, Nashville, to realize that their beloved first pastor, Dr. William E. Barton, had been stricken by illness and could not return to lead them. The university atmosphere was agreeable to Dr. Barton. Numbers of the college people from this leading intellectual center of the Southeast had been attracted by Dr. Barton and pleased by his strong messages. Among them was a newspaper-man who said that Collegeside Church was as great in its way as any institution in Nashville. It was no small achievement to bring this movement into activity, but the leader and the band of devoted Church-folks, largely from the faculty of Vanderbilt University, saw victory as the result of their efforts.

Now they have called to the pastorate of the Church, Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, of the First Church, Washington, D. C. We think of Washington as a part of the Southeast on account of Dr. Bloom's "Washington Window," and also because of Dr. Pierce's fraternal service in our area and in particular in the Carolinas. His fraternal spirit wins him friends instantly. A note of his service of ten years in Washington, where he received President Coolidge into the membership of his Church, is given separately. The Collegeside Church of Nashville and the fine Tennessee fellowship are glad to welcome this leader of national reputation, significant accomplishment, and fraternal spirit.

Our whole life should be one of thanksgiving. Thanks for all God's blessings is only just tribute. We may be sorrowful; but notwithstanding that fact, we ought to be thankful. There is no greater blessing than a thankful heart. We owe a debt of gratitude which we should always be paying, never ceasing to our latest breath.—From Thoughts for the Thoughtful.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XVII.

S. S. Minnekahda, Saturday, July 19, 1930.

Dr. Smith went out before 6 A. M. to see the sunrise. A cloud obscured, but the reflection and coloring, he says, are wonderful. We are in my room talking at 7:30. Of a sudden, I said, "Smith, our boat has stopped and is now standing still. Something has happened." And then we heard a sharp order ring out from the captain's quarters high above deck; then the yell of seamen taking up the order: "Yonder she is; down with the lifeboats!" Immediately, I say, "Smith, the lady who sat in front of us at 4 o'clock tea yesterday has leaped overboard; I told you that woman was upset and not herself." Smith threw his slumber-robe on and, in slippers, rushed out on deck. I could hear the quick call of seamen. I heard the buoy and the lifeboat splash in the water, and then all was still. I kept my bed and awaited in quiet results and report. In twenty minutes Smith was back. "Yes, the nurse in charge turned a second to get some article for her patient, the woman we saw at tea yesterday, and out the door that poor distraught young woman dashed, and then the long leap from the big ship's deck into the blue deep, more than 1,000 miles out at sea." They have hauled her in, Smith reports. The rescue work of captain and seamen was quick, heroic, superb. The captain called out the orders from his high position. The seamen —able, trained, fearless and capable—worked like courageous desperadoes, inspired by a sense of saving a life and also by the command of their captain. They reached the lady, still floating, hand out to her an oar, and she lays hold of it. Slowly, gently, they draw her to the side of the dory, and then with strong arms and gentle hands, grasp the helpless creature by the arm and hauled her over into the lifeboat. Four quick oars, like swan wings, bring the dory to the side of our great ship. The strong rope ladder goes down from deck to sea level. Two able seamen, the rescuers, take the limp form of the would-be suicide in their arms and begin the long and perilous ascent on that rope ladder to safety. She is laid on deck, still breathing. Doctor and nurses take charge, and soon she is in her room, dry clothed and seemingly in her right mind. Our great boat begins to quiver again with life, and slowly but steadily regains her speed. "It was all a sight to look upon," said Smith. "I have heard of such, but never before looked upon a rescuing party at their perilous work." What a state of mind one must be in to make a leap for death like that from the high deck of a great ship into the ocean of infinite depths, with sea monsters, greedy of mouth and hungry of appetite, all about. Our good captain says he has been sailing the seas for forty years, but this is the first person he has rescued alive. The sea happened to be calm and there were no sharks or whales about.

I am writing in my diary at 6:30 P. M. What a wonderful day this has been! Not enough surge of the sea to make the good ship quiver, still a good breeze to keep one comfortable in the shade.

We came on board one week ago today, and while we have covered about 2,400 miles, we have yet 800 to go. But the sea has been so friendly, the passengers so agreeable, and the sailing and the breezes so wonderful, the food so splendid, the music so great, the good books in the library so abundant and to one's taste (I have read a book a day since coming aboard), that our cup of gratitude is filled to overflowing, and the heart lifts itself naturally in gratitude to God who cares for people on the deep as He cares for them and provides for their comfort and happiness everywhere. I marvel constantly at the sea—so blue, so boundless, so big, so majestic. It baffles one to try to comprehend it. On all sides, and far away, just the blue deep below; then the horizon and the blue sky above. The sunset now is glorious, indescribable, and too engaging and absorbing to give further time now to writing, even in a beloved diary.

S. S. Minnekahda, Sat., P. M., July 19.

The ship requires, so the captain tells me, thirty-six stokers (firemen) to furnish her twelve great fireboxes and boilers with coal. They work in relays, each eight hours out of the twenty-four, twelve at a time. I went out a while ago on lower deck, and the twelve stokers, smoked, begrimed, and perspiring, were out getting the cool breeze and the balmy sun after having remained shoveling coal in front of a firebox for eight hours. Their work had been far down, even beneath the surface of the sea, where it was hot and where they were unseen and unheard, possibly unthought of by us on the upper decks who were sailing away amid balmy breezes in comfort and in luxury. But the stokers were necessary, and they had done their work and we were the beneficiaries. It goes like that in life. Many, many men and women work away at their irksome and laborious task all out of sight of the bustling, hurrying, pleasure-seeking throngs, unforgotten, unthought of, but they are essential if the wheels of civilization roll on. I have seen people like that in the Church. They do their work of any sort assigned them, from sexton to collector and choir leader, all quietly, unobtrusively and constantly, but they are necessary if the Church is to live and go forward.

These stokers handle with their shovels 3,800 tons of coal on each trip. This coal is bought in London at $1.00 a ton cheaper than it can be bought in the United States, thus the ship effects a saving of $3,800 in buying its coal in London instead of in New York or Boston. It takes 300 men to handle the ship, to keep it in good order and going. They are a busy and an alert crew, and have little time of their own during the hours they are on duty. J. O. A.

WOMEN AND TEMPERANCE.

From the beginning, the mothers and wives of our country have been the most potent factors in the movement for temperance and prohibition. There is possibly no organization outside of the Church in our land today with so noble and worthy a record as that of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. In season and out of season it has labored, often through discouragement, trial and hardship, toward the one end of making our country and our homes safe for their fathers, their husbands and their brothers. In a recent meeting of this honorable organization, the decision was reached to inaugurate an educational campaign to teach and to demonstrate to the youth of the land the benefits of temperance and the evils of drink. Among the items of the program are those of holding a series of twenty regional conferences throughout the country and a world-wide week of prayer for temperance and various other activities which were in vogue before prohibition came, in order to educate the people in the way of temperance and sobriety.

A fund of $10,000,000 is to be called for and raised for advertising and educational purposes. The wets, the bootleggers, the ex-saloon-keepers are donating and spending their millions to counteract the movement toward temperance and sobriety. The wets have been wise in their day and way by urging in season and out of season their propaganda for the abolition of temperance laws. It is high time the drys were doing something in concert to educate the present youth of our country, as millions were educated prior to prohibition days, as to the evils of intemperance and the values of a saloonless land. All hail and success to the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who sounds the clarion call in no uncertain tone and calls for a forward movement in educating the people in the ways of sobriety and order and against the evils of drunkenness and disorder. J. O. A.

EDUCATION.

Among savage nations, education rises no higher than training the body for hunting and war; if further instruction, it comes through the priests of their religion. In Egypt, religion and education went hand in hand. Jews were always noted for education, and it was largely religious. In Greece, the claims of the State were supreme in education, and prominence was given to gymnastics and music.

In early Rome, education was influenced by the home, and when Christianity came in it was taught in the home, and then followed religious schools, and down to the present religion-controlled Roman schools.

Modern education in all its branches had its origin in Christianity. Jesus was the great teacher, and wherever His gospel is taught, education takes root and produces all kinds of schools, though many of them ignore the springs from which they come. This tendency has crept into institutions so quietly that many schools that stand for Christian education have come under the con-

THE C. E. PRAYER MEETING.

By Mrs. W. B. Williams.

(Read before and published by vote of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention.)

The Christian Endeavor Society is a world-wide movement, engaged in recruiting and training young people in service for Christ and the Church. There are four million active members of Christian Endeavor today. They are in every country of the globe. They come from nearly a hundred denominations. They speak hundreds of languages and dialects. But the single aim in which they are united is to live better lives and do better service "for Christ and the Church."

Christian Endeavor is interdenominational, international, and inter-racial. It is a universal youth movement of nearly a half-century standing. Christian Endeavor will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary at San Francisco, Calif., next year, with a "Golden Jubilee in the Golden State at the Golden Gate."

Christian Endeavor has four basic ideals, which are:

1. Confession of Christ.
2. Service for Christ.
3. Loyalty to Christ's Church.
4. Fellowship with all of Christ's people.

The motto of Christian Endeavor is, "For Christ and the Church," and when we take our pledge we say, "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise Him that I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do." Is not this a wonderful way for young people to undertake their work, "trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength"?

Christian Endeavor insists so strongly upon the value of the prayer meeting, because it is the chief and almost the only agency of the Church for accomplishing certain definite and very important results. The results we may gain from the prayer meeting are:

1. Original thought on religious subjects.
2. Open committal to the cause of Christ.
3. The helpful expression of Christian thought and experience.
4. The cultivation of the spirit of worship through public prayer and singing.
5. The guidance of others along all these lines of service and life.

Christian Endeavor has its social and literary features, but it centers around the prayer meeting. Many prayer meetings are not planned; they just happen, and good prayer meetings do not "just happen." The person with the most executive ability should be the society president; most tactful person, chairman of the lookout committee; and the chairman of the social committee should be a young lady, because girls usually have more time to plan socials than men; but the chairman of the prayer-meeting committee should be the most consecrated person in the society.

In order to have a good prayer meeting, it should be well prepared. The chairman of the prayer-meeting committee should appoint the leaders in advance and post their names on the bulletin-board. Each member of the society should be supplied with a topic card, which can be secured from the International Society at $2.25 per hundred. If the person knows when he is to lead and what the topic is, it is a very easy matter for him to gather material from time to time and before the Christian Endeavor World arrives, two weeks in advance of the meeting, he will have his program nearly completed, and will only have to go to the C. E. World for details and additional thoughts.

The work of the prayer-meeting leader is important because the success or failure of the meeting is largely in his hands. The meeting may recover if he gives it a poor start, but it is not likely to do so. On the other hand, if he gives it a good start, it is quite certain to be a good meeting.

Any one who loves the Lord Jesus Christ and wishes to do His will should lead a Christian Endeavor prayer meeting. This spirit in a leader is far more important than wisdom or experience or ability of any kind.

One thing the leader should remember is that one new plan is the making of a meeting, and one new plan is enough. Have special music, outside speakers, or have a unique program. Always try to have something special, because the "ideal prayer meeting" is not a "thing of chance." You may go into a meeting unprepared, and yet enjoy the service; but if it is a good meeting, somebody has put prayer and thought and work into it. "Heaven may be had for the asking," says the poet, but the ideal prayer meeting cannot. It is as true here as elsewhere that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

But not only is it up to the leader to prepare, but it is up to every member of the society to prepare for the success of the meeting. They should deny themselves daily, for a godly life is the best preparation for an ideal meeting. Every member of the society should gather up spiritual strength all the week and concentrate it upon the prayer meeting, making it the supreme hour of the week.

And let us remember that the prayer meting has an object as well as a subject. What is that object? It is not simply to have an interesting or lively meeting. A service may be interesting, lively, or even vivacious, and yet be so devoid of spirituality as to suggest only "sounding brass" and "tinkling cymbals."

The real object of the Christian Endeavor prayer meeting is to awaken spiritual emotion, to bring the soul face to fact with God, to kindle the fires of devotion, and make every heart ready to say, "O God, Thy will be done!" This is the true object of the prayer meeting: to bring every soul to the point where it is willing to do its duty, so that decisions may be made, and results may be secured, right then and there. So whatever the subject of the meeting may be, never lose sight of the object.

The prayer-meeting room should be cheerful, neat and clean. Have a bright rug on the floor, appropriate pictures on the wall, flowers on the table, and the chairs neatly arranged. And ventilation is also important. No one wants to sit in a stuffy room for an hour, neither does one want to freeze. So be sure about the heat in winter and the air in summer.

Have a "smile-'em-up" committee at the door to welcome strangers, and ushers to distribute the audience wisely. Don't seat all the members on one side of the room and all the visitors on the other. If an usher meets the people with a kindly greeting, the strangers will immediately feel at home, and if care is taken in seating him near one of the most cordial members, he will be sure of a second welcome.

Then, too, have the members ushered up front. Don't leave half a dozen chairs vacant up front for the pianist to occupy when she is not performing her duties, or leave so much space for any distinguished guest who may arrive.

If it is worth while to arrange special programs for Christian Endeavor meetings, it surely is worth while to let people know about them. This might be called the advertising age. Landscape and sky line, street car and vacant lots, newspapers and magazines are all employed to convince you of things you need. So the time has come when publicity must be used in the affairs of the kingdom if we are to commend our goods and hold the market against our competitors.

So let us advertise our meetings. "If a dog bites a man, you know that is not news, because it is common-place. But if a man bites a dog—" The unusual happening is news. The usual happening presented in an unusual way is also news. The letters in the word "news" come from the initial letters of "north," "eact," "west," "south," because news is to be found everywhere. It can be found in the weekly prayer meeting. Each event offers at least two stories, one before and one after.

In gathering material, be sure and learn the five "w's"—who, what, where, when, and why.

Stale news is not news; be ahead of time always. In writing a story, tell it all in the first sentence, and make that sentence as short as possible. Then elaborate the most important facts first, and then the least important facts last, so if it has to be "cut," the most essential facts will not be left out.

But the newspaper is not the only way to advertise your society. Make posters, send out novel invitations, make pep talks at Sunday School, have a notice in your Church calendar, and there are many other ways.

The leader should never express disappointment because of a small attendance. If invited to a banquet in honor of the President of the United States, would you complain in his presence because some of the minor guests were absent? Neither is it any compliment to our Master to admit a feeling of disappointment at the size of meeting in which He is present.

And the ideal meeting is one in which all take part. If any one is silent, some message may be lost that God had entrusted to that soul for delivery, and it is not for the messenger to say that his Master's message is unimportant. No believer should be satisfied until he is able to express the feelings that the Spirit awakens in his heart.

The speakers should always have a good talk prepared, but not make them too long. Christian Endeavor is a training-school which exists for expression and it is distinguished by the fact that a large number participate. We can set an example of brevity ourselves and commend brief, pointed testimonies.

Another way to improve the meeting is to improve the music. Explore the hymn book for new songs. A wise selection of hymns sung rapidly will appeal to Endeavorers. Young people like hymns that are both spirited and reverent. A good pianist and song-leader who can carry a tune will help commendably.

And announce the topic early in the service, to clarify it in the minds of the Endeavorers and to inform visitors. A good way would be to place it on the blackboard.

A good leader will always start the meeting on time. Be punctual. A good many leaders have either bad habits or poor time-pieces. They may have both. What reason can a leader have for being late at a prayer meeting? The service is appointed for a given hour. The leader certainly should be aware of the fact, and not come into the room five minutes late. And why, after he arrives, should he spend another five minutes looking up hymns or searching for the Bible lesson which he is to read?

So let us always begin our meetings on time. Even if there are only a few. If the leader isn't there on time, let a member of the prayer-meeting committee start the song service. If you begin starting on schedule time, people will get tired of being late. It is well to close on time, too, rather

SUFFOLK LETTER.

This is Thanksgiving Day, and it was observed in Suffolk by a "Union Thanksgiving Service" in the Christian Church, the Methodist, the Baptist, Presbyterian and Christian Churches joining in the service. An offering for charity was taken, and that is divided equally between the Churches taking part in the service. Rev. Carl B. Craig, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, preached a good sermon from Psalm 103:1, 2. The Christian Church choir furnished the music, the leader, Mrs. Vernon Holland, sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. C. R. Wallace, the organist. The Church was full and the offering was liberal. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle had charge; Rev. W. W. Staley offered the invocation; Rev. H. E. Cromer, Methodist, offered the prayer; Rev. H. J. Goodwin, Baptist, read Psalm 103, and the congregation joined heartily in the hymns.

The earliest Thanksgiving in America was observed by the Pilgrim fathers at Plymouth in 1621. Congress recommended days of thanksgiving annually during the Revolution and in 1784 for the return of peace, as did President Madison in 1815. Washington appointed such a day in 1789, after the adoption of the Constitution, and in 1795 for general benefits and the welfare of the nation. It has been observed annually in New York since 1817; and since 1863 the Presidents have issued proclamations appointing the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. The Governors of the States also issue proclamations annually, requesting the people to assemble in their respective places of worship to give thanks for the harvests and blessings of the year; and it ranks as a legal holiday.

The religious significance of Thanksgiving Day runs through more than three hundred years, since 1621. The early settlers were thankful for life, liberty, for food, and all the blessings that had come to them, as they believed, from God. It was real giving of thanks to them, and it should be so to us.

It is unfortunate for the nation that baseball, football and other games should take the place of religious meetings for so many thousands of people. When sport takes the place of religion, the nation is in danger of decline. What the educational institutions need to realize is their obligation to the Church and the government, for they spring from these and are nourished by them. Think of 25,000 people going to a football game on Thanksgiving Day and paying $2.00 a ticket, making $50,000, and then giving nothing for the poor. Arithmetic and human sympathy condemn such a use of such a day. What this nation needs is more religion and a higher regard for proclamations issued by the President of the United States and the Governors of the forty-eight States. Leaving out religion, citizens should regard such proclamations and consider their obligation to the unfortunate. When the nation pauses in reverence and thanksgiving at the call of the President and Governors, it will be a better day.

In sending out the letter to Sunday School officials and pastors in regard to the offering for the 30th, it was suggested that, inasmuch as the fifth Sunday is so close to Thanksgiving Day and the offering for the Orphanage, and since the college does not wish in any way to conflict with the success of that offering, it might be feasible and desirable for Sunday Schools that contemplate taking the offering for the Orphanage on that day to take the college offering either on the fourth Sunday or on the first Sunday in December.

It is certainly gratifying that the Sunday Schools are co-operating with the Convention and the college in taking these quarterly offerings, and it is hoped that whenever an offering is taken some one makes a statement in regard to the value of the college in the program of our Church in training its leadership both for pulpit and pew.

W. A. HARPER.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

Leif Ericson landed on this continent 500 years before Columbus, stayed a while and then went back from whence he came. He discovered a new world, but mankind was no richer for it, because he never did anything about it. He gained no territory, no wealth, and but little local fame, and is almost unknown today.

Five hundred years later, Christopher Columbus landed on the shores of the new world with his three ships, but he did not go back without doing something about it—he went through with it. He took possession in the name of Spain and arranged for settlers. He started a great rush of adventurers and treasure-seekers, and today his name is a household word.

In the twelfth century, a monk named Roger Bacon invented gunpowder, predicted the airplane and discovered a hundred different laws of chemistry and physics that have since been of immeasurable value to the scientific world. But he never did anything about them—never took them into the practical world of life, but wrote them down in ciphers, so that none but the few who worked with him could understand them. As a result, gunpowder did not come into use in Europe until more than a hundred years later, and his scientific discoveries had to be rediscovered. Those men who made the rediscoveries are famous as benefactors of mankind, but Bacon's name is known only to scholars.

All through life you will find men, companies, conventions and Churches who, like Leif Ericson and Roger Bacon, they start things but never finish them. And all through life you will find people who have wonderful ideas, but they never do anything about them. These men and women never become the world's benefactors.

Consecrated men and women of best intentions founded the college at Wadley, Ala., believing that it would develop into a great institution in a very few years, but it has probably not come up to their expectations, and all because of the lack of interest and enthusiasm of our Church folks. Some have wrought well, and if it had not been for their untiring interest, we would have no Piedmont Junior College today. We cannot understand why our recent appeals have gone by unheeded. We must have funds at once if the college work is to go on. How can we hope to continue without the full support of the Church? We know that we have not the warm-hearted, sympathetic appeal that the cause of missions and the Orphanage have, but the college has just as vital and definite place in the Church as these and should receive the same whole-hearted support.

Many have said that they expected to do something for the college later on, but we are hoping that they can send some money now, as our teachers must live if they continue to teach. None want to fail to finish what we have started. I feel we are going to do something about it. Why not now?

Wadley, Ala. S. L. BEOUGHER.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH AND PROHIBITION.

There is no question today as to the position the Church should and must take on this much-discussed problem. The Church, more than any other agency, is responsible for the eighteenth amendment becoming a factor in our American life. The Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U. are children of the Church. When these two children became full grown and had demonstrated their ability to do things, the parent stood behind them while they waged and won a battle for the abolition of the saloon.

With the passing out of the saloon, hundreds of immense breweries and whiskey distilleries closed their doors, most of them to open later in more respectable and worth-while lines of manufacturing. Many men who owned stock in these breweries and distilleries have since found themselves with a lot of worthless paper on hand. They don't like that. They didn't like being put out of business by "a lot of crazy women and religious fanatics." When you touch a man's pocket-book, you get next to his heart—you arouse his fighting spirit. A year or two ago these disgruntled liquor people decided they would put up a fight to get liquor back. The Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment was organized. A few millionaires who have been equally sore because they were deprived of their "personal liberty," were called upon for the necessary financial backing to put the fight over. They "came across." The enormous sums of money being spent by this Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment are not contributed, as is generally supposed, by the opponents of prohibition throughout the country, but by seven millionaires, three members of the same family. It is this little group who, through subsidized news papers, is proclaiming to the world daily that prohibition is a failure and that the masses are rising up in arms against it. It is marvelous what money can do, and how, through its use, public opinion can be swayed. And therein at present lies the danger.

While all the Churches, with the probable exception of the Catholic, took active part in the fight to abolish the saloon, they are not all taking the part they should in helping to preserve what it took us fifty years to gain. The Methodist Church is taking a firm stand and is really accomplishing something. In both the Southern and Northern branches of this denomination there is a board on "Temperance and Social Service." These maintain offices in Washington, employ a number of people, and keep in constant touch with every move of the wets as well as keep an eye on Congress.

There are likewise boards on "temperance and social service" in the several conferences of the Methodist Church. The report of this board at the recent session of the Virginia Conference, held in Norfolk, was a revelation to those of us of other denominations who were fortunate enough to be present and hear it. Certainly the Methodists are "on the job," so far as the defense of prohibition is concerned. Why is it that our own denomination, along with the others, is not doing more? Is it that we do not realize the seriousness of the situation? There is no question but that the malicious and insidious propaganda now being put out by the wet press of the country is having its effect. To the man who reads only these wet papers and who himself is not any too firmly grounded in the faith, it is not difficult to conclude that the whole country is rapidly becoming converted to the evils of prohibition. It is this kind of propaganda that carries. The weak-kneed fellow likes to be with the majority, right or wrong.

The purpose of this article is to state as strongly as I possibly can the importance of the Christian-Congregational Church getting in on this fight in a way that will make our influence felt in no uncertain way. The writer maintains that the Southern Convention should have a board functioning similarly to that of the Southern and Northern Methodist Churches. The committees on moral reform in our different Conferences amount to very little so far as actual results are concerned. In some of these reports given in the "Annual," the subject of prohibition and temperance are scarcely touched upon.

I should like to suggest to the presidents of the different Conferences that the work of these committees be made uniform and more definite. Why not delegate to these committees during the coming year the work of organizing temperance societies in the local Churches. Certainly such a society is just as important now in the Church as any other; probably more important than some, so far as our young people are concerned. Why not get back to the days of pledge-signing? A live temperance society in the local Church, in these days of available material, would have no trouble in putting on a most interesting program once a month, and would exert a wonderful influence in the community.

During the past year I have given the greater part of my time to the educational work of the Anti-Saloon League. I have kept in touch with what the other side is doing, and I am frank to say that unless our ministers get busy and the local Churches fall in line, as certain as the sun shines, we are going to lose some of the ground we fought so hard and long to gain. Money is talking in this campaign the wets are putting on. The wet press does not hesitate to malign and slander any minister or Church that undertakes, as they say, to "dabble in politics." The most hated and dreaded organizations in America today, so far as the wet forces are concerned, are the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U., and the Methodist Church. There is no level to which they would not stoop, no device they would not employ to close the mouths and stop the presses of these three organizations.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(December.)

Dear Jesus, Prince of God, all hail! Thou, whom the Father didst send, of whom the angels sang, whom now we worship and adore, gifts to Thee we bring, gifts for use. Ability, time, means, self, we lay upon Thy altar of love. O make them Thine, we pray. Love only, Father, brought to earth Thy Son, the Holy Babe in manger laid. Bow our heads, bend our knees, lift our hearts, loose our tongues, that, to Him, the Prince of Peace, the conquering King, the lowly Saviour, universally and eternally shall ascend the honor and homage and praise and thanksgiving due His holy name. For His sake. Amen.

MONEY.

The world-wide financial depression is being felt throughout the Church. Every interest of organized religion is affected. Salaries of ministers are being cut, contributions to world causes reduced, and in consequence essential activities are slowing down.

The situation throws the whole question of Christian stewardship into high relief, and calls upon Christian people, especially Church members, to reappraise their financial obligations to the work of the kingdom of God in the world.

Why is the Church the first institution to suffer from financial stringency?

Because many local institutions are based on a shifting financial foundation. A few rich men pay the major part of the pastor's salary and the other running expenses. A few generously inclined givers largely support the benevolences. So long as prosperity lasts and these persons are able to make their large contributions, usually out of their surplus, everything runs along smoothly. In such conditions, members of an official board or a pastor would have to be more than human to dig into the real facts of the situation and uncover the unsound foundations of their work. But a Church based on any such support is built on the sand, and when the floods come, as come they will, collapse is sure to follow.

Too much of the work of the kingdom has been supported by the large gifts of a few rich and generous givers. Expansions have been planned, new enterprises staked out because a small number were interested and willing to underwrite the costs.

But the local Church and our world enterprises are not safely and securely based except as they rest upon the contributions of interest and money of large numbers of people. Only in a multitude of conscientious givers is there safety.

Another reason affects the rank and file of givers. And it is not to their credit. They regard religion and the Church as luxuries, and luxuries easily dispensed with. At the first sensation of shrinking income the cut falls where it is felt the least by those who make it. Scale of living must be kept up. The automobile must not be allowed to rust in the garage, and an institution so essential to the highest well-being of the town as the movies must not be allowed to dwindle. Let the Church take the cut, for the Church will probably weather the storm some way and with returning prosperity rebound to its former position.

Countless members of our Churches and official boards do not take such views. With them the Church is the last interest of their lives to take the cut. Even in our easy-going times, the spirit of sacrifice is willingly accepted, and such as do accept it undergird the Church with an unfailing support. If it were not for such, a tragedy would be enacted and spiritual loss and physical suffering far beyond our power to measure, result.

This may not be the "psychological moment" to press the claims of stewardship upon Christian people, but sometimes things must be said and done just because it is the worst possible time to say and do them.

Certainly this is the time for every person of means who has encouraged the Church to make advances involving financial obligations to ask himself whether he can afford to make a cut which will involve the slowing down of Christian enterprise, and work great hardship in the cases of many who are defenseless and who will suffer in silence. Such persons can well afford to draw upon principal rather than permit advances to be turned into retreats, rather than allow themselves to profit in dollars at the expense of the minister's or missionary's loyalty to his life-work.

Certainly it is the time for every member of the Church and friend of Christian enterprise honestly to face the question of stewardship as it applies to his own life and affairs, and settle it on a basis that is absolutely fair and generous to organized religion.

Ministers, missionaries, religious workers the world over are entitled to brotherly treatment. Many of them are not getting it today. There are certain glaring inequities in our present system which cannot stand the searching light of New Testament ethics. These must be brought out into the open, dealt with and removed.

But just now the Church is facing a crisis, and if business conditions do not speedily improve, the crisis may prove to be a tragedy. It can be met and passed through successfully if all will frankly face the situation, and each will bear the full measure of responsibility that rests upon him.

To "pass the buck" is an act of cowardice. To face the difficulties and meet them in the gallant spirit of our Christian evangel is to turn threatening disaster into victory.—Western Christian Advocate.

"HE NEVER PREACHES ON MISSIONS."

An occasional sermon on missions is not sufficient. The very universality of Christianity necessitates making the missionary implication the very substance and heart of all the preacher's teaching. He cannot do less than put the New Testament emphasis upon this great theme. It is essentially and vitally a missionary book. There are some pulpits where the setting and background of every sermon is the world mission of the Church. These pulpits have a peculiar unction about them. In every service the world responsibility for Christ is made prominent. There are other pulpits in which these great matters are seldom referred to, and one would not glean from a six months' attendance on their services that the Church had any task which necessitated a world program.

The missionary cause will not run itself. It is just as dependent upon a preaching program that will educate and quicken as is the local life of the Church. The world mission of Christianity should have as large a place in the pulpit planning as local evangelization or the building of the spiritual life of the congregation. It is vital to both of these phases of congregational development. Three-fourths of the people in almost any Church do not read any missionary literature whatever. How helpless they are unless the preacher brings them the message! Again and again I have heard earnest people say, "My pastor never preaches on missions." The hearts of the people are hungry for these messages if they are presented rightly. There never was so much material available to aid the preacher as now.

Whatever the reason for a slackened missionary interest, it must be remedied. It will not avail anything to lay the responsibility of slackened interest and funds on missionary organization and ask, "What is the matter with the Board of Missions?" The missionary organization is but the Church membership in action.—"The Preacher and His Missionary Message," Stephen J. Corey.

(6) Prayer.

(7) Offertory.

(8) Hymn, "The Lord be With Us."

Leader's preparatory talk:

We have seen a Hindu village. We have compared our own communities with Mange, and have seen the difference in social conditions. Christianity is the power lifting and blessing our villages and cities. But how we neglect Christ! Does our community invite Jesus to dwell and rest with us? consider Bethany, a small village out from Jerusalem. Here Jesus visited many times because of the calm peace. Jesus found love, contentment, thrift, conservative luxury—in short, all the elements of a refreshing welcome in Bethany. It was in Bethany that Jesus wept when His friends wept, and brought comfort and joy in place of tears. Here He was happiest. It was to Bethany that Jesus retired when the strain of "Passion Week" was so exacting. And after death had been swallowed up in the victory of the Resurrection, it was from Bethany that Jesus ascended into heaven. If each of us invites Jesus into our hearts, He will dwell in our communities, and how He will bless us! He will so illumine our village that the light will shine all the way to India and brighten the villages there.

Willing Workers or Junior Society.

Theme: "Heroes of India."

Decorations: Create atmosphere with top monkeys, parents, schools.

Golden Text: "I count all things to be loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord; for whom I suffered the loss of all things, and do count them as dung, that I may gain Christ."—Phil. 3:8.

Lesson: Acts 22:3-15.

Paul's Place in Christianity.

"Next to the Lord Jesus, Christianity owes more to the Apostle Paul than to any other one person. He it was who fashioned the Christian religion into the principal doctrinal forms in which it was held by the Church for centuries, who secured for it its first wide hearing before the Gentiles, who planted its Churches in a score of the strategic centers of the great Roman Empire, and who presented to the world an example of such boundless energy, devotion, courage, and self-sacrifice as to inspire admiration in all and to beget those same qualities in thousands of Christian believers. The debt of the Christian world to Paul could hardly be over-estimated. He found Christianity a provincial religion, unorganized, unpopular among the people of its origin, unknown to the world at large, without a literature, and with exceedingly few influential adherents. At his death, after not more than thirty-four years, largely through his influence and activity and that of his personal adherents, Christianity was world-wide in extent, had obtained a secure foothold in most of the important centers of the Roman Empire, was the religion of many thousands of Gentiles as well as Jews, some of its adherents belonging to the highest circles, and had called into existence the larger part of its sacred literature." What manner of man was this?

Paul's Birth and Childhood.

Paul was born in Tarsus—"no mean city," as he says—in Cilicia, Asia Minor. It was a commercial city and the seat of a university of renown. Paul was a Hebrew of the tribe of Benjamin, a Pharisee, and a Roman citizen. It is quite probable that his parents were well-to-do. He had at least one sister. (Acts 23:16.)

It is quite likely that in addition to the training which Paul got as a Jewish boy, he also attended the university at Tarsus. Later he took some special work under Gamaliel, one of the most famous Hebrew teachers or rabbis of the day. He was also trained in a trade, that of weaving Cilician goats' hair into a coarse fabric which was used in the making of mats, shoes, and tents.

Paul's education was essentially religious. He had a mastery of the Scriptures, as his later writings show. Because of his spirit and because of the cosmopolitan character of Tarsus, Paul had an understanding of Gentile thought and an insight into human nature in its universal aspects. He had a world-vision as the gift of his birthplace and birth-right.

Paul's Career as a Pharisee and Persecutor.

Paul was a Pharisee of the Pharisees. And because he thought that "those of the way" as the early Christians were called, were no respectors of the law which he loved so well and which was the basis of his religion, he persecuted them with a vigor and a venom that made his very name a terror. In his blind hate, he even started out to Damascus to stamp out the heresy in that ancient city.

Paul's Conversion.

But Paul the Pharisee never reached Damascus. On the Damascus road he had that vitalizing vision which wrought such a miraculous change in his life. He met the Risen Christ, he heard His voice, he yielded himself to Him. From that incident there came a new man, Paul whose one supreme passion was to know Jesus Christ and whose one supreme purpose was to make Him known to others. That this conversion was a most important fact, both in the life of Paul and in the history of Christianity, is evidenced by the fact that we have three accounts of it in Acts, two of which are given by Paul himself. The best thing to do is to read the accounts of this stirring event in Acts 9, 22 and 26. They need no interpreter. To those whose minds and hearts are open to the divine, they tell their own story.

Paul's Career.

Paul had a dynamic career. He retired for a period of meditation, attempted to preach in Damascus, but was driven out of the city, went to Jerusalem and attempted again to preach, but was driven out of the city again. He went then to the region of Syria and Cilicia and spent perhaps ten years there in what was probably intensive evangelistic work. His work attracted the attention of Barnabas from Antioch later, and after a year in that city, Paul became the foremost apostle to the Gentiles. His missionary journeys and his missionary labors are among the most constructive and most thrilling activities ever chronicled. He invariably compelled assent or aroused opposition. As some one once said, he always had a revival or a riot. His energy and his enthusiasm were unlimited, and his vision was world-wide.

Paul's Character.

Paul, to a remarkable degree, embodied in his life the qualities of the Master Himself. Beyond, or rather back of the traveler, preacher, teacher, organizer, letter-writer, there was the man—a man who was wholly given up to his Lord, with all the wealth of his emotional nature, with all the energies of his physical being, with all the power of his mind, absolutely devoted to Jesus Christ. Truly, for him to live was Christ. It was this that gave him power. And that he had power with God and with men cannot be gainsaid. Even today, after nineteen centuries, his letters have a perennial freshness and charm, and to those who study them they yield new meaning and power.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, December 14, 1923.

Topic: "How to Make Others Happy."

Scripture: Eph. 4:31, 32; 5:1, 2.

The meeting this week will be based on prose quotations and poems. Give out these "thoughts of others" to the members of the society who will discuss them in the meeting. Give out the quotations a week before the time for the meeting. Each participant in the meeting will use his quotation as a basis for his own thought or talk. Let the quotations serve as "thought starters."

Happiness begins at home, so let's start our thoughts with "home happiness." This quotation is from the Christian Guardian.

Making Home Happy.

The Christian home is the nearest approach to heaven possible in this world, and if our homes fail to remind us of heaven, we may be certain that there is something amiss with the type of Christianity which is represented there.

We have known people who had every other kind of religion but home religion. They were good at looking after other people's children, but failed in caring for their own. They were capable in business, helpful in the Church, ornamental in society, but failures in the home, and the real reason seemed to be that it required a good deal more grace to be a Christian at home than it did to be a Christian elsewhere. And yet Christianity was meant to make home happy, and so happy that for all time to come it would remain the earthly type of the heaven which lies beyond the veil. Let us get the kind of religion which will make our home life radiant with unselfish joy.

The Happy Home.

I have peeped into quiet parlors where the carpet is clean and not old, and the furniture is polished and bright; into rooms where the chairs are neat and the floors carpeted; into kitchens where the family live, and the meals are cooked and eaten, and the boys and girls are as blithe and joyous as the sparrows overhead, and I see that it is not so much wealth, or learning, or clothes, or servants, or toil, or idleness, or town, or country, or station, as it is tone and temper that render homes happy or wretched. And I see, too, that in town or country, good sense and kind feeling and God's grace make life what no teachers, or accomplishment, or society can make it.

The Happiness of Giving.

Many people feel that to give more love than they receive is a misfortune. As a matter of fact, the misfortune is to receive more love than we give. It does not make us happy to be loved, but if we love truly we are sure of happiness in proportion to the strength and purity of our love.

Happiness is Inside You.

The really good things, the big things, are inside and not outside the man; the big thing is not luxury, but contentment, not a big house, but a big satisfaction. Show that happiness is one of the "inside things."

Friends and Happiness.

"The happiest business in all the world
Is that of making friends."

—Selected.

Share Happiness.

"Happiness was made to be shared."—Racine.

Was It You?

Some one started the day aright—
Was it you?
Some one made it happy and bright—
Was it you?
Early this morning, we are told,
Some one smiled, and all through the day
This smile encouraged young and old—
Was it you?

Quiet Hour Meditations.

Monday: Be kind (Col. 3:12-17).
Tuesday: Be patient (James 1:3, 4).
Wednesday: Be willing to help (Mark 2:1-5).
Thursday: Be forgiving (Matt. 18:21-35).
Friday: Be gentle (Titus 3:1, 2).
Saturday: Be true (Prov. 11:13).

ADVENTURES IN MONEY RAISING. By Cornelius M. Steffens and Paul P. Faris. The Macmillan Co.; pp. 277; $2.50.

Measured simply as "an outline of presidential duties and experiences for the University of Dubuque," as described by its sub-title, this is a book of comparatively narrow interest. As the portrayal of a phase that is almost typically a part of the history of the American college or university that has not had the benefit of public funds in its founding and early development, it tells a story that many will read with interest.

It is not a manual for the professional money-raiser, for it contains little or nothing that is new to him. College presidents and others upon whom has been laid the task of financing worthy enterprises will read it with sympathetic understanding. Many thousands of substantial citizens should read it to realize more fully the toil and faith, the sacrificial devotion, of those unsung heroes who have built and are still building Christian institutions for the education of American youth; it is but one of the tales of sustained Christian courage, of resourcefulness, of dogged persistence, that should be told to those whose favored precepts relate to "saving for the rainy day." Such men as Dr. Steffens are not savers but givers, yet many generations will gather generous dividends from that which they build.

There are interesting chapters on "The Student Counselor," "Why People Give," and "The President's Wife," and some entertaining paragraphs dealing with contacts with well-known individuals, especially with the eccentric but warm-hearted philanthropist, Dr. D. K. Pearson.

Of the co-authors, Dr. Cornelius M. Steffens is now president-emeritus of the University of Dubuque, and Paul Patton Faris is a well-known writer and teacher.

THE EQUALITY OF ALL CHRISTIANS BEFORE GOD. By Peter Ainslie. Macmillan; $2.00; pp. 227.

The Christian Unity League is different from Christian bodies that gather to discuss union. Membership in this body is personal, not representative. Any Christian is eligible and speaks only for himself. This book presents the addresses given at the Christian Unity Conference of the Christian Unity League, held in New York City, November 13-15, 1929. It is significant that every person who was scheduled to appear on the program was present and took the part assigned. In addition to these addresses, any one of which is worth the price of the book, is an introduction by Dr. Ainslie, the president and founder of the Christian Unity League and apostle not only of Christian unity, but of Christian brotherhood and love as well. There is also added a chapter descriptive of the Communion service held in the chapel of Union Theological Seminary, written by Rev. S. D. Chown, of Toronto, Canada.

At its New York conference, the Christian Unity League revised and formally adopted its pact of reconciliation, which we herewith print in full:

"We, Christians of various Churches, believing that only in a co-operative and united Christendom can the world be Christianized, deplore a divided Christendom as being opposed to the spirit of Christ and the needs of the world. We, therefore, desire to express our sympathetic interest in, and prayerful attitude toward, all conferences, small and large, that are looking toward reconciliation of the divided Church of Christ.

"We acknowledge the equality of all Christians before God and propose to follow this principle, as far as possible, in all our spiritual fellowships. We will strive to bring the laws and practices of our several communions into conformity with this principle, so that no Christian shall be denied membership in any of our Churches, nor the privilege of participation in the observance of the Lord's Supper, and that no Christian minister shall be denied the freedom of our pulpits by reason of differences in forms of ordination.

We pledge, irrespective of denominational barriers, to be brethren, one to another, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour, whose we are and whom we serve."

Here is a book that emphasizes that pact and that you will want to read. You will want to forget Bishop Manning's forbidding the conference to celebrate the Lord's Supper in St. George's Church. You will want to breathe the wonderful spirit of the conference, which the book portrays. The reviewer can vouch for that, because he was there and rejoiced in heart as never before over the prospect of a reunited Christendom.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

INNOCENT MEN.

"Walk with wise men, and thou shalt be wise; but the companion of fools shall smart for it."—Prov. 13:20-25.

The newspapers are giving many accounts nowadays of passengers on bootleg trucks who, when arrested, claim to have been there just by chance. One such case was recently reported. The driver of a truck transporting liquor was arrested, and his two passengers with him. One of these said that he was on his way to get a disabled truck when he asked for a "lift." The other was the proprietor of the line of trucks, who said he was out in order to inspect his truck drivers, unknown to them, and see whether they were doing their duty or not. These stories did not sound plausible to the judge, and the "passengers" were compelled to furnish bail for a later hearing.

"Innocent passengers" are often too innocent. They should remember that every one is supposed to know with whom he is traveling, and on what errand the vehicle is bound. Form an evil friendship, and you become involved in your friend's misdeeds. Join a dishonest firm, and you are a partner in its cheating, though you do not cheat. God's law as well as man's law supposes that you have eyes and a mind and the ability to assert your independence. "The companion of fools shall smart for it," though he himself may be the most learned man on earth.

Prayer.—One of the parents will offer prayer, asking that all in the room may take heed of their acquaintances and friends, and form only those alliances of which Christ also may be a member. Close with the Lord's Prayer.

TUESDAY.

WITHOUT BLEMISH.

"Now unto him that is able to guard you from stumbling, and to set you before the presence of His glory without blemish . . . be glory forevermore."—Jude 17:25.

We are sadly conscious of the flaws in our character, but in Christ we are flawless. We know that we are weak, but in Christ we are strong. We are ashamed of our many follies, but in Christ we are wise.

Dr. A. J. Gordon once said: "Sanctification is making real in our lives our condition in Christ. If we are sanctified in Christ, it is our business to be sanctified in ourselves. Make the real state correspond to the ideal." In other words, we are simply, through faith, to live out the promises which Christ has made us. We are simply to be the best that He has made it easily possible for us to be.

It is a wonderful thing to be without spot or blemish or any such thing. We are wont to think that this can be said of no one but Christ. It is the fault of every Christian if it is not true of him also.

Prayer.—O Thou, Perfect One, admit us into Thy perfection! Help us to remove the status, to heal the scars, to make all pure and beautiful in our souls. May we nevermore be satisfied with ugliness. May we nevermore acquiesce in deformity. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE HOUSE OF GOD.

"Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service."—Rom. 12:1-8.

Few Christians realize the connection between health and holiness. When Paul told us to present our bodies a living sacrifice, he meant that we are to keep them pure and sound physically as well as spiritually, just as an animal offered in sacrifice must be of the very best, free from all blemishes, and not the weakling of the flock or herd.

James Buckham, who wrote so many wholesome poems, once versified this thought for us. He said:

"Take care of the body, the house of the soul,
If you would its inmate keep hearty and whole.
No leak let there be, where wrong thoughts may steal in,
No window left open to black gusts of sin."

So let us see to it that we are, in body as well as soul, fit for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

Prayer.—One of the parents will offer a prayer, asking that all may be more heedful of their health, both physical and spiritual, keeping all their powers meet for the Master's use. Close with the Lord's Prayer in concert.

THURSDAY.

A WATERED GARDEN.

"Thou shalt be like a watered garden."—Isa. 58:9-11.

The explanation of this text is: If a man will bow to the will of God, renounce all unbelief, live of God's mercy, and practice it toward others, he shall have the Lord's abundant blessings; his own soul shall have sweet solace and refreshing. Did you ever doubt that the promise, "Ask and ye shall receive," to be true? This Scripture explains just the condition of heart and soul that must exist before that promise can be fulfilled.

It fills the soul with exultation to realize that there is a plan of religious experience where the Lord will guide us continually and unceasingly through the whole life and beyond the gates of death. "He shall satisfy thy soul in drought and make fat thy bones." When your heart is tired and your bones ache; when your strength is weak and your effort withers into fruitlessness, God will satisfy your soul, give you strength and make you a blessing. You shall be like a watered garden, and a spring whose waters do not fail. The Lord hath said it, and He shall not fail.

Prayer.—Give us, O God, Thy Holy Spirit, that we may know Thee, believe in Thee and live in Thee. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE LORD'S COMPASSION.

"I have compassion on the multitude."—Mark 8:1-9.

God satisfies the wants of all alike, the wicked and the good. But the faithful receive His Spirit in another spirit than do unbelievers. A Christian sanctifies all things he receives to the honor of God, by his word and by prayer. It is in this way that he experiences the love of heaven and eternity, thus, though food may be furnished by the ordinary processes of nature, the Christian knows that his life is a miracle and that it is wrought out by the hand of God. One may live among a thousand and have but little of this world's goods to himself, but he knows that he is fed of the Lord, receives blessings from his hand, and has much to distribute to others.

This account is written, that we have more faith in Him, and be rid of anxiety. The Bible has many shining examples of this. Elijah and the widow is one of them.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, let us ever be with Thee, live continually of Thy wonders, and fear no want. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LIFE'S GREATEST TRAGEDY.

"The end of those things is death."—Rom. 6: 19-23.

Unconverted persons are certainly agents of the devil and yield their influence in opposition to Christianity. They do things secretly which they would be ashamed to be known. They cannot realize that their secrets are known to God, nor do they realize how deplorable it is that their souls, which should be the temple of God, is the dwelling-place of Satan. This makes the life, which should be the house of God and is gloriously fashioned for good, employed in iniquity. "The end of these things is death"—eternal separation from God.

Yet this is not the greatest tragedy. The greatest tragedy is that Christians become faithless, and in that way serve Satan themselves. A Christian's sense of loyalty should be so keen that his whole conduct should bear witness that he has been freed from sin and that he has been made a member of God's family. Then, he would realize that he will reap in due season. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life."

Prayer.—God give us Thy Spirit. Where Thou art, there is liberty and love and loyalty and holiness. These we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

VICTORY OVER THE DEVIL.

"Bless them that curse you. Bless, and curse not."—Matt. 5:44.

"Recompense no man evil for evil."—Rom. 12:17.

Do good to them that vex you, and then you have gained victory over the devil. Here the Holy Spirit points out how we may, without fail, secure to ourselves a life of happiness.

Trust in Him, commit thy way unto Him, cling to Him as a child would to its father in the dark; let thy troubles and difficulties fall upon Him, and He shall bring it to pass; He shall bring forth thy righteousness as the noonday.

Prayer.—Help us, O Lord, to trust in Thee and to find delight and rest in Thy will. Amen.

The British government of the Gold Coast, W. A., has adopted for the natives of that province the educational methods developed by Tuskegee Institute, according to Sir Frederick Gordon Guggisberg, former governor of that colony, who was a recent visitor to the South. "Booker T. Washington has not only helped you here in America," Sir Gordon declared, "but his influence has reached out overseas. We have borrowed and adopted his ideas." The visitor expressed himself as greatly pleased with the progress made by American negroes in education and the achievement of prosperity.

"HARD TIMES" AND THE KINGDOM.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

We are hearing a great deal about "hard times" on every hand. Undoubtedly we are hearing too much about hard times, for times are not as hard as some folks would have us believe, and even if times are hard, it is not going to help to talk in a pessimistic way about them. But after all is said and done, there is undeniably a period of financial stringency and a condition that makes for hard times. Unemployment, drought, failure of crops, low prices, the collapse of the stock market, and many other things are phases of these so-called hard times. One thing is certain: things are not what they ought to be. It might be in point, then, to consider these "hard times" in their relation to the kingdom of God. What significance, if any, do they have for the kingdom of God? Does the kingdom of God have any contribution to the solution of the problem of hard times"?

In the first place, it needs to be said that hard times are due in part, perhaps in large part, to a violation of the spirit of the kingdom of God. In their efforts to account for the present situation, men have attributed these hard times to many causes or factors. Over-production, the invention and development of machinery, unwise tariff regulations between countries, chain stores, centralization of wealth, the eighteenth amendment, the drought, the Republican party—it would be the other way around if the Democratic party were in power—the inevitable aftermath of the World War—these and many other causes and factors have been given as the background of these hard times in which we find ourselves. Now, it is undoubtedly true that some of these factors, or combinations of these factors, have entered into the situation. But may it not be true that deeper than all of these is the violation of the spirit of the kingdom of God! May it not be that these things are but expressions of a spirit that is a violation of the spirit of the kingdom?

Now, the prophets declared very plainly and very insistently that national calamities had come as judgments from God upon a people who had broken their covenant with Him, and who had violated the principles of justice and righteousness. They saw in these calamities simply the inevitable penalty and price which human folly and sin involved. And again and again they asserted that there could be no satisfactory solution until Israel had forsaken his evil ways and had returned unto the Lord. This was the distinctive contribution of these prophets, or at least one of the most distinctive contributions which they made to religious life and thought. May it not be that much of our hard times is but the inevitable penalty involved in the violation of the principles and the spirit of the kingdom of God?

Lawlessness, extravagance, speculation, Sunday desecration, materialism, mere love of pleasure, idolatry, self-complacency, formalism, neglect of the house of God, and many other things which are characteristic of our modern life sooner or later bring the hard times which are always characteristic of the "way of the transgressor." The truth, "Be sure your sins will find you out," applies to nations as well as to individuals. We will not get very far in the matter until we recognize the fact that there are many things wrong in our national and individual life, and until we resolutely set ourselves to walk in the way of righteousness.

In the second place, these "hard times" present a challenge to the Church as the divinely appointed institution of the kingdom of God." Jesus said, "On this rock I will build my Church." The Church is a divine institution. This does not necessarily mean that the Church and the kingdom of God are synonymous. But it does mean that the Church is the divinely appointed institution of the kingdom, and is designed to be an instrument in helping to establish the kingdom. Just so far, then, as hard times are due to a violation of the spirit of the kingdom, the Church has a challenge. It must not, it dare not be indifferent or careless in the matter. It has a message and it has a mission. Its message is Jesus Christ. He alone has the key to the situation. Its mission is to make His Spirit operative and effective in human life. This does not mean that the Church is to get into politics or into industry or into a hundred and one other things, but it does mean that the Church must insistently and persistently preach the ideals and principles of Jesus Christ as related to these things, and that the Church must practice the application of the spirit of Jesus in all the relationships of life. The present situation demands clear and direct preaching and teaching, and friendly and Christ-like action.

And finally, hard times call for the spirit which is characteristic of the kingdom of God. There must be first of all the spirit of humility. America has grown proud and self-sufficient. She has, in a large measure, become a worshiper at the shrine of science and materialism. She has been beguiled into a false and a fatal sense of security and self-sufficiency by her material wealth and by her material achievements. But over and against this spirit there stand those abiding words, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." America needs to humble herself. But there does not seem to be any noticeable spirit of humility in the American mind today. Our hard times have caused depression, but they have not yet begotten humility or deepened devotion. And Roger Babson, the famous statistician and adviser of "big business" dares to say that there is not going to be any marked improvement in conditions until there is a genuine revival of religion.

The times also demand the spirit of faith and courage. Suffering has a legitimate place in a man's life, even in the best of men. Depression and national ills have a place in a nation's life. They must be faced, as has been suggested, in the spirit of humility, but they must also be faced in the spirit of faith and courage. The Church should sound a note of hope; it should rekindle the fires of devotion wherever they have burned low or burned out; it should quicken men with new faith and new courage. It should give impulse to finer living and larger service.

Above all things, there must be the spirit of self-sacrifice in the interests of the kingdom of God. Times may be hard, but the claims of the kingdom must still come first. The injunction, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God," applies both in good times and in hard times. It is no time for retrenchment. As one studies the situation, one feels that in many cases men do not give, not because they do not have, but because they are not willing to deny themselves for the sake of the kingdom. We have not caught the spirit of the Christians of the Churches of Macedonia who, says Paul, "in great trial of affliction, and out of their deep poverty, gave not only to their power, but beyond their power." He adds the rather illuminating statement, however, that they had first of all given themselves to the Lord. We do not give our material possessions because we have not given ourselves. The present situation calls for the spirit of self-sacrifice in the interest of the kingdom. This is the law of the Christian life.

trol of intellectuals who neglect the Christian values of education for the whole man, and Christian ideals drop out of the program.

The recognition of Christian character and Christian principles in human associations and service is the chief reason for a Church college, and Elon College claims as its motto, "Christian Character First and Always." If it maintains that profession, it is worthy of patronage from all families of the Southern Christian Convention, and of the Conferences.

The chief subject taught in Mohammedan schools is the Koran. False religions are stricter in teaching their faiths than Christian schools; and that accounts for weak biblical teaching from pulpits compared with former years. The schools are largely responsible for sermons based on other sources than the Word of God. W. W. S.

During the last three years, the Methodist Board of Temperance and Prohibition has enrolled 500,000 Negroes as signers of the pledge of total abstinence from intoxicating liquors. Three-fourths of the signers were students in schools and colleges. This work has been under the direction of A. R. Howard, who has carried on a program of temperance education through the high schools and colleges, as well as by personal contacts. On a recent day he delivered seven addresses in Jackson, Miss., and secured 2,360 signers to the pledge.

THE C. E. PRAYER MEETING.

than drag the meeting out past the time and into the Church services. Remember, prompt closing has an effect on prompt opening.

In our Christian Endeavor prayer meetings, let us make more use of "prayer." Let us use the five kinds of prayer. Of course, it is not necessary to use each of the five kinds in every meeting, but let us remember there are five kinds and we want more than just the opening prayer and the benediction in each meeting. Let us have sentence prayers in every meeting.

It is well to have a "prayer" prayer meeting once in a while. I know of one society that announced the meeting as a "prayer" prayer meeting and invited all the Sunday School and the members of the Church. They sung hymns relating to prayer. Had a talk on "Prayer" by the leader, explaining when to pray, how to pray, and what to pray for. They had five different Endeavorers each to explain one kind of prayer, and after each explanation had an example. They had a tableau, "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer." The platform was decorated like a garden, and a girl dressed in a flowing white robe knelt in the garden while that beautiful old hymn was sung as a duet. Candles were used for lighting; and immediately after the singing, the pastor made a talk about Jesus in Gethsemane. The picture, "Jesus in Gethsemane," could not be secured, so the leader used the one "On the Way to Gethsemane." The meeting was closed with a plea for comrades of the quiet hour.

Christian Endeavorers take it for granted that prayer is necessary in the life of a Christian, and that it is effective in producing results in their own lives and in the lives of others. So Christian Endeavorers must learn to pray for definite things in the prayer meeting and expect results.

For prayer is the heart of worship. Prayer is the closest communion which exists between man and God. Prayer is not a matter of flattering God, nor does God ask that when we pray we continually call attention to our sins and shortcomings. The essence of prayer is seeking God's will for our lives and making His will our own. Samuel of old uttered the perfect prayer when he called, "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth."

The leader should make more use of the Bible in the prayer meeting. Open the meeting with a psalm quoted in concert. Have the leader distribute several slips of paper containing texts that he will call for during his remarks. Devote five minutes to volunteered memory verses. In the Scripture lesson, have the Endeavorers read a verse and then comment on it; also have alternate reading between the leader and a member of the society.

Some societies have acquired the habit of passing out slips to be read in the meeting. If you must pass out slips, let them take the form of questions to be answered, and not material to be read in the meeting. Let us have individual expressions in the meeting, and do our reading at home as far as possible.

The leader should put extra preparation on the special meetings of the year, such as Christmas, Easter, Thanksgiving, the birthday of C. E., Mothers' Day, etc. There should be candle-light services, sunrise services, twilight services, and always have a consecration meeting once a month. Also arrange at least one decision service a year. Pray for the salvation or rededication of each member.

But, the best way to improve the prayer meeting is to live its purposes during the week days. The real test of the prayer meeting comes after it has closed. If it makes you stronger and more determined to do the right, it is a helpful and worth-while service. We improve our prayer meetings by letting our words in the meeting and our lives among our fellow-men be in harmony. Let us be consistent, trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength.

Live the prayer meeting through the week by acting upon what you have said there. The greatest harm that one can do to Christian Endeavor is to say one thing in the meeting and do the opposite during the week.

The way in which we can be of the most service to mankind is to draw men away from their sins and to Christ. And when people see that we have joy, peace, wisdom and strength, and know that it is because we are a Christian, they, too, will want to become a Christian.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

FONVILLE.

Mrs. Sarah Walker Fonville, relict of the late Lindsey J. Fonville, second daughter of Rev. George G. and Mary Sellars Walker, passed to the heavenly life from her home in Burlington, N. C., November 12th, 1930, at the age of 74 years. Rev. W. T. Walker, an able minister in the Christian Church, was her brother. Another brother, Isaac N. Walker, and a sister, Mrs. Virginia Ann Anderson, preceded her in death. She is survived by one brother, George B. Walker; by two sons, DeRoy R. and Claude C., and by one daughter, Sadie, all of whom reside in Burlington. Three grandchildren and one foster-grandchild also survive. One daughter, Mamie E., died a little more than two years ago.

Mrs. Fonville was educated at Graham Normal Institute, and was always interested in the cause of education. She had a particular interest in Elon College, to which all four of her children were sent, and three of whom graduated there.

Early in life, Mrs. Fonville accepted Christ as her Saviour and joined Concord Christian Church. Upon her removal to Burlington with her family, about forty years ago, she united with the Church here, where she remained a most faithful and loyal member throughout her life. Hers was a vital Christian experience. Her faith was simple and serene, her trust was deeply and securely anchored, and her hope was steadfast to the end. A good neighbor, an unselfish friend, a Christian wife and mother.

The funeral services were held from the Church of which she was a member, with her pastor in charge, assisted by Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Dr. C. H. Rowland. Interment in the local cemetery.

She rests in peace in a triumph which is complete. May her loved ones be comforted in their sorrow.

Congregational Christian Churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southern Christian Convention and the Congregational Churches of the Southeast.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1930. NUMBER 50.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

RELIGIOUS CO-OPERATION.—

The forty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Kenwood Interdenominational Church, Chicago, late in November, had more than unusual significance. The Church was founded with 37 members, representing five denominations. Today it has 1,203 members, representing 22 fellowships. There are now about 2,000 Churches of interdenominational character in the country.

BIBLE SUNDAY.—

"One Book for All People" is the theme selected by the American Bible Society for "Universal Bible Sunday," which occurred this year on December 7th. The society has mailed to thousands of pastors a brochure on this theme from the pen of Rev. James I Vance, of Nashville, Tenn. This will stimulate many people to read the Bible more, study its contents, and follow its teachings.

DR. CADMAN RESIGNS.—

Recently Dr. S. Parks Cadman, of the Congregational-Christian Church, resigned from the chairmanship of two philanthropic organizations —the Golden Rule Foundation and the China Famine Relief. Dr. Cadman explained that he had reluctantly resigned from these responsibilities because of the pressure of other tasks and on the advice of physicians. It is marvelous that he can do so much, any way, but it is a distinct loss to any organization to lose his leadership.

WEEK OF PRAYER.—

Announcements have been made relative to the "universal week of prayer," January 4-10th, promoted by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, in co-operation with the evangelical alliance of Great Britain. The general topic is "World Evangelization." Copies of the program and the call may be obtained from the office of the Federal Council, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York. Concerted prayer by all the Churches in Christendom will bring results, since all Christians believe in the efficacy of prayer.

BETTER ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.—

Washington reports that the economic situation in October showed a small increase of employment in textile, tobacco, and paper industries, but with sharp drops among vehicle manufacturers, leather manufacturers, and iron and steel companies. Twenty-three of fifty-four industries surveyed increased employment during October. The economic conditions will gradually adjust themselves, and that adjustment has begun already. Prices and labor will reach the level of the cost of raw material, but money will have a greater purchasing power.

BLIND MUSICIANS.—

More than 1,000 blind organists and choir directors are employed in the Churches of France, as compared with about 25 in the United States. This is only one among the many occupations in which the blind may advantageously be given employment. President Hoover has invited 52 nations to participate in a world conference on work for the blind, to be held in New York City in April, 1931. Such a conference will stimulate people to give the blind more employment, but we should not wait for the conference. Give the blind something to do that they can do well, and they will respond readily.

"HOME FIRES BURNING."—

Across the Hudson from New York City lies Jersey City, with a population of 350,000. Just now, Jersey City's Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a nation-wide program to establish its place in the sun as an efficiently governed city and a good place in which to make a home and rear a family. The facts back up the claim, and it would be the greatest thing in all American cities that chambers of commerce could to undertake a similar movement. The moral and religious life of any city is its greatest asset, and no movement is greater than that to improve the moral and spiritual atmosphere of our cities.

YOUTH.—

There comes a report from Canada that there is a steady increase of young people who volunteer for Christian service. At this time there are nearly 50,000 girls in pre-seminary training in school for such service, and more than 25,000 boys. What is called the "revolt of youth" is an expression, not of evil tendencies, but rather a reaching out like the tendrils of a vine for reality, religion and freedom to express life in creative effort. The urge, energy, instinct of freedom, creative intelligence of youth is seeking for reality, for God, for self-expression, and self-realization. This tendency should be stimulated and directed in out-reach after God and religion.

MENCKEN RELIGIOUS.—

The editor of Harper's Magazine says that H. L. Mencken is more religious than he gives himself credit for being. "He believes in freedom of thought and speech and the utmost freedom of conduct that is consistent with living in organized society. He is strong for facts and has not much use for faith. He is a great deal more useful hitting what he calls religion in the eye than are thousands of vociferous persons who are trying to regulate the lives of others in what they call religion." In this statement of his belief, he makes no mention of Christianity, and no doubt he is religious as some of the pagans are religious, but Christ taught a way of life by example and experience, and we must follow Him to be Christian.

"ADVANCED THOUGHT."—

In a recent sermon by Dr. J. D. Jones, famous British Congregationalist, he states that while he is "all for progress in Christian thought," he does sometimes get disturbed by the length to which some of the "advanced" men go. "If I had a criticism to pass upon the thinking and preaching of a good many of our younger men today, it is that they treat so lightly the witness and experience of the Christian Church throughout the centuries. . . . We have changed our modes of thought, we have expanded our ideas, but Christianity is still the good news God was in Christ." We should not forget that God revealed Himself through Christ and that He is Christ-like to us.

CHURCH UNION AGAIN.—

The official representatives of five Presbyterian Churches and reformed bodies moved a step nearer organic union last month in their meeting in Pittsburgh. It was voted that union might be achieved on the basis of the Westminster confession of faith, the longer catechism, the doctrinal statement of the United Presbyterian Church, the Heidelberg catechish, the canon of the Synod of Dort, and the Belgis confession.

A common polity was framed as follows: "That the Lord Jesus Christ is the supreme and sole Head of the Church. That the Word of God is the ultimate source and authority in Church government. That the Church's nature, relation and function are spiritual, and spiritual only. That witnessing for Christ is the continuous business of the Church. That the evangelization and the Christianization of the world is the aim of the Church. That we accept and practice the Presbyterian system as the method or form of Church organization and government, believing it to be in harmony with the Scriptures."

Other matters looking to the formation of a union were referred to the committee for further study and action. Something of the same liberty and latitude as that used in the Congregational-Christian Church will be extended to the separate branches seeking union. With the elaborate statement of creed which has been outlined, and with other difficulties to follow before the committeee have completed their work, it seems that the completion of their union is far distant. If they would adopt the simple Way of Life as revealed in Christ, without human creeds, it would be much easier to unite. They seem to hold to simplicity of organization and polity, but insist on the complexity of doctrine and speculative faith. Paul believed and taught freedom from the law in the interest of a liberal Christianity.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Why not renew now for THE CHRISTIAN SUN and, incidently but very appropriately, send it a year also to a friend as a Christmas present? That will be a gracious act and one that will be appreciated a whole year.

As we go to press, we learn with deep regret of the death of Mr. George Darden, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Darden of Suffolk, Va. Our sympathy goes out to his mother and father and to the other members of the bereaved family.

Rev. J. H. Warren, pastor of Ocean View work, has received four new members during the month of November. The attendance at Church services during the month increased nearly three-fold, and the attendance at Sunday School increased 100 per cent, going from fifty-two on November 2nd, to 109 on November 30th. Bro. Warren is hopeful of the outlook.

Rev. P. T. Klapp, Elon College, N. C., has been ill and a shut-in now for six weeks. Having been active in the ministry so many years, Bro. Klapp misses and longs for the contacts and activities of the ministry he so much loves. Here is a veteran of the cross who has been true and faithful through the years. It will be gratifying to him now that he is confined to his room to get a card or a letter from his friends. This will carry cheer and sunshine to the sick-room and will be appreciated.

A good woman, who has on her heart a desire to enlarge the kingdom of her Lord and render service in His name and for His sake, writes as follows: "Find enclosed $5.00 for missions, to be credited to Mt. Bethel Church. I made this money selling Christmas cards." That, indeed, is a sound and seasonable decision. It was our Lord who gave us Christmas, and in His name we celebrate. Surely nothing is more appropriate than this effort to make known to others, who have not it, the love, the life and the joy which His gospel has revealed to us.

Rev. T. Fred Wright sends us the following: "We will dedicate our three new Sunday School rooms at Shallow Well on Sunday, December 14th, at 11 o'clock. Our people have worked faithfully and given liberally, as we have raised for building Sunday School rooms and remodeling the Church about one thousand dollars, and, with donations of labor and materials, we have about thirteen hundred dollars' worth of improvements. The last dollar of indebtedness was paid off the first of this week, and we expect to dedicate on December 14th."

The Woman's Board of the North Carolina Christian Conference was in all-day session at Burlington, December 2nd, making out the details and plans of the Conference work for the coming year. Those present were Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, president; Mrs. S. C. Harrell, Durham, vice-president; Mrs. J. P. Barrett, Elon College, secretary; Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, treasurer; Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, superintendent of spiritual life. The annual Conference voted a goal of $5,000 for the coming year, and the board did its best to apportion same to the societies, so that the goal may be reached. Visitors at the meeting were Dr. C. H. Rowland and Mission Secretary J. O. Atkinson.

AN EDITORIAL STORY.

There seemed nothing unusual about Jones. His pastor reached that conclusion soon after he had taken charge of the congregation. There were other men in the Church who exhibited some rather striking characteristics. Several were men of unusual talent, but Jones manifested no more than ordinary intelligence.

A few were wealthy, but it seemed that Jones had prayed, "Give me neither poverty nor riches," and that his prayer had been answered. Some were aggressive, bustling business men, headed for the rank of captain of industry, but Jones just plodded along at a steady gait, never in the lead but never having to be carried.

The pastor sized them all up and decided that he had a goodly number of men who could be depended on as liberal supporters of the Church and earnest promoters of the kingdom, but he did not include Jones in the list.

There came a day when the pastor's estimate of Jones received a shock. A considerable deficit had been reported by one of the Church agencies and the pastor started out to secure the co-operation of his select list of men in helping to meet the deficit. He was on his way back to his study to think over the events of the morning.

They had been far from encouraging. One after another the men on whom he had counted had refused their aid or had put him off with flimsy excuses. One would like to help, but he had just bought a new automobile and really did not have the money available. Another had some payments due on a promising investment and felt unable to contribute.

As the pastor turned the corner, he met Jones. It did not occur to him to invite Jones to help on this special contribution, and he was about to pass with a few words of greeting when Jones said, "You're not looking well this morning, parson. Anything wrong?"

The pastor assured his questioner that there was nothing wrong with his health and then admitted that he had been out in behalf of the missionary deficit and had met with little encouragement.

"I've been thinking about that," said Jones. "I read about it in the Church paper and I thought our congregation ought to help make up that deficit. Wish I was a rich man, but I ain't. Anyhow, I figured up about what I ought to give and brought a check with me. I wish you would use that to help along."

He handed the pastor a check as he spoke. The latter thanked him and they separated. Not until they were some distance apart did the pastor look at that check, and he could scarcely believe his eyes when he saw it was drawn for fifty dollars.

Several times after that the pastor had occasion to invite his people to assist in some worthy enterprise outside of the regular channels or to increase their gifts for the normal expenditures of the Church, and, as all pastors do, he found that a large number of his well-to-do members were better supplied with excuses than with cash.

But after his first experience, the pastor would invariably call on Jones, and just as invariably Jones would have a check ready. Sometimes it was just a small sum, sometimes unexpectedly large, and always Jones would explain that he had been reading about the matter in the Church paper and that he had "figured out about what he ought to give."

Was Jones rich, after all? The question was a natural one, but the men who knew assured the pastor that, while he had a comfortable income, Jones was not rated as a rich man.

"Yet," said the pastor, "when you men are unable to do anything, Jones always has the cash; how do you explain it?" They couldn't explain it, and one day the pastor made bold to ask Jones himself.

"Jones," he said, "when I came here I sized you up as an ordinary type of man, but I have reached the conclusion that you are the most remarkable man I ever knew. You say you are not rich, and others confirm what you say; yet times without number when the wealthiest men have not been able to help in some Church enterprise you have had the money ready for me, and you seem always to have reached a decision as to just what amount you should give for a particular purpose. What's the explanation?"

"Simple enough," said Jones. "You see, I've been a tither all my life. I don't feel that it is obligatory on a Christian to give a tenth, nor that it is obligatory on him to stop with a tenth; but I think the tenth is a pretty good rule, so I keep a careful account with my business and regularly I put apart in a separate fund one-tenth of all I earn.

"I keep that as a trust fund for the Lord's work. Sometimes I give to the Church from other funds, but I never use this particular fund for any purpose except Christian service. I count it as a trust fund and consider that my whole duty concerning it is to decide just what portion ought to be used for each cause that may be presented.

"My greatest help is my Church paper. It tells me about all of the activities and needs of the Church. I think about them all, determine which is most important and then use my trust fund as I believe the Lord would have it used, a little for some purposes and more for others. But because of my plan, I always have some cash on hand.

"Men who have much more than I, count all of their money as belonging to them, and so they spend it as they please. If you strike them at the right time they willingly help, but often they have promised all available funds for other purposes. I count at least one-tenth as the Lord's money, and I never touch the Lord's money except for the Lord's work."

The pastor went away saying to himself, "I wish there were more like Jones."—Western Christian Advocate.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Monticello Missionary Society held its monthly meeting on Friday night, November 7, 1930. The meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. W. F. Burton. The devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Russel McKinney, and the prayer was led by Mrs. T. F. Faucette. The remainder of the program consisted of a reading by Mrs. N. G. Walker and a discussion by Mrs. W. F. Burton on the subject, "More for Missions, and Why."

Mrs. D. E. Michael was elected corresponding secretary, after which the meeting adjourned and refreshments were served.

(MRS.) D. E. MICHAEL.

NOTICE.

I would be pleased to assist in the organization of a Christian Endeavor Society at any Church which does not have a society at the present time. I would also appreciate an opportunity to appear on the regular program of any Christian Endeavor Society. At the present time my schedule is open the first Sunday night in each month and all of each fifth Sunday. My address is Duke University, Durham, N. C., Box 4367.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

AVON PARK, FLA.: The Sunday School of Union Congregational Church is publishing a mimeographed paper which is well produced and full of interesting information about the school and the classes. This Church on Sunday evening, November 30th, gave a beautiful musical service, the local choir being assisted by soloists from Bartow.

REV. M. L. HARGRAVES has the practice of holding a Sunday School institute at some point in connection with his broad field on the fifth Sundays of the month. Local speakers are brought in to the meeting, which is open to all denominations. A printed program is published and distributed well in advance of the day. The institutions are well attended.

CONGREGATIONAL HAND BOOK: The Congregational Hand Book for 1931 is ready for distribution, and samples are being sent to the pastors. This issue of the Hand Book is full of useful and helpful information with regard to Congregational matters, and also has a fine series of prayer-meeting topics prepared by Dr. Gilroy, who will each week publish in the Congregationalist an editorial comment upon the topics for the week. The book is of great usefulness and should receive hearty distribution.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR movement is gaining strength in the rural Churches of Alabama. On a recent Sunday, the vice-president of a rural society was observed carefully preparing a program for several hours. Lack of reference material makes it necessary that the leaders in the work shall work it all through beforehand and then distribute the assigned parts. The meeting which resulted from this preparation was largely attended and well carried out. Miss Marguerite Davison, the local pastors, and the officers of the C. E. Societies are responsible for the growth of this interest.

THE GEORGES have consented to stay with the First Church, Memphis. The congregation has elected him pastor for life. Thinking that it might be best for the people to have a variety of pastors, Dr. George told them that he thought that eleven years was their share of him. They wished more. In this pastorate the Church has been much strengthened by members received and by the quality of the ministry to the congregation and city. Dr. George is regarded as one of the chief clergymen of Tennessee's metropolis. The Georges are at home in the fine parsonage which he built alongside the brick colonial-style Church.

MISSIONARY MONEYS contributed for the purpose should in no case be used for another. Church treasurers and business committees are morally bound to send to the State Conference office, for distribution among the several missionary agencies, every dollar that the people of the Church have contributed to Congregational missions. Moreover, this should be done promptly. The State Conference missionary societies have to pay their bills month by month exactly the same as does the local Church. They are the agents of individual Congregationalists for bringing in the kingdom of God as is the local Church. Let it be a matter of honor, therefore, to see that the entire amount raised for missions reaches the State Conference office on or before January 10th, when the books close. If necessary, borrow money in order to do this.

AN ATTRACTIVE DIARY is offered by the Commission on Missions, in order to stimulate the practice of budgeting by Church members by the suggestion of a good system of allotment and accounting. The 1931 "Diary and Budgeting Account Book" contains 62 pages, with gilt edges, bound in red leatherette. It is vest-pocket size and contains the diary, the budgeting account and suggestions for budgeting, calendars, postage rates, first-aid instruction, and space for addresses and memoranda. The diary would sell for 50 cents in a book store. They make good Christmas presents for business men. How many do you wish at 25 cents each, postage paid. Order from Drs. Ensminger, Sweet, or Gillette.

STEELE, ALA.: Near the tri-cities—Gadsden, Alabama City, and Attalla—is a small place, Steele, and towering above this town is Chandler's Mountain, with an altitude of 1,900 feet above sea level. The plateau on the mountaintop is as wide as three miles and is eight miles long. Corn and cotton are grown in the soil. There are three Churches on this height. For three years, the Rev. Annie C. Moats has been pastor of the Congregational Church and has preached in the Methodist Church once a month. There is good co-operation among the people. Our work has been built up by Mrs. Moats. Rev. Jos. P. Bean has taken charge of the work again.

DR. S. PARKES CADMAN, pastor of Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., will deliver a series of addresses during "Religious Emphasis Week," to be observed at the University of Florida February 25th through March 3rd, it was announced by President John J. Tigert. Mr. Cadman, who is well known to the American people through his radio programs on Sunday afternoons, is of English birth and received his early college training at Wesleyan College, Richmond, Surrey, England. He has been pastor of Central Congregational Church since 1901. From 1924 to 1928 he was president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and radio minister of the same organization since 1928.

REV. JOHN MADISON TROSPER, veteran pastor in the Kentucky fellowship, is now caring for Pilgrim Church, Corbin, as well as for the Evarts Church. Born at Woodbine, within three miles of Corbin, he has now returned to be near his aged parents at Woodbine. Bro. Trosper had had few parishes. He was in school work at Nat, Ala., and pastor at Thorsby, and then went to Evarts for a service of more than ten years. Following his work at Stearns, he returned to Evants for another five years, and some of the Evarts people are now hesitant to have him give part of his time to Corbin. Mrs. Trosper, who has been in school, as well as in Church work, is an indefatigable a worker. Under their leadership, one of the young men of the Evarts Church started out to study for the ministry. He is the Rev. William H. Clem, of Hemingford, Neb. Mrs. Clem also worked with the Trospers. She was Miss Jane Eleanor Bobbitt, and was the community worker at Evarts. Miss Helen Dizney, registered nurse and head nurse in the Esther Barton Hospital of the American Board at Taiku, Shansi, China, spent her early girlhood at Evarts, while her father was principal of Black Mountain Academy. These all are mountain folks who are an example in service.

THE BRAINERD MISSION.

Robert Sparks Walker, a member of Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, has worked sixteen hours a day for five months on his historical book dealing with the Brainerd Mission, and the book is now complete and being examined for publication. While this was a labor of love by our estimable Churchman, it should mean much else to our Church history. Brainerd will become one of the religious and historical shrines of the South.

The work which the American Board carried on for the Cherokees and Creeks touched a region as well as the central point at Brainerd, near Chattanooga. In the historical paper telling of the first Congregational Church organization in Tennessee, and the educational and religious work among the Indians between 1810 and 1840, Mr. Walker mentions Turkeytown, near the present town of Center, Ala., where Cyrus Kingsbury met a general council of the Indians, Chief Glass, a Cherokee dignitary, helped to choose the mission site.

The Board did this work to meet the remarks of critics that the American Indians, as well as East Indians, needed the gospel, after it had established two missions abroad. With Brainerd as the center, other missions and schools were Carmel, Hightower, and Haweis, in Georgia; Creek Path and Willstown, in Alabama, and Candy's Creek in Bradley County, Tenn. The early articles of the Church at Brainerd were lofty, and one can understand why the Indians came twenty, sixty, and 120 miles to attend services there. In 1837 the Indians were moved to the west of the Mississippi. The Church had then 110 members. Many of the missionaries went with the Indians and missions and Churches were continued in the new region. Every Southeastern Conference and Association should be informed regarding Brainerd as soon as the forthcoming book is printed.

COTTON PATCHES FOR THE CHURCH.

Some of the north Alabama Churches have adopted the plan of the planting and tending of a cotton patch by the Church congregation for the benefit of the Church. Last year the Mt. Grove Church had ten acres in cultivation. At the close of the Church year it had paid its pastor in full.

For the coming year, three Churches, ministered to by Rev. Walter H. Curl, have undertaken these projects. The Liberty Grove Church, which has been dormant, is to have two acres in cotton on both sides of the settlement. The Friendship Church, of Caddo, is to have two patches of three acres each, and land, seed and fertilizer are to be provided. Mt. Moriah Church, of Moulton, is to have two tracts of four acres each. The co-operative work comes about partly through its promotion by the Rev. Matthias D. Morgan, moderator of the Association.

BRO. FLOWERS' WORK.

Rev. A. R. Flowers has spent about two and one-half months in sections of South Carolina, and we feel that it behooves us to express our deep appreciation for the splendid work he has done, especially among our young people. His lectures during this time have been instrumental in leading about eighty of these young people to take a decided stand for Christ and the Church. Bro. Flowers has worked in five different States this year, and communications from these different States prove that he is a real inspiration to many of our ambitious young people in their efforts to prepare themselves for the duties of life, and we shall be very glad to have him in our district any time he can come our way.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XVIII.

S. S. Minnekahda, Sunday, July 20, 1930.

They say that last night was rainy, blustery, and one of high seas and bulging billows. I knew nothing of it. I slept the sleep of the grateful and composed, while sleepless eyes and skilled hands manned and manipulated the great ship in security, constantly driving us at tremendous speed toward home and loved ones. I arose at 10 this A. M. and looked out on a restless, rolling sea, with its white and blue intertwining and blending into each other. At 10:30, Dr. Coffin preached a moving and a mighty sermon. He took for his text the 44th chapter of Isaiah, and now, late in the afternoon, not having taken any notes, I can only pencil in my diary the outstanding points in the sermon. In the chapter read, man (primitive man) is pictured protecting himself, then feeding himself, and then after he had protected, warmed and fed himself, he takes what he has left of the food or wood, and makes of it a god and bows down to it. "He heweth him down cedars and taketh the cypress and the oak. . . . then shall it be for a man to burn: for he will take thereof, and warm himself; yea, he kindleth it, and baketh bread; yea, he maketh a god and worshipeth it: he maketh it a graven image and falleth down thereto." So wrote Isaiah. This is the world's trouble today. It uses its material substance for protection and food and raiment, and then makes of what is left a god of gold, or silver, and worships that material substance.

However, Isaiah's description shows that the desire for religion is as elemental as the desire for food or shelter. Along with the craving for protection and nourishment, God put in man also a longing for that which is more than food or protection. Man's danger is in putting other things first. It is not things, nor the possession of things, but the principle with which we handle things, that makes us superior, if we are superior, to our forefathers. If our forefathers handled and managed their material substance with higher ideals, nobler impulses and better principles than those with which we handle things, then they were superior to us. If we have improved in our ideals and principles of handling the material substance that God has given us, then we are an improvement on our forefathers. We think of our wealth in terms of what it has cost. Sometimes it has cost our whole mind and strength and has absorbed our soul. In such instances, when we say a man is worth $100,000, we tell the literal, the sad and tragic truth. We are superior to the past, not in the things we have, but only in the superiority of principles and ideals by which we use those things. Moreover, many of us do like the primitive man that Isaiah describes, viz: We take out of life its pleasures, its luxuries, its comforts, and then hand God only the residue. Jesus Christ warned us against this when He said, "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Dr. Coffin's plea is that since we have an elemental longing for God and the divine, that we put God's kingdom first into our thinking and into our living and not just give Him "a hand-out" after we have filled ourselves to the full with luxury, ease and abundance. It was a great sermon and made a profound impression on the great audience that met in the ship's large dining-room which had been changed since the morning meal into a place of worship, of praise and of prayer. Sunday is a good day on our ship. There was a sermon at 10:30, which, seemingly, nearly all passengers heard, and then there were Sunday School, especially for the children at 2:30, and a lecture at 3 P. M.

And the sun is shining in all its glory and gladness. At 4 P. M., when the services of worship for the day are over, I find out on deck that the sea breeze is cooling, life-giving and buoyant. The sea heaves and rolls in graceful billows. One seems to be in another and a different world. How beautiful, how blessed, how glorious this holy Sabbath out on the far, far, rolling sea, where all is reverence and quiet and restful and full of the presence and the power of God. Our captain tells me he has been at sea for forty years, and that he now feels far safer out on sea than he does on land. He does not enjoy trying, on land, to escape being run over by autos or getting knocked down and dragged out in the pushing throng. He will take his chances every time far out on the sea, even with the winds blowing a-gale, the tempests howling, and the billows beating. I have learned that human nature is a very adaptable sort of thing. We get used to our homes, our community, our daily tasks, and think our lot cast in the most pleasant places. I recall now, as I write this line in my diary, that one of our workers in Carroll County, Va., described to a large audience in eastern Virginia living conditions as they obtain in mountain cabins and remote districts, and the lack of comforts and modern conveniences. After the services, a very intelligent man of the audience asked me the point-blank question, "If conditions are like that in the mountains, why in the world don't those people move?" My reply was, "You could not move them with a derrick; and if you will not consider me disrespectful, I would like to know why don't you move?" We get used to the locality and the conditions under which we live, and you could not move us for the world. This is why the old Greek writers said that the people of Sparta sprung up from dragon's teeth. The gods killed some dragons and sowed their teeth in the niggardly soil of Sparta and a very hearty race sprung up there. They would not move. They could not. They were tied to the soil from which they sprang. God made human nature that way. Some of us who have lived in the country all our lives would not live in great cities if they would give us mansions. And many who are accustomed to the great cities, with their noise and bluster, would not live in the country for all the millions you could offer them.

Our worthy captain tells us he will never, never be a land-lover, and hopes that God will see fit to let him die out at sea on his ship, so that he may find his last resting-place beneath the waters and the billows on which he has spent the years of his earthly toil and pilgrimage. As for me, I prefer to be buried on land.

Our orchestra, at the lunch hour today, played beautiful and appropriate music. It played those hymns that are sweet and sacred to the human heart and somehow lifted the soil toward things high, noble and sublime. A radiogram today tells us that the United States weltered in heat on Saturday, the 19th; Chicago had a temperature of 103; Washington 117 (?); out at sea it was exceedingly pleasant.

I find that not only the sea is moody and changes its mind quite often, but the weather at sea is also moody and reserves to itself the right of immediate change. On deck, at 4:30, it was balmy and breezy and comfortable. In a half-hour I fished out and put on an overcoat and went under a warm steamer rug. Other passengers do likewise. And yet we are only about four hundred miles out from New York, where they tell us the whole city is weltering in heat.

At dinner tonight, the captain dining with us, the conversation turns on the difference between life at sea and on land. The good captain argues the superior advantages and blessings of life at sea and gives his reasons for wanting to spend all his days and be buried at sea. One reason he prefers a sea burial is for the sake of economy. He says that folks who live on land spend a small fortune trying to get a decent burial, by the way of a fine casket, hearse and flowers and such. At sea, a very neat but inexpensive casket will do, and as it slides over the side of the ship into the deep, amid the solemn hush and reverence of the seamen, who look on, there is little cost or expense to any one, and this tabernacle of clay gets out of the way, the soul having taken its flight to the upper or the nether world.

Dr. Coffin would not object to being buried at sea. He says: "The body has been a good old house; now he is done with it, let it be cremated or dropped quietly into the sea and get out of the way, since it is no longer inhabited or needed." Smith and I prefer a burial in the usual way with us of the land. Possibly this is because of custom. At any rate, through our worship and reverence today, the fact has been emphasized that the soul is more than, and superior to, the body, and when the soul can no longer use this body and it ceases to function, why worry about the clay, when the soul has gone to be with the God who made it? Our captain thinks that Dr. Coffin's sermon of the morning was great, and he hopes from this day to so handle his ship with such superior principles and ideals as to prove himself worthy of the Captain of his soul; and when the gong sounds and "taps" are given from this body of clay, he will go out to meet the good Captain who laid down His life and gave Himself "that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but shall have everlasting life." J. O. A.

SCOPE OF THE MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE.

No doubt many CHRISTIAN SUN readers think of the missionary enterprise as being a rather meager affair and of small moment. We gain this impression from looking at the little we do for missions and the insignificant contribution we make to missions. It may help us to assemble the figures and look at what is actually being accomplished. Out in the non-Christian lands there are today 29,188 foreign missionaries, and in addition to these, 151,735 native workers. These are all of the evangelical faith, conducting Christian work, preaching, teaching and seeking to win souls to Christ in 4,598 stations and in 50,513 outstations. There are 36,246 Churches, with a membership of 3,614,154 communicants representing Christianity in the darkness of the non-Christian world. Counting all adherents, the number is 8,342,378, to say nothing of the other millions who are impressed and influenced by the missionary on the field. There are out there 50,079 missionary schools, ranging from kindergartens to great universities, with 2,440,148 pupils. Of this number, more than 25,000 are in college grades. In addition to all these which are doing evangelistic and Christian education work, there are 858 hospitals, with 1,686 dispensaries, which treated in one year 4,788,258 patients in the name and spirit of the Great Physician. The Bible is printed and is being distributed in 853 languages and dialects at the rate of over 25,000,000 copies a year. There are in these mission fields and in a part of foreign mission work 104 leper asylums, 32 schools for the deaf and blind, and 361 orphanages. We little reckon when we are giving to foreign missions that we are really giving to that which plants and supports Christian education, benevolent and friendly activities and charitable organizations.

Many thoughtless and heartless critics of the foreign missionary enterprise withhold their gifts and ease their conscience by saying it takes too much of the dollar to get the other part over there; some even going so far as to say that it takes a dollar to carry the other dollar to its destination. This, in face of the fact now well established and fully known of those who investigate, that there is no enterprise on earth conducted with such economy, such accuracy and with such marvelous results as the foreign missionary enterprise. In this enterprise we see the power of our Lord at its best, the work of the Church at its best, Christianity at its best. It should be borne in mind that our Saviour Himself is responsible for the missionary enterprise and instituted the Church that it might share with Him the burden and the joy of this, the mightiest task ever undertaken among the children of men. THE ELON MILLION-DOLLAR CAMPAIGN.

AN OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The million-dollar campaign committee charged its executive committee with the duty of employing field workers for the campaign. The committee has been casting about since the 21st of October, when we had our famous "set-up" meeting at the college to find a suitable person for this work. We have not been hasty in reaching our conclusion, and we do not thing we have made any mistake.

Let me say before I go further, that we have at no time considered employing any professional money-raiser, or high-powered campaign salesman. We have been looking for a straight-forward, religious man, who had had experience in this type of work, and who would be reasonable in his requirements for compensation and thoroughly satisfactory in his methods of approach to ministers and individuals.

Mr. Charles V. Hurd, a member of the Christian Church, has been employed for this purpose. Mr. Hurd has had experience in raising money for Davidson College, Davidson, N. C.; Queens-Chicora, Charlotte; Montevallo College, Montevallo, Ala.; the Georgia State Sunday School Association, Atlanta, Ga., and also in other relationships. We have carefully investigated his record, and we believe that he is the type of man we need for this position.

Mr. F. L. Jackson, treasurer of Davidson College, says: "Mr. Hurd is a man of high Christian character and ideals, and I believe he would make you as good a man for soliciting in rural Churches as you could find anywhere. Our relations with Mr. Hurd were always pleasant. We found him agreeable to suggestions, and if we were going into another campaign I see no reason why we would not be willing to use Mr. Hurd."

President O. C. Carmichael, of Montevallo College, says: "Mr. Chas. V. Hurd did very good work for us as a field man, and we would employ him again as such if we were in a money-raising campaign. We recommend him to you."

President W. H. Fraser, of Chicora-Queens College, says: "Mr. Hurd is an excellent field man. He works hard and makes good. We were well pleased with his service."

Mr. R. D. Webb, of the Georgia State Sunday School Association, says: "Mr. Hurd recently worked for us in an intensive three months' campaign. He did excellent work, and we were more than pleased with his service. During this campaign he worked in the city of Atlanta. We would have no hesitation in employing him again."

The committee believes in setting forth the whole facts in the case. Mr. Hurd's duties will be to visit all Churches of the Congregational and Christian persuasion of the Southeast, and, in co-operation with the pastor and local leaders, raise, through individual gifts, the quotas that have been suggested and which we herewith reprint in full.

Mr. Hurd will need the co-operation of ministers and the local leaders in this work, and we bespeak for him not only co-operation, but deep sympathy on the part of all.

You will note that we are not asking our Churches to do anything more during this campaign than they have been doing in the name of their Churches. The alumni of the college are to raise the expenses of the campaign, and we expect to get the million itself from foundations and persons of generous disposition who are willing to give over and above the quotas assigned to the Churches.

I wish to say in closing that the committee is to compensate Mr. Hurd for his services at the rate of $200.00 a month and his expenses of travel. I request, on behalf of the committee and of the college, that all our ministers and Christian workers will welcome this Christian gentleman and give him all the help within their power.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The annual session of the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America was held in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., December 2-3, 1930. The meeting was one of interest, receiving reports and discussing subjects of vital importance to the present condition and future obligation of the Protestant Church to human society not only in this country but throughout the world. Among these questions were Christian education, evangelism, international justice and good will, race relations, the liquor problem, mercy and relief, and the question of world peace and prohibition.

When more than a hundred delegates from all over the United States, at their own expense, come together to consider prayerfully and intelligently these great problems, it shows, at least, the religious interest taken in the welfare of humanity. Dr. Walter L. Lingle, president of Davidson College, N. C., was president; Dr. Rivington D. Lord was recording secretary; Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, who has been general secretary for twenty years, resigned and read a historic sketch of his labors and the work of the Federal Council, which was very heartening and prophetic. The world is moving toward the abolition of war, and the Churches are leading the way. The loyalty of this great organization, composed of thirty denominations, to the eighteenth amendment, as the soul of prohibition, is a force that wet opposition cannot overthrow. Drs. F. G. Coffin, Warren H. Denison, Martyn Summerbell, H. H. Short, Roy C. Helfenstein, and this scribe, represented the Christian Church.

During the same time, though longer, December 1-5, 1930, the North American Home Mission Congress met in the Calvary Baptist Church to consider home missions in all its aspects and opportunities. The five days given to the problems in this field were days of intense interest, information, inspiration, and a revelation of failures, neglect, and obligation for greater work. In that meeting, eight hundred men and women, representing Churches, societies, States and cities, compared plans, purposes, and prospects, and revealed a growing desire for closer co-operation on the part of different denominations in the interest of the kingdom. The spirit of unity is increasing all the time, and the longing for still greater unity crops out through addresses and discussions. The soul of Protestantism believes in unity and the demand for greater efficiency in mission service moves toward greater unity and more unified co-operation. Great addresses were delivered, great reports were made, and a greater effort to preach Christ is the purpose for the future. The harmony in this great congress was even greater than in some meetings of a single denomination. No one seemed to have any selfish end to serve, only the interest of the kingdom. The same members of the Christian Church who were members of the Executive Committee of the Federal Council were also members of this body, with Dr. Minton added. The two outstanding addresses were delivered by Dr. H. Oliver, moderator of United Church of Canada, and Dr. John R. Mott.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

The supreme need of the pulpit today is an educated and consecrated ministry; the supreme need of the pew is a consecrated membership; and the supreme need of each individual is a consecration full and complete of all we have and are to the work of saving the world. Our Church machinery is ponderous and of the most improved character; our array of formal ceremonies are imposing, but the fire of enthusiasm burns low, the power is weak, the music is dull and spritless—a baptism of the Spirit upon the pulpit and pew would add more to the efficiency of the Church and the power of the pulpit than all the titles ever conferred by human schools. This baptism of the Spirit can never come until all the tithes are brought into the storehouse; in other words, the windows of heaven cannot be opened until all we have, and are, is consecrated to God.

This consecration of the entire life—physical, mental, and spiritual, with all that we may acquire—must be carried on perpetually. We cannot consecrate ourselves in advance. What I am must be consecrated now, for I shall be different tomorrow from what I am today, and unless I am better in every way, stronger, richer, and more Christ-like, something has failed me, or I have failed in the application of forces and conditions to my life. What I shall be tomorrow depends upon what I am today, and what I am today is the aggregate result of all the influences of all my past life. What we are now, what we have now, what we can do now, must be consecrated to God and His service. We could not consecrate it before we had it. I cannot consecrate a manhood I have not developed; I cannot give a dollar that is not mine; I cannot lay upon the altar something I have not got, and may never get; but what I have must be given to God at the time I have it.

This full consecration will give to life one supreme purpose. The whole range of thought is lifted to a higher plane, and the entire life receives tone and power. It will set up a new standard of excellence, give a new definition of achievement, and a new measure of success. The one supreme purpose will be to achieve under the Jesus' standard of moral excellence. He said, "Whosoever would become great among you," and "Whosoever would be first among you, let him be your servant." Let this principle be applied to all human endeavor: that success is measured by the amount of service rendered, and not the amount one may get for himself, and you will have the finest expression of the Christian idea.

When a Christian public opinion has accepted the standard of Jesus and decided on this new prize, when men in business understand that to be counted great and eminent they must be in the fullest sense a servant, when each person in the truest sense can feel the forec of the words of Jesus: "I am in the midst of you as he that serveth," there will come a new day to the Church and its institutions. The good of all is the good of each—of this we can no longer deceive ourselves. To seek selfish ends is to forfeit the love and gratitude of men and to lose life. To win gratitude and love is to earn earth's highest award.

Pure religion is more than a doctrine, more than sentiment, ritual, code of action, or ceremony. We often hesitate to do what we could, because we cannot do what we want to do; but what we have must be consecrated. A little, thoroughly consecrated to God, means more for humanity than all the world may have if unconsecrated. It is not power that lifts the world; it is consecrated power.

HEAR A BUSINESS MAN.

Mr. Roger Babson, the most widely known trade statistician in America, sends out a letter to the "trade," bankers, merchants, business men, in which he preaches a real sermon. Read it:

"In my special letter, dated October 6th, I suggested that later the nations would recognize the economic value of accumulating spiritual wealth, but that they are not now in the mood to do so. Reports, which have since come to me, lead me to believe that such a time may, however, be much nearer than I had then thought. Apparently, people today are not only tired out physically, but are discouraged. They lack that faith which is essential to personal or national progress. Accompanying this lack of faith is a disrespect for law, order and experience. Children are self-sufficient of their parents; and parents are self-sufficient of their God. In fact, faith, to be effective, must be backed up by righteousness. Faith cannot be bought or quickly obtained when in trouble—like medicine. Faith must be acquired slowly, before it is needed—like education. Faith comes through patient devotion, right living and service to others.

"A great mass of wage-workers, executives and young business people have never before witnessed a severe business depression. Ever since Germany dclared war in 1914—with the exception of a short readjustment period after the war ended—there has been a constant demand for labor. Not only was the supply of available labor reduced by the war; but an extra amount of labor was needed for rehabilitation work. Moreover, the willingness of American and other investors to purchase liberally foreign bonds has provided the funds for such rehabilitation. Today, the situation is entirely different. A new generation—too young to enter the war in 1914 to 1918—has swamped the labor markets of every country; the rehabilitation work has largely been completed; and owing to the reluctance of investors to buy more foreign bonds, no money is available for new work.

"In view of the steady work and easy profits which the above-described condition made possible, this new generation has felt sufficient in itself. Sabbath schools and Churches have been neglected, family prayers have been given up, and Sunday has been made a common holiday. Hence, unlike previous generations, a large percentage of the people now unemployed, or losing money in business, have no faith upon which to fall back. They have no spiritual wealth upon which to draw and they are tired out physically.

"What is true of individuals is also true of nations. This is especially illustrated by conditions in England. England's courage and stability during the past centuries have been due to her religious faith. Although this faith has often exhibited an intolerance which is a blot on her history, yet even these acts were reactions from an abnormal and misled religious belief. This faith, however crude as it was, provided the foundation for England's power, growth and prosperity. Furthermore, the lack of religious faith may be the real cause of England's present economic difficulties.

"More religion—rather than more legislation—is the need of the hour. The solution of Britain's economic difficulties will come, as in the past, when a great religious revival sweeps the nation. This revival may be of a different form from those of 1880-1890, but its essential purpose—namely, to arouse the faith, purposes and ambitions of men to service—must be the same. Yea, I expect to see such a revival sweep Europe and America during the next decade. It seems inevitable to any one who studies religious and economic history."

CHALLENGE OF THE HOUR TO CHURCHES

By Bishop Wm. F. McDowell, Ch'n Washington Committee of Federal Council.

(An address of welcome delivered at the opening session of the annual meeting of the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of Churches, held in Washington, D. C., December 2-3, 1930.)

The Protestant Churches in the Capital welcome the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ to the Capital. At the same time, we welcome the return of Congress and pray that the coming of both bodies may be in the name of the Lord. Each has a vital relation to the kingdom of Christ. The relations are not the same, but each is vital. If either fails, the kingdom will suffer. If either is controlled by small politics or devotes itself to small policies or is governed by small ideals, the world will be worse off. And the world does not need to be any worse off than it now is. The call of the hour yonder under the dome and here in the Church where Lincoln worshiped is for statesmanship equal to any the Church or State has seen in the centuries.

The Federal Council seems especially called just now to make a richer, fuller contribution of what may be called spiritual statesmanship than it has ever made. We can depend upon Congress for certain things; certain very noble things. I am not of those who think or speak flippantly of Congress, but we cannot depend upon Congress for the things that make the very life of the Churches of Christ. However much we desire it, we can hardly expect Congress to be as concerned to know the perfect will of Christ for today and to identify itself with Him in His purposes and plans as the Churches of Christ must. We are very likely to see the duties of Congress more clearly than we see our own, and to be more aware of the faults and shortcomings of Congress than of our own. But a clear vision of other people's duties is not the largest achievement of a body like ours, so that I think our supreme concern here this week is not what Congress shall hear and heed from us, but what we shall hear and heed from the living Christ whose name we bear.

It is the natural fate of a body like ours to become absorbed in its policies and its activities, sometimes even to develop its chief assurance and affirmations in realms somewhat apart from its own true center. We are too prone to try to handle the significant affairs of the day with hands that are both withered. The Churches of Christ can easily consume themselves on the secondary thought highly useful interests and neglect the first things of life and the kingdom. Life itself runs down, like a watch, being useful and doing its duty. It needs ever and again to be brought face to face with its standards, to be renewed by fresh contact with its real sources of power, to see whether it is off the key, or to speak with immediate and direct words. Life needs evermore a closer contact with God, clearer vision from God, a deeper fellowship with God and a wider understanding of God. We are coming here as Churches of Christ in America, but both America and the Churches have all too meager and shallow a life in God. The anniversary of Pentecost passed over us and through us all too superficially. It has not left upon the Churches or their sons and daughters a mark that will be talked of through the years as that early experience did when the Church was young.

We may make here this week great affirmations upon many subjects. We ought to make them upon such themes as world peace, world morals, liberty under law, human life and human relations. But we shall miss our high calling unless we chiefly make mighty affirmations in the relms of religious life and experience, the will of God for human character and society, the redemption of life from evil by Jesus Christ and the filling and irradiating of life by the Holy Spirit. In these realms we can speak with authority, in these realms as nowhere else, here as no one else can or will. These are the gates that we can open and none can shut. And we are not opening any gates unless we are opening these.

I must speak frankly, my dear brethren. I believe the world wants from us, expects from us, needs from us, deserves from us, a great word from God, the God of our Lord Jesus Christ. "This God of whom our lives are scant." Here is where American life is breaking. "God is not in our thoughts." We are not seeking to make American a disciple of Christ, to swear it to Him by a new sacrament of baptism, to lead it to observe all the things that He commands. I am not sure that the early Christians out-thought the world on every subject, but they did out-think it as to the meaning of God in human life. They had seen the fact of God in Jesus Christ and had not died, but lived. They saw the life that was the light of men. And I can see no way out for us except God's way as shown in Jesus Christ. If we take for granted that the American mind and the mind of Christ are hopelessly incompatible, and that we need not seek to make them one, then all our ideals as Churches of Christ are changed, if not lost.

Members of the Federal Council, we are glad you are here. We want to feel your influence, to read and approve what you may say in resolution and speech. But I speak for this, your Capital, when I say that chiefly we want to remember, when you have gone, that new heavens opened while you were here, that we saw you sitting together in heavenly things in Christ Jesus, that we saw Him sitting in your midst with a new light upon His face. We would like to remember that we heard a new sound as of a rushing, mighty wind, that we saw cloven tongues like as of fire, and that with a new human understanding we heard again of the living God.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(December.)

Dear Jesus, Prince of God, all hail! Thou, whom the Father didst send, of whom the angels sang, whom now we worship and adore, gifts to Thee we bring, gifts for use. Ability, time, means, self, we lay upon Thy altar of love. O make them Thine, we pray. Love only, Father, brought to earth Thy Son, the Holy Babe in manger laid. Bow our heads, bend our knees, lift our hearts, loose our tongues, that, to Him, the Prince of Peace, the conquering King, the lowly Saviour, universally and eternally shall ascend the honor and homage and praise and thanksgiving due His holy name. For His sake. Amen.

SHALL WE QUIT?

There is much criticism of missionary work. It is a work carried on through heartaches, divisions, misunderstandings, and sometimes bitter disappointment. Often one interested feels like saying, "Let's quit." But shall we? To this question, the facts force us to say, "No, we will not quit," and for three reasons:

First: God instituted the missionary work and laid upon His Son the missionary task. And has never quit. The simple fact is that the Son of God instituted the Church, that it might be a missionary force. This is the elemental work of the Church. And the Church is the only institution on earth that undertakes the missionary task. In all other enterprises and tasks of the Church, the world about us will help through fraternal orders, benevolent societies and a friendly State. The Church alone, however, undertakes to carry the gospel to the uttermost parts, and sponsors and supports every missionary on the field today. The Church has faltered, has often been indifferent, has had splits, schisms and divisions enough to discourage the most sanguine, but God has never quit. He called Paul to be a missionary. The world and those who did not believe in missions made it very hard for Paul, and his best-laid plans were often thwarted. He suffered beatings, shipwrecks, imprisonment, perils by sea and by land, and finally martyrdom. They killed Paul, but God never quit. When the first modern missionaries were sent out by the American Board more than one hundred years ago, they took their lives in their own hands and were persecuted, imprisoned, threatened, many of them martyred, murdered. It was a dark day, seemingly, a doubtful outlook, but God never quit. From the time the American Board was organized in 1810 till this good hour, there has not been a decade in which missionaries on the field, working unselfishly and devotedly for their Lord, have not been murdered. But God never quit. He never has quit! He never will until those in the uttermost parts, as well as we ourselves, have had an opportunity of knowing Him, "whom to know is life eternal."

Second: We shall not quit because the missionary enterprise reveals more faith in man and in God than any other enterprise ever instituted on earth. When we give a dollar to a charity or benevolence nearby, we know and see exactly for what that dollar is spent; little faith is required. But when we lay a dollar on the altar to go to fields afar, to bear a message of love for our Lord, that requires faith—faith both in those we do not know and will never see, and also in God for whose sake and in whose name the dollar is given. From the beginning till now, the missionary enterprise is the child of faith, and requires faith for its very life and support. When the first missionaries went out, they preached for years without a convert; and when missionaries go out now, they toil on, often for months or years, without visible results. They labor in faith. They believe in the power of God to save to the uttermost, and in this belief they exercise a faith not required in the support of any other institution or enterprise known to man. We shall never quit. Our faith in God will not let us quit. God began the missionary work. He alone is responsible for it. And He never quits.

Third: We shall not quit because the missionary enterprise has been made sacred by the blood of more martyrs and heroes than that of any other enterprise or institution known to man. Every history of missions—and there are many—written for the least two centuries could have been written not with ink, but with blood; the blood of those who laid down their lives, murdered and martyred on the field of service for their God. The missionary enterprise through every decade of its history has been marked by the blood, by the death of those who knew the perils that they faced, and yet gave all, dared all, laid down all, not loving their lives unto the death, for the sake of their Lord. Sacrifice—the sacrifice of life, of social privileges and pleasures, of the ties that bind to home and loved ones, the sacrifice of all earthly pursuits near and dear to the heart of man, have been made in the missionary enterprise. We cannot quit, unless we play false with the blood of Him who died that we might live, and the blood of the martyrs who offered themselves, that, through them, the gospel might be preached.

The missionary enterprise, then, is the most sacred, the most holy, the most divine of any enterprise known to man. God instituted it, and His zeal carries it forward. (Isa. 9:7) "The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this." He has never quit. Shall we?

WORLD FIELD AND SPIRITUAL SALVATION.

Finally, the Church needs a world field for its spiritual salvation. Some one asked Phillips Brooks what he would first do if he were called to be pastor of a broken-down Church—a Church that had lost its building, was not able to support a pastor, and was torn by internal dissension. He hesitated only a moment and then replied, "I should get all the people together, preach the greatest sermon I could on world-wide missions, and take the best offering I could get for work in heathen lands." Many official boards would seriously discuss the sanity of a preacher who would do that sort of thing under those circumstances. Here is a Church which cannot take care of itself, and a man comes along and tells it the first thing needed is to help take care of a work across the sea. From every worldly viewpoint, it would be a great blunder, but God does not look at things from a worldly viewpoint. Phillips Brooks never spoke a greater truth. He knew that selfish, discouraged Church, almost ready to give up the fight, had need of one thing above all else. That Church needed the Spirit of Christ, and Phillips Brooks knew that the best way to get that Spirit was by way of the ends of the earth. He knew if he could get those people interested in the man across the sea, they would be interested in the man across the street. If that little Church began to have fellowship with Christ in the salvation of the whole world, it would save itself. Its difficulties and selfishness at home would vanish as it entered into the supreme need of the Church in the homeland; to be possessed with the world-passion of Jesus. That would help it settle Church difficulties of every nature. The Christian Century says, "Viewing the modern missionary enterprise dispassionately, it is probably well within the facts to say that, whatever blessing it may have brought to the objects of its concern, it has brought an even greater blessing to the Church which has launched and maintained it."—"The Preacher and His Missionary Message," by Dr. Stephen J. Corey.

MONTHLY MISSIONARY PROGRAM.

Women's Societies.

Service of worship (for a spirit of service).
Map talk on Africa.
Roll call, on Africa.
Introduction of guest from Africa.
The African in the United States.
Prayer.

This program is based on the "Guest Book," with which you are all familiar by now, and the suggestions for same will be found in the last September issue of THE SUN. If you do not have access to this issue of THE SUN, send to Mrs. Emma S. Powers for the "News Bulletin," and in that you will find plenty of helps. (If any society wishes the "Guest Book," send request to Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C. The "Guest Book" is furnished gratis to any society or member agreeing to use it.)

Young People's Societies.

Program for Chapter 2, "Mango Village."

1. Business session.
2. Study course:

(1) Review of text, "Star of India," preface and chapter 1.

(2) Leader's introduction to lesson 2 and explanation of caste among Hindus, pages 12-15 (5 minutes).

(3) (a) A visit to Mango Village on a wedding ten days. Some member pretending he is a tourist (page 15). A glimpse, etc., to page 21

(b) A Hindu wedding, second tourist (pages 22-25).

(c) Outside village walls—the "Mahars," third tourist) page 25 to last paragraph page 27).

(4) Locating Mango Village, assignment for next lesson, and concluding remarks preparatory to worship program, leader (pages 27 & 28) and the leader's talk as suggested at the bottom of this page.

3. Worship service—theme, "Villages in Which Jesus Rests."

(1) Instrumental prelude, "Abide With Me."

2. Call to worship, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:14, 16).

(3) Hymn, "Love Divine, All Love Excelling."

(4) Scripture, Luke 10:38-42; John 12:1-3, and Luke 24:50-53.

(5) Solo, "Gracious Spirit, Dwell With Me."

(6) Prayer.

(7) Offertory.

(8) Hymn, "The Lord be With Us."

We have seen a Hindu village. We have compared our own communities with Mange, and have seen the difference in social conditions. Christianity is the power lifting and blessing our villages and cities. But how we neglect Christ! Does our community invite Jesus to dwell and rest with us? consider Bethany, a small village out from Jerusalem. Here Jesus visited many times because of the calm peace. Jesus found love, contentment, thrift, conservative luxury—in short, all the elements of a refreshing welcome in Bethany. It was in Bethany that Jesus wept when His friends wept, and brought comfort and joy in place of tears. Here He was happiest. It was to Bethany that Jesus retired when the strain of "Passion Week" was so exacting. And after death had been swallowed up in the victory of the Resurrection, it was from Bethany that Jesus ascended into heaven.

Willing Workers or Junior Society.

Theme: "Heroes of India."

Decorations: Create atmosphere with top monkeys, parents, schools.

Hymn: "It Makes No Difference, East or West."

Scripture: John 10:10.

Prayer: Dear Father, we would help those who need our help. Train our hands and minds, Lord, for Thy service, and today we especially ask Thee to be near the boys and girls in India. They are living in troublesome times. May Thy will be done in that great land. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Leader: Tell about the castle system in India and why the trouble in India today, etc.

Leader: We have two stories today about Indians who became Christians and what happened. First, a true Robin Hood story, "Story Jumbulinga" and "Chundra Lila."

Leader: What did we discover in these stories?

Leader: Selection of Scribe and writing treasures.

Report of service committee on post-cards and secrifice work.

Leader: Have map drill.

Closing service: Have group tell what India sends to us and what they get from us and what India needs.

Show pictures of India.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson XII—December 21, 1930.

Timothy.

Golden Text: "From a babe thou hast known the sacred writings which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."—2 Tim. 3:15.

Lesson: Acts 16:1-3; Philippians 2:19-22; 2 Tim. 1:1-6, 3:14-16.

(Note: The Christmas lesson, Luke 2:1-20, may be used instead of this lesson about Timothy. The writer of these notes has chosen to write these notes on the lesson about Timothy, not because the Christmas lesson is not first in importance, but because material on the Christmas lesson is to be found in many places, while those who use the lesson on Timothy will probably welcome a few facts about this representative young man.)

A Boy Well Born.

Timothy had a good start. His father was a Greek, and therefore, from the Jewish standpoint, a heathen, but he might have been a man of good character, nevertheless. Be that as it may, Timothy's mother was a godly woman, a Jewess, a woman evidently of fine culture and sterling character. Paul refers to the unfeigned faith that dwelt both in Timothy's mother and his grandmother. Their influence and their manner of life entered into his life.

Timothy was also blessed with religious training. Paul says that "from a babe" he had been instructed in the writings or Scriptures. Timothy's mother knew the supreme importance of starting when children are young. From the time, therefore, that Timothy was a babe, she taught him the Scriptures, which were of course the Old Testament. Wise is that mother who from early childhood fills the mind and heart of the growing child with the stories and the lessons from the Word of God. Children may not be able to understand everything—who of us is there who does?—but there will be a deposit of sacred truth in that young life that will make for character in later days.

A Young Man with a Good Reputation.

It is quite probable that when Paul made his first visit to Lystra he won Timothy's mother to Christ, for when he returned on his second visit she is referred to as a "Jewess who believed." Either through Paul's own efforts or through the efforts of Eunice, his mother, Timothy had become a Christian when Paul returned the second time. It is the greatest thing in the world to lead a young person to Jesus Christ. As parents and Sunday School teachers, that is our first and supreme task. Failure here is fatal.

This young man had made a good impression on his home town. It is stated that he "was well reported of by the brethren." It is a great asset to have a good reputation. Every young person and every older person should see to it that they live in such a sincere, upright way that they shall have a good reputation in the community. Reputation is not the final test of character, but it is a fairly good test. Let every young person guard his good name.

A Man of Christian Character.

Timothy had a good reputation because he was a young man of unquestioned integrity of character. His life had been built upon a solid foundation. He was courageous—Paul said that he had witnessed a good profession before many witnesses; he was loyal—again and again Paul refers to him as one on whom he could depend; he was ambitious to improve himself—Paul reminds him of the gifts that God has given him and encourages Timothy to develop his gifts; he was dependable—Paul could entrust important work to him in full confidence that he would do it; he was unselfish—he looked out for the interests of others and of the kingdom, even at a sacrifice of his own interests. Every young person should try to pattern his life after the example which Jesus Christ has given us. The making of a life is the most important thing that any man ever does. Making a living should come second to making a life.

A Minister of Unselfish Spirit.

Paul says that he had no other one whom he could send on an important errand to the Philippians, for the others sought their own, and not the things which are Jesus Christ's. But Timothy had been proved. He was an unselfish minister who could be depended upon to look after the state of others. Timothy sounds a high note here for every man who aspires to be a good minister of Jesus Christ.

A Friend Faithful to the End.

Timothy stuck by Paul. There was a bond of friendship and a tie of love between this veteran saint of God and this younger minister, to whom Paul refers as his own son in the faith. "As a son with the father"—thus Paul refers to his faithful and beloved co-worker. There is something inspiring in their relationship. And there is something that quickens one's heart in Timothy's affection for the loyalty to the aged apostle in his last days. Let this lesson teach us to prize true friendships and to stand by our friends to the end.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, December 21, 1930.

Topic: "Joy to the World."

Piano prelude: "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear."

Scripture reading: "Fear not: for, behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

"The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwelt in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined."

"For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be under His shoulder: and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

"Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this."

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have eternal life."

Song: "There's a Song in the Air."

Prayer.

First speaker: In spite of the many stories that have been written, there is only one that satisfies on Christmas Day. It is a very simple and a very humble story that we all like to hear at Christmas time. Just the story of a Baby born in a manger; yes, but such a Child! 'Tis just an every-day occurrence—this birth of babies: but this once it changed the history of the whole world. For it was the birth of this Babe born nineteen hundred years ago that was to fulfill prophecy. It was a time of great joy, for He was to bring the good tidings of peace and good will to men.

Reading: The Christmas story (Luke 2:8-14). (This should be given from memory.)

Second speaker: Besides being a time of story, Christmas is a time of song. Many Christmas songs have been written. Many that we have are scores of years old, and still Christmas songs are being written every year. One of the oldest and best-loved of all Christmas carols is Joseph Mohr's "Stille Nacht." For years it has been a favorite of carollers. To be awakened on Christmas Eve by the singing of this carol is a wonderful experience. To hear "Silent Night! Holy Night!" under the silent stars, brings heaven to earth and peace to the heart. It is said that during the recent war, fighting ceased on Christmas Day. Enemies on the battlefield exchanged greetings. Some of our American boys had the thrill of hearing "Silent Night! Holy Night!" in the original language as they spent the day in "no man's land," for Joseph Mohr was an Austrian.

Third speaker: The words of this carol, "Silent Night! Holy Night!" give us a picture of the birth of the Saviour that is tender and beautiful. Nothing could be more perfect than that "all is dark" except the place where the young mother watches over her Child. Then appearing in a sudden light in the heavens, the angels sing, "Allelula! Hail the King!" And then come the wise men who have seen His star "in the East." How significant those words, "in the East"! It is the symbol of a new day. The Christ-Child heralded a day of peace and good will. Long years have passed and still men hate and continue in strife. But still His star shines in the East, and will continue to shine until we have found the way to Him.

Song: "Silent Night! Holy Night!"

Dramatization: "We Three Kings of Orient Are."

Beside a lighted Christmas tree, place a manger. At this manger Mary sits. She is dressed in a long, flowing robe, with a scarf over her head. Place a lighted flashlight in the straw of the manger to represent the Christ-Child. On the wall over the manger should be an illuminated star, or one cut from gold paper.

The three wise men approach the manger from the rear of the room. They may be dressed in bathrobes if nothing better is available. As they come, they sing the first stanza of "We Three Kings of Orient Are" together. Then the first wise man sings the second stanza (without the refrain) and presents his gift. The second and third wise men sing the third and fourth stanzas, respectively, and present their gifts. Then the audience sings with the wise men the last stanza and refrain of the song. As this is being done, the wise men march slowly to the rear and disappear.

Song: "O Little Town of Bethlehem." Let Mary remain at the manger while this song is being sung. Sing the last stanza as the closing prayer, softly, with bowed heads.

Morning-Watch Selections.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

THE DOCTRINE OF GOD. By Albert C. Knudson. The Abingdon Press; $3.50; pp. 434.

Dean Knudson is rated as one of the ablest thinkers in American education. He knows theology and he knows philosophy. No modernist is better informed than he. It is his independent attitude, his masterly technique of sitting in judgment on his own account on all the theories and philosophies that gives his book its unique value. His viewpoint is personalistic, and that means everything in this maze of humanism, mechanism, and behaviorism in philosophy and religion. It is an entrancing volume.

THE PRACTICE STORY-TELLING CLASS.. By Frances W. Danielson. The Pilgrim Press; $1.25; pp. 105.

Miss Danielson demonstrates how stories should be told, not philosophically or theoretically, but actually. As the strong and weak points are brought out in the conversational approach, the members of the group lose their timidity and become expert in the art that all teachers of children must employ—the art of telling stories. A real book—constructive and helpful.

PROCESSION OF THE GODS. By Gaius Glenn Atkins. Richard R. Smith, Inc.; $3.00; pp. 577.

Our present missionary situation makes imperative that we understand and appreciate the non-Christian religions. Dr. Atkins has gathered into these pages the best representation we have of the striving of the human heart after God. You will lay the book down impressed inescapably with the thought that God is real and that the Christian conception of Him satisfies—a conclusion based on fact and not on assumption. It is a hard book to read, but its compensation is to strengthen one's faith in the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

*WHICH GOSPEL SHALL I PREACH. By B. H. Bruner. Richard R. Smith; price, $2.00.

This book is an answer to its own title. Mr. Bruner came out of the war distraught. He could not accept the theory that there were two Gospels—one for the masses and one for the initiates, one for peace and one for war, one for the individual and one for society. To use his own words: "It began to come over me that my chief business was not merely to preach so many sermons, but that I had been commissioned to preach the gospel. . . . It meant . . . that many old landmarks and moorings had to be left behind." What he found in facing his dilemma is told in this volume of which another writer says: "It is a superb piece of work and calculated, I believe, to inspire large numbers of men to preach the Gospel. I am particularly impressed by those chapters which have grown out of the author's own experience."

*GREATEST THOUGHTS ON IMMORTALITY. Compiled by Jacob Helder. Richard R. Smith; price, $2.00.

A book of amazing scope, it is the result of more than twenty-five years of intensive work on the part of the author. "In a very real sense, the diverse points of view presented—ranging all the way from those of H. L. Mencken and Bertrand Russell to those of the Protestant and Catholic clergy—make it a cross-section of the race's belief on a theme of supreme interest." In each instance a short sketch is given showing whom the writer of the following thoughts is. In these days of material concern, this volume should prove of great worth as a spiritual leaven.

*POEMS FOR SPECIAL DAYS AND OCCASIONS. Compiled by Thomas Curtis Clark. Richard R. Smith; price, $1.00.

A collection of poems covering the most important holidays and special days of the year, including the New Year, Washington's Birthday, Mothers' Day, Easter, Independence Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas. A book which is well worth the price to any preacher or public speaker. It contains nearly 200 selections.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

BRANDS FROM THE FIRE.

"And Jehovah said unto Satan, Jehovah rebuke thee, O Satan; yea, Jehovah hath chosen Jerusalem, rebuke thee: is not this a brand plucked out of the fire?"—Zach. 3:1-10.

Satan was ready to condemn the high priest Joshua, Zechariah the prophet standing by; and in truth Satan could find much to condemn in any of us. He is our adversary, our prosecutor, and by our evil hearts we give him his power over us. But Jehovah stands ready to rebuke the adversary of souls, and therein is our salvation.

We are but brands, burned out and useless. We are brands, black, sooty and ugly. We are brands, but we are brands that the Almighty has plucked from the fire.

Christ begins in the Old Testament, nay, in the earliest beginning of it; and Christ reaches through all the Old Testament to the very last word of it. The seed of the new covenant is in the old covenant. Jesus is the Son of Jehovah. It is Jesus who, at all times and in all places, is ready to pluck brands from the fire, to redeem good out of evil and infinite gain out of infinite loss.

This, if we feel discouraged. This, if we know ourselves to have made a failure of life, to be nothing but a burned-out brand.

Prayer.—O Lord, save us from ourselves. O Christ, reach out Thy hand and put it in the fire, and pull us from the burning. O Jesus, rescue Thy Joshuas, and give us raiment for ruin. So will we praise Thee and glorify Thee forever. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE POWER OF PERSONALITY.

"I will make you to become fishers of men."—Mark 1:14-20.

Henry Van Dyke said he was going to Australia to fish for trout, and doubtless he wished to go for other purposes also. In America many are enthusiastic about fishing for trout, and other finny game. It is well; but there is a higher art, and bigger game—"fishers of men!"

Galilee is still well stocked with fish, and even in Jerusalem there is a "Fish Gate." At one time seven of the disciples went a-fishing, and they met with Jesus in the morning, with good results. Then they were taught how to be "fishers of men."

Some persons have a stronger, more winsome personality than others, but all can win with an ever-increasing influence. The secret is vital touch with Christ, through His Spirit. Thus only can we have the magnetism of the Spirit of the Almighty. Avoid anything that would mar your influence or alienate the Holy Spirit. Consecrate your whole personality to God in Christ, willing for Him to have His own way with you. Yearn for the power. "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you." Persist in your earnest cry, "O God, give me the power."

Our supreme office on earth is to use this power to draw others to Christ, "whom to know is life eternal." Practice the habit of living with God, now. "Wait for the promise of the Father," and then go forth to lighten the world, lift up the fallen, and glorify God.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that we may be filled with the inspiration to win souls to Christ, that God may use us in His own way to that end.

WEDNESDAY.

BIGNESS IS WITHIN.

"Be thou an example for the believers, in word, conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity."—Tim. 4:12.

These characteristics all spring from the inner life of the soul. These are the goodly pearls. Life's big things are found in contentment, not luxury; in brotherliness, not treasures; studiousness, not libraries; in friendships and vision of the human family, not acquaintances; in unselfish kindness, and not in estates; in things unseen, and not the seen; in loving our enemies, and not in only loving those who love us. This is the mark of the child of God.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, give us both knowledge and wisdom to know the inner life, to know the bigness of it, and the big things it can do, and forbid that we shall do anything less than all that Thou dost expect of us in an example for all with whom we come in contact, that they may be believers of the good and the great. So mark us as a child of the King, that we may be known of men to walk with the Lord. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A MAN OF THE FINE QUEST.

"Faithful in that which is least."—Luke 16:10.

Isn't that comment complete in itself? We do not stumble upon success in a haphazzard sort of way. Merchants achieve success after a long-studied business life process in which every little detail is cared for and caused to turn into his account. What is thy life? How about thy prayers? any gem, or is all aimless, saintless and unprepared? Christ gave us an example. No one could move Him before time to act, and no one could stop Him when the hour came. Such a quality would serve us well to be vigilant in little things, broad in outlook, and decisive in action. A babe hallowed, a boy obedient, a man faithful.

Prayer.—Dear Father of mercy and love, help us today to work the way of Him who sent us into the world. Perfect us through Jesus our Saviour, in good works, and, like Him, conquering death and the grave, and ascending to eternal glory. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE LIFE THAT JESUS GIVES.

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—John 10: 1-11.

Jesus came to increase the dimensions of life! First, He increased its length by making it endless. "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent." Instead of a span, life is an eternity.

Jesus came to broaden life. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The lines of division were to be eliminated, and self begins to take in all humanity. "Make disciples of all nations," was prophetic of the widening waves of interest. The family is the whole household of God, and the nation fades out as we think of the parliament of man.

Jesus came to deepen life; from the shallow life of the flesh to the deeper life of the spirit; from pleasure-seeking to soul-seeking; from idle gossip to world concerns. Jesus solemnized life by showing its possibilities, its responsibilities, and its destinies.

Prayer.—The Lord's Prayer, all joining

SATURDAY.

THE VALE OF SOUL-MAKING.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil."—Psa. 23:3.

It has sometimes seemed to me that many who are familiar with this comforting passage have not always savored its richest worth. To them, it is a word of comfort against the final day of death, and it is good that we should have the aid of a strong assurance at that time. Yet it has a wider meaning than that, and I would have men think of it in the richer sense of the value of soul-making.

Somewhere recently I noticed that Angelo Patri had said that in the land of shadows the saints come to their greatest glory. It is a hard lesson to learn. We crave sunshine, but God gives us the shadow. And I have found that only as a man himself can say: "I too have felt," that his sympathy has in it the true ring. Blessed is that man who, "out of his stony griefs, Bethel can raise." Sin is the devil's soul-destroying agency, but sorrow is God's developing agency. Whom He loveth He disciplines. When once we have entered into the truth of this Scripture, though the valley of the shadow be a darksome place, it will not be a fearful one. By the power of His alchemy, He turns our losses to a final good. The vale of sorrow becomes the vale of soul-making. Declare your faith, as did the psalmist, with a "russet yea."

Prayer.—By one of the parents, thanking our Heavenly Father for His loving care of all who serve Him, and for the triumphant faith that sustains.

SUNDAY.

WHEN THE SOUL REJOICES.

"Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs."—Eph. 5:19, 20.

A colored man, strumming at the banjo and singing away to himself, was asked by another colored man what he was doing. "O I'se jus' sernadin' ma soul," was the unexpected answer.

There's humor in the reply; but also vastly more! Christian philosophy is found in that rather strange statement. Man needs to serenade his own soul, especially in the gloomy and testing hours of life. Seranading the soul—was not that precisely what Paul meant by suggesting that Christians should speak to themselves "in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs"? Emphasis is added by saying that they should also be found "singing and making melody" in their hearts.

The saints of old serenaded their souls. Hence, one exclaimed, "I will bless the Lord at all times; His praise shall continually be in my mouth." Our fathers sang with holy fervor the lines of Lyte:

"Praise, my soul, the King of heaven;
To His feet thy tribute bring;
Ransomed, healed, restored, forgiven,
Who like thee His praise should sing?
Hallelujah!
Praise the everlasting King!"

THREE PHILOSOPHIES OF LIFE.

(Luke 10:30-35.)

In the parable of the good Samaritan, we find portrayed the three general philosophies of life by three distinct types of character.

First: The thief, or robber, exemplifies this philosophy—might makes right. Your possessions are mine if I have the power to take them. There are two kinds of thieves. One will take your property; the other will take from you your character.

This philosophy, "might makes right," has been practiced throughout the ages, and has been the philosophy of many who would not try to rob a train or bank. Many so-called gentlemen have taken the advantage of their inferior fellow-men and have unjustly taken from them their meager earnings, causing their families to suffer, that their own wealth might be increased.

Back of all wars is this philosophy. Wars are not fought for pastime, exercise, or honor, but that the promoters may become enriched. Why do men continue the practice of such pagan philosophy when it is nowhere sustained in the teachings of Jesus Christ? Might may destroy our prohibition laws, but it will never make right the use of intoxicating liquor. Might often sends men to the electric chair, or gallows, but that does not harmonize with Christ's teachings. Might oppresses the poor, but does not honor God by so doing. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts" (Zech. 4:6).

Second: Possession is absolute ownership. I will use my own as I please. I am under no obligation to my fellow-men. The man by the roadside who has been stripped of his raiment, wounded, and left half dead is in needy circumstances, I'll admit. but I must use my time for something more important. I have no time to stoop to the little things, but must hasten along to discharge my duty in a way that I may get recognition for what I do. This poor fellow is only one of many unfortunates along this way, therefore I cannot afford to waste my time with him. "As oft as ye did it to the least of these, ye did it unto me."

The average man unconsciously practices this philosophy. He is so engrossed with the thought of the things of the world, that he does not consider the needs of his brother. There are victims of sin in every community and the average man never goes out of his way to try to relieve the situation. He only passes by and looks on.

In this fast age, we spend too much time trying to get wealth and earthly fame, and ignore the opportunities God has given us that we might minister to the needs of His children and make their journey of life easier and enrich our own lives with treasures that fadeth not away.

We are under certain obligations to each other, and there is no way to escape our responsibility. We may do as the priest and Levite did—pass by our opportunities unheeded; and as sure as we do, we go unrewarded. O that God would remove selfishness from our lives and create within us a new heart to do Thy will.

Third: All I have is ours. We'll share it together. The despised Samaritan in this parable is typical of Christ. Christ was always ready to minister to the needs of humanity. The Samaritan had a beast on which to ride; he had oil and wine; he had money—all of which he freely shared with his unfortunate neighbor. He was like Christ in many ways. First, he had compassion on one who was his enemy. Christ had compassion on a lost world. Christ sought the opportunity to minister to our needs. Second, this Samaritan did not half-way minister to the unfortunate man, but did not leave him till all his needs were supplied. Third, he made a friend of a life-time enemy.

We know nothing of this Samaritan before he made this journey, but we know him now, not as a despised individual of a degraded nationality, but as an ideal example of service to his fellowman. Somewhere on the journey of life, every one of us will come in contact with an unfortunate victim. He may be suffering for first aid, he may be suffering for food or clothing, and, worse still, he may be dying for "a little bit of love."

The philosophy of the Samaritan will stand the test throughout the whole world in every age. It is simply putting into practice the teachings of Christ, which cannot fail under any circumstance. "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even also unto them." "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away." "He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

We should forget self and study the needs of others and put into practice the philosophy of Him who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and go on our way rejoicing. "It is better to give than to receive."

Roanoke, Ala. G. H. Veazey.

WHY FEAR THE NEW YEAR?

I have a discarded account book in which I have copied choice bits of poetry, interpretations of Scripture passages, etc.—a veritable mine of precious sentiment to me. As I open the book I see at the top of the double page the words, "Bills Payable," and underneath, "In Whose Favor," "Where Payable," "When Due," "Amount."

As it lies before me now, the words which I have copied from the Word of God where He spoke to Jacob at Bethel: "Behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of"—greet my eyes, and as I think of the new year that lies before me, with all its mystery and uncertainty, I realize that the words are a bill made payable in my favor as well as it was for Jacob. With such a promise from such a bank that has stood throughout the ages, why should we fear the unknown paths that we must tread throughout the coming year?

Where is it payable? Anywhere we may be if we are in the will of our Heavenly Father, whether it be in the crowded ways or in the fastnesses of the mighty forests. Whithersoever we may go, His promises follow; yea, lead the way of our going, bringing us to His desired haven.

When is all this due? The months are stated in my book, each one, and underneath are spaces for the days, and there are pages after pages just alike for all the days. The days are made up of hours, and the hours of minutes, we know. The promises of God are payable and due at any time that we will reach out and accept them. "God not only promises, but performs."

What is the amount? S. Miller Willis said that there are thirty thousand promises in the Bible, eighty-two for each day. Due and payable each one. A. J. Gordon says, "The promises of God are certain, but they do not all mature in ninety days." There is no time limit, and they can be renewed as often as our need demands, with no protest. May we sign our names to each one of these promises, for they are ours by right of inheritance because we are the seed of faithful Abraham, the one who believed God and staggered not through unbelief.

What interest is required? Just faith—realizing that our Heavenly Father can supply our every need, and trust that the promises will be fulfilled. Our earthly bankers want us to have faith in them and trust them to take care of what we commit to them; even so our Heavenly Banker cherishes the same faith and trust.

So long His power has blessed us, sure it still will lead us on throughout the coming year. Probably not as we would go, but in the way that He would have us go, that we may be of greatest service in the work of the kingdom. So may we trust and not be afraid. W.

The New Year—and God.

The year is new
For me,
For you;
And as we pass the portal through,
The Maker of all years goes, too.

Dear Friends:

The financial report this week, from all sources for the year, runs us up to $18,441.17. This leaves $11,558.83 to raise by the time we close our books the first week in January. Will we reach our goal of thirty thousand dollars by that time? The Churches and Sunday Schools will have to answer the question?

The Thanksgiving offering is coming in very nicely, and we hope and pray that every Church will make an offering this year, because we are in financial distress, and if there ever was a time when we plead for friends and Churches to come to our rescue, it is now. It will show such a loyal spirit for our Churches to come to our rescue at this Thanksgiving season and mail us a splendid Thanksgiving offering. If the fatherless ask you for bread at this Thanksgiving season, will you give them a stone? They are asking for clothes to keep them warm, will you suffer them to go cold and chilly?

We may have to sacrifice. We may have to really do without some comfort ourselves. But what if we do? we will be the richer, and the fatherless children will be the happier. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these . . . ye have done it unto me." Will we do something for Jesus by doing something for these little children? Eleven thousand, five hundred and fifty-eigh dollars and eighty-three cents to raise to reach our goal! Will we close the year's work happy or disappointed?

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

HURDLE.

At his home, in the Union Ridge community, James Lee Hurdle fell asleep in death on November 12, 1930, aged 65 years, 8 months, and 16 days. He is survived by his wife and two children.

The funeral services were from the home, conducted by the writer, and his body laid to rest in the Stony Creek Presbyterian Church Cemetery. Though not an old man, he was a landmark in his community. The friends attending the funeral and the beautiful floral tributes spoke of the esteem in which he was held. May the Healer of broken hearts comfort those who mourn.

MOFFITT.

Miss Minnie Moffitt was born December 31, 1876, and died November 28, 1930. Miss Moffitt was first a member of the Raleigh Christian Church, and later transferred her membership to Hank's Chapel. She had been living in the home of Mr. W. I. Bland. Funeral service was conducted at Hank's Chapel. She is survived by one half-sister and two half-brothers—Mrs. Margaret Pollard, Mr. C. E. Bridges and Mr. D. I. Bridges.

Those who knew her loved her, because she was a good woman. And now heaven must be richer and brighter by her presence.

R. L. HOUSE.

SYKES.

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Mary Sykes, whose death occurred September 20, 1930; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in her death the Ivor Christian Church has lost its last charter member, a faithful and loyal worker, one always devoted to her Church.

2. That, while we believe our loss is her gain, we bow in humble submission to His will and extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy in this sad hour.

ITS FIELD

A Suggestive Contrast

Massachusetts and Connecticut together have 13,200 square miles of territory. They have Harvard, Yale, Boston and Clark Universities, and 20 large colleges besides—24 great universities and colleges, with more than $200,000,000 assets.

In Eastern-middle Alabama and Western-middle Georgia is a territory 13,408 square miles in size, near the center of which is Piedmont Junior College. It is the ONLY EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION ABOVE HIGH-SCHOOL GRADE in this large territory, for more than 20,000 boys and girls in more than 100 new consolidated rural high schools, with more than 5,000 annual graduates.

Think of It!

Twenty-four universities and colleges, with more than $200,000,000 assets, serving one section of our country, while one struggling Junior College only, serves a section 208 square miles larger, having the greatest educational needs and possibilities. Are we satisfied? Shall it continue to struggle? "A word to the wise is sufficient."

LIBERIA ENDS SLAVERY.—

According to recent news dispatches, domestic slaves of native tribes have been declared free by the Liberian government. Liberia also announces it has abolished the system by which a tribesman pledged a member of his family as security for a loan, and has ended forced recruiting for foreign labor contracts.

CURSE OF CASTES.—

India is caste-ridden. There are 2,000 mutually exclusive castes. Untouchable is an accurate description of the 50,000,000 outcasts herded together in despicable huts in the least desirable section of every village. They are not permitted in the Hindu temples, their children are not allowed entrance into the schools. Their shadow, falling across a high-caste Hindu, is held to be polluting. Until the Christian missionary came, no persistent voice was raised in their behalf.

NOBEL AWARD.—

Dr. Henry Van Dyke declares that the Swedish Academy gave America a very back-handed compliment in choosing the author of "Main Street" and "Elmer Gantry" for this year's highest award in literature. He held that the Lewis novels do not honestly represent the best in our literature. He criticised generally the present-day school of scoffing writers. Dr. Van Dyke is himself a literary artist and is capable of passing sane judgment of such questions. Many Christian people will join him in his criticism.

UNEMPLOYED.—

The number of American idle men has increased in the last ten days, according to governmental reports. This, despite the fact that business in general seems to have taken a slight advance. To meet this menacing situation, Federal, State and municipal authorities have made unemployment the major item of their official agenda. Col. Woods, of Washington, announces that $162,000,000 of Federal money is available for highway work, and urges the immediate building of new roads and improvement of old roads as a contribution to business stabilization.

SPIRITUAL REVOLUTION.—

After Kagawa's recent visit to China, last summer, he wrote, on his return to Japan: "I feel that the great republic of China is facing a crisis at every point, but I am convinced that the greatest need above all is a spiritual revolution. This must be within the family system and with the purification of the Church. . . . We Christians must stand strictly on a New Testament basis in family life, living godly before Christ." This idea is equally sorely needed in America. When family life breaks down, any country is in danger of decay, and the American home cannot find a better basis for safety than that which Christ taught.

LABOR SURVEY.—

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, pointed out that many employers of labor are taking advantage of the economic depression to reduce wages, and attacked such an action as an aid to the continuance of the present depression. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company is making a survey of unemployment which will provide the first thoroughly accurate index of the number of jobless in the country. This survey will indicate classifications of those who are out of work and the lines of employment that are most affected. This movement is in the direction of a scientific study of the labor problem.

LONG PASTORATES.—

On November 18th, Park Street Congregational Church, Boston, enthusiastically celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. A. Z. Conrad. Neighbors in other denominations added their tributes to those of his own people. He has maintained Park Street's tradition as the citadel of orthodoxy and placed it in the forefront of defense of prohibition. In long pastorates, capable ministers can do constructive work and build a great Church, but short pastorates can neither plan largely nor build sizely. Often Churches change pastors for the sake of change when the capable pastor would render far greater service to the Church and the kingdom by long pastorates.

RELIGIOUS SEMINAR.—

Johns Hopkins University recently held a seminar for the better understanding of Jews, Roman Catholics and Protestants. The meeting was presided over by Prof. Hornell Hart, of Bryn Mawr College, provided a three-fold discussion—Prof. Israel, of Hebrew Union College, answered the question, "What Makes Me a Jew?" Dr. M. A. Clark, a member of the Jesuit Order, followed with a presentation of the Catholic point of view, and Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, the Protestant. At the evening session, held in Lord Baltimore Hotel, ten-minute resumes of observations on the afternoon round-table were given. Such studies will cultivate a better understanding between people of different faiths and lead to mutual helpfulness, if they will agree to disagree without being disagreeable.

COMMUNISTS.—

The Communists, through their New York press, daily heralds the present labor situation as the forerunner of the complete collapse of the capitalist system. Their wish is probably both father and mother to their thought, but settlement workers will tell you that the situation is not something which came upon us just a few months ago. Unfortunately, the trouble lies deeper than the present crisis. The machine process itself is displacing human beings much faster than new jobs can be created at all. The Churches, working individually and through the federation of Churches, have been active in presenting the facts to their people and in supporting the city-wide plans of relief. The industrial and financial magnates of the city have reaped the rewards of our present industrial system, and they must find a remedy for the evil they have created.

GOOD EXAMPLE.—

Recently the War Registers' League, in New York City, on the steps of the International House, held an Armistice Day service in which young men and young women of various nationalities and creeds gathered about the speakers. At the words, "Do you here affirm it to be your purpose neither to take part in nor sanction any war, international or civil?" these young people extended their right hands toward the burning torch held by the Rev. Albert Parker Fitch and solemnly replied, "We do so affirm." The ritual of this service was written especially for the occasion by Tracy D. Maygatt and Frances Witherspoon, authors of "The Glorious Company." But it has such real merit that we hope it may be made available for the public. Every influence possible for peace, in our service for real homage to the memory of the soldier, should be inculcated in the minds of the young.

WORLD PEACE.—

Dr. Russell Bowie, of New York, in his Thanksgiving sermon, declared that it is the duty of the religious forces of America to make an immediate and constructive contribution to the building of world peace. He said, "The present moment is critical. If we grow accustomed to thinking that the fates of the rest of the people, their distresses and their poverty, their unrest and dangers, their possibilities of conflict among themselves mean nothing to us as long as we can seem to stand aloof, then what we are doing is to repudiate the reality of Christian civilization." The early entrance of the United States into the World Court and the implementing of the Kellogg pact were indicated by Dr. Bowie as two immediate objects for which this cuontry should aim. Christian nations should find some way to settle national and international disputes by intelligent self-control or arbitration rather by bloodshed and carnage. Christianity should rise above paganism by settling personal as well as corporate difficulties by the spirit of Christ whom we profess and whom we serve. We should follow Him in non-resistance when we are persecuted.

NOTES-PERSONALS

In addition to his charges at Windsor and Damascus, Rev. E. B. White has taken over the work at Eure, N. C.

The Young People's Society of Antioch Christian Church were recently entertained at the Church parsonage by Rev. and Mrs. White. After a short talk by Mr. White, games were enjoyed and light refreshments served.

One of our very faithful and consecrated pastors is Rev. J. D. Dollar, Lanett, Ala., who is a real constructive and consistent worker, and a pastor in whose hands the service of the Church is safe. He is president of the Georgia and Alabama Conference also, and carries on his heart and shoulders the burden of all the work of his Conference.

Rev. H. M. Gray, of La Grange, Ga., has recently organized a Christian Church of promise and prospect at Longdale, Ala. There were fifteen charter members, and others have since joined. The city hall is used as place of preaching and worship by the new congregation every Sunday of the month save the second. Here is wishing for the new Church success and a career of usefulness.

In "shopping" for Christmas, remember there are millions in need; yea, verily, in need of the "Good News" of Him who gave us Christ-mas, who can be blessed and benefitted by the price of those gifts going to those who do not need. The Christmas "spirit" should be the spirit of Him who said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

God allows, and brings about "depression" materially and financially, that we may see and realize the need and the worth of things spiritual and divine. Roger Babson, the trade-statistician, is not far wrong in saying we have been so busy building up our financial affairs that we have given little heed to caring for our spiritual reserves. Now is the time and the opportunity to build up our spiritual reserve by a thorough self-denial for our Lord.

One of our very promising and growing Churches is that at Roanoke, Ala. Rev. G. H. Veazey was pastor last year; Rev. G. D. Hunt is pastor now, and the Church shows every sign of growth and permanence. Though the youngest Church, and by no means the largest, in the Alabama Conference, it gave to missions last year considerably over one-third of all that was given to missions in that Conference. Bro. Veazey believed in missions; Bro. Hunt believes in missions, and the Church reflects this spirit of a vision and a privilege that always brings growth and power.

Mr. Hermon Eldredge, in the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, of December 4th, says: "Dr. W. G. Sargent, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. F. G. Peters and Mrs. Alice V. Morrill are elected as members of the American Board (foreign missions) and all our foreign mission interests will be handled by this board after January 1, 1931, and all our contributions to this work will go through the Commission on Missions to this board. In the home boards, which will act for us in all matters having to do with our work in America, including Porto Rico, Rev. A. W. Sparks will give his full time as associate director of the Town and Country Life Department, giving major time to Christian Churches. Dr. W. P. Minton, our Foreign Mission Secretary, is elected and has entered upon his duties as a secretary of the Commission on Missions, which is the overhead organization charged with the promotion of all the departments of the united Churches. The entire budgets of the Foreign and Home Mission Departments, which includes also the Christian Education Department of the Christian Church, have been taken over by the boards named above, beginning January 1, 1931."

The First Christian Church, Portsmouth, celebrated, with appropriate exercises of worship and praise, the twenty-ninth anniversary of its founding Sunday, November 30th. There were three services during the day. Of the Church and its twenty-ninth anniversary, the Portsmouth Star said: "Twenty-nine years ago a small group of people dedicated themselves to the high and holy task of beginning a work for Christ in the city of Portsmouth, which has grown with the passing years. Believing that the principles of the Christian Church afforded for them an opportunity of service for Christ and humanity, they founded the first Christian Church ever established in the city. Under the leadership of the Rev. J. W. Harrell, they commenced a work which has progressed throughout the twenty-nine years of the Church's history. Worshiping first together in rented quarters, this group eventually built a mission building located on the corner of Effingham and High Streets. After some years, the dream of these founders was consummated with the completion of the splendid and thoroughly modern Church home which they now occupy on Washington Street. However, the physical accomplishments of these twenty-nine years do not constitute real occasion of thanksgiving and celebration services, being held today, much though they may be, for this Church group possesses property valued at $100,000, a splendid membership which is constantly increasing in numbers, together with many other physical evaluations, but, in the opinion of its pastor and membership, the real occasion of thanksgiving and engagement in anniversary program, is attributable to the spiritual accomplishments and values which have and now do constitute its supreme possessions."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY.

Following is the program of the young people's rally to be held at Burlington Christian Church, December 31, 1930, at 7:30 P. M., with Herman Truitt presiding.

FELLOWSHIP MEETING.

The great fellowship service of five Christian and five Congregational Churches was held Sunday afternoon, November 30th, at Star, as announced in these columns in a previous issue. The number from each of these groups was almost exactly the same. The students of Country Life Academy furnished several special musical numbers, the sermon on "My Church" was delivered in a masterly style to the joy of all present by Rev. William T. Scott, pastor of United Church, of Salisbury, N. C. Rev. M. J. Sweet presided and gave a review of the "why" of this meeting, which, he said, was fostered and planned by Dr. A. O. Atkinson and himself at a long conference held in the interest of the two denominations, united by vote of the great national bodies of each which seek the organic union of and active co-operation of all Churches located in contiguous territory a srapidly as possible. This is the first meeting of this sort ever held in the South, but if the sentiment of the people present is any criterion it is only a beginning. These people were enthusiastic in a unanimous vote to hold such a union meeting of these ten Churches on every fifth Sunday. The next one will be held at Country Life Academy on Sunday, March 29th, at 2:30 P. M., this being the next fifth Sunday and the first in the year 1931.

Inasmuch as the detail of the meeting held on November 30th was left largely in the hands of the pastor-at-large of Congregational Churches of the Southeast, it was heartily and unanimously voted that Rev. J. O. Atkinson, of the Christian Church, be requested to plan for and put on the next program for March 29th. The students of the academy, under the direction of Miss Bryant, agreed to help furnish the music, and President Green was enthusiastic in the cordiality of the invitation of the academy to have this next meeting held in its buildings.

All this is only an added evidence of the ongoing spirit of union between these two denominations. It is felt that the more such meetings can be held in various parts of the country, the sooner the waste of duplication of activities will be overcome and larger efficiency by local co-operation will rise to rejoice the hearts of all who sing joyously together, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."

EXCLUSION OF ALIEN REPRESENTATION.

An immediate amendment of the reapportionment law to exclude from representation some 7,500,000 aliens was urged by the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals in a letter to Representatives Dickinson, of Iowa, and Rankin, of Missouri. Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the board, intimated he was hitting out at both gangster and bootlegger.

"It may well be," he said, "that if the country finds itself in a life-and-death struggle with organized crime, commanded by leaders of the underworld famous as manipulators of racketeering and vice, that these forces, largely alien in character, will be found fortified behind the privileges of representation.

"It is by no means certain that the men who at present represent these groups in Congress will always represent them, nor that they will always be represented by men of like character."

Dr. Wilson contended that unless action was taken in the approaching session of Congress to effect a change in the reapportionment, "it may well be that in some crisis in American history the issue may be determined" by the representatives of aliens.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

THE CONGREGATIONAL GROUP from the Southeast attending the Home Mission Congress in Washington, held several important conferences with Dr. Bloom in the headquarters office in the Victor Building. Besides Dr. Bloom and Mrs. Munday, of the Washington office, there were present Rev. F. P. Ensminger, Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, Miss Priscilla Chase, and Miss Marguerite Davison.

BIBLE SUNDAY: In connection with observance of Bible Sunday at the Miami Beach Church, December 7th, three hundred and fifty copies of an attractively printed paper-bound edition of the Gospel of St. John were given away. The responsive readings were from an attractively printed folder furnished by the American Bible Society with the topic "One Book for All People." A beautiful bookmark, with the legend, "Religious Books Enrich Life," was also distributed.

RELIGIOUS PAGEANTRY: Miss Martha Race, a member of the Congregational Church in Jacksonville, is the author of a number of religious pageants which have been given extensively. According to recent reports from the Pilgrim Press, her pageant, "The Door of the Inn," has been given over two thousand times since it was first given at the Jacksonville Church ten years ago this Christmas. This Church is fortunate in having such a talented leader along the line of pageantry.

DR. WILLIAM E. BARTON.

From his summer home in Foxboro, Mass., a letter came from a man who, as a preacher in city Churches, a writer of insporational literature, was known also by his friends as one beginning his ministry in the mountains of Tennessee and for more than forty years maintaining his interest in that frontier parish. The paper on which that letter was written was headed, "Pine Knoll on Sunset Lake," and in one corner were the words, quoted from Plutarch: "As for me, I dwell in a little city and am content to abide there, lest by my departure I should make it smaller."

The writer of the letter, and many others that followed, was our Dr. William E. Barton, who was born at Sublette, Ill., June 28, 1861. The son of a country physician, the youth received such schooling as the countryside afforded. Determined to get a college education, he worked on the farm, saved some money, and enrolled as a student at Berea, Ky. Attracted to the ministry, he was ordained by a Congregational council on his graduation in 1885, and soon afterward was married to Esther Treat Bushnell, of Johnsonville, Ohio.

For two years the young minister centered his pastoral service in Robbins, Tenn., establishing twenty-seven missionary points, covering a wide territory. Then he went to Oberlin, Ohio, for his theological course, and in 1890 received the degree of bachelor of divinity. A pastorate of nine years followed at Wellington, Ohio, from which Church Dr. Barton went to Shawmut Church, Boston, Mass., and eventually to First Church, Oak Park, Ill.

In 1928, Dr. Barton organized and became the first pastor of the Collegeside Church, Nashville, Tenn., and was also appointed to the chair of practical theology in Vanderbilt University School of Religion, remaining as pastor and professor until compelled to resign last September on account of serious illness.

Dr. Barton passed into the larger life on Sunday morning, December 7, 1930. Outstanding as a preacher, popular as a lecturer, a teacher of rare ability, an acknowledged authority on Abraham Lincoln as evidenced in the several volumes written telling the story of that great leader's life; an inspirationalist of the first order of merit, and, above all, as a great friend, William E. Barton takes first rank in the fine art of living.

The memorial services were held in the Broadway Tabernacle Church on Tuesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Allan Knight Chalmers and Rev. Meheniah Boynton, D. D. With friends and flowers, music, invocation, Scripture, prayers and benediction, all listened in to the messages of the eternal, in the midst of a quietude that brought all near to the Great Father; an uplift that kindled life anew and an outreach that brought all close to that part of God's universe which is just beyond.

Representing the Southeast were Mrs. George L. Day, of Barton Memorial Chapel, Robbins, Tenn.; Rev. Fred P. Ensminger, D. D., of the Tennessee Conference of Congregational Churches, Rev. William J. Campbell, D. D., president of Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation and associated with the Collegeside Church, Nashville; Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, president of Fisk University, and Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, D. D., of Washington, D. C. W. K. B.

HOME MISSION CONGRESS.

The great North American Home Mission Congress came to an end December 5th, but the stream of beneficent influence will flow on from it for the blessing of North American life, and in fact the life of the world

Eight hundred delegates, representing thirty or more denominations and associated organizations, were present. In fact, all of the great denominations but one participated in it. The congress broke up into group conference meetings, which spent approximately two days discussing their several problems and preparing their group findings. The group conferences will indicate the scope and thoroughness of the considerations of the congress. They were as follows: Group 1, the general field of home missions, scope, relationships, administration, general policies, co-operation, etc.; group 2, general promotion; group 3, comity and co-operation; group 4, personnel and recruiting; group 5, city and new Americans; group 6, town and country; group 7, Indians; group 8, Jewish and Christian relationships; group 9, West Indies; group 10, negroes; group 11, Mexicans, migrants and Orientals; group 12, Alaska.

In every group, one of the dominant themes was comity and co-operation, and the reports of achievements in several States in the way of eliminating over-churching and the working out of co-operative programs were most encouraging and challenging to less progressive areas.

The report of the findings committee was a lengthy document—one that marks the beginning of a great era in North American Protestantism. In the spirit of Christian good will, the frank facing of our faults and failures in the denominational rivalries that had been current, combined with the earnest and prayerful determination that these evils should be reduced, and with the earnest searching for new techniques by which these ends could be attained, all shot through with the note of deep spirituality and loyalty to the cause of Jesus Christ, make this an utterance of Protestantism that should effect the life of Churches from the great cities down to the smallest rural Church.

Among the definite things urged were the organization of councils of Churches or of State home mission councils, the publicity of home missionary facts, especially if they concern the home missionary support of competing Churches, so far as possible, the reduction of Churches to one Church for every thousand population, the extension of home missionary work so that no communities in our country shall be unchurched and no peoples unevangelized and unserved.

The following "final considerations" of the findings committee are worthy of quotation:

"In view of the fact that practically all the constituent bodies of the home mission councils have adopted the comity principles herein approved and otherwise have repeatedly expressed themselves in favor of the policy of interdenominational adjustments in local communities, it is the conviction of this group that the time has come and the opportunity is at hand for passing from the 'resolution stage' to the 'action stage' by an aggressive movement of concerted effort on their part. To that end, this group urges city and State councils and local home missions councils to project programs of adjustments as speedily as possible; and recommends, where no such city or State councils exist, that the denominational boards of home missions set themselves the task of discovering conditions that need adjustments and present the same to a conference of the responsible denominational officials and local Church groups for discussion and action. This group further suggests that the four principles formulated by the joint committee of the home missions council, the council of women for home missions, the administrative committee of the Federal Council, and the community Church workers, herewith adopted, be used as a starting-point in carrying out these recommendations.

"It is our conviction that the important consideration now in the development of comity and of the practice of co-operation is not organization, or technique, but is a question of attitude and spirit. We believe that we have the technique to analyze the situations requiring co-operative action or comity adjustments and that we have or can develop the organizations and the techniques necessary to handle them as soon as all the factions involved sincerely desire to deal with such situations. We do not underestimate the many real difficulties involved in the solution of these problems, but we feel sure that no difficulties will prove serious enough, that no obstacles will be sufficiently insurmountable to keep us from co-operation and unity when we all really want co-operation and unity. Conversely, we feel that no difficulty is so trivial, no problem so easy of solution, but that it will suffice to keep apart those who do not wish to come together.

"This conviction leads us to emphasize as of fundamental importance the necessity of a wide scale and persistent campaign of education to be directed simultaneously at boards, field officials, Church judicatories, both major and minor, ministers and the rank and file of Church people.

"Further, we feel that this campaign of education should proceed by emphasizing the spiritual and practical advantages to be achieved through co-operation and by emphasizing the need to strengthen and extend the work of the Church to the end that the full purpose of home missions will be accomplished."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

XIX.

S. S. Minnekahda, Mon. A. M., July 21.

At 4:35 this A. M. the fog horn began to blow. This is a forlorn, weird and unwelcome sound. The fog becomes very dense and our ship almost stops, simply cruising along for an hour and a half. With the coming of the sun and a stiff breeze, the fog lifted and a glorious day, with a calm sea, dawned upon us. This is very often the case in life. Our dark moments, even the doubtful and the sad ones, frequently precede the glory and the light. Possibly the glory would not be so good nor the light so beautiful if we were not prepared for the same by going through experiences of sorrow, doubt and trouble. I recall receiving a letter from a correspondent before leaving America in which it was stated that he had trouble, talked trouble, and dreamed trouble until the whole outlook seemed only fraught with disappointment, gloom, depression and trouble. I guess our dear Heavenly Father is preparing that man for such joy as his heart had never felt before and such delight as he had never anticipated, "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth."

The services of the quiet hour in room No. 54 were especially sweet this morning, possibly because it is to be our last one on board this ship. Dr. Coffin conducted by reading the 16th chapter of John, in which our dear Lord comforted His disciples and reassured them with these words: "For the Father Himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God," etc. The prayer was one of praise and thanksgiving, and then a petition. I have decided and shall put it down here in my diary now that it is worth going to London and crossing the ocean twice to learn Dr. Coffin and Dr. Smith. What fine fellows they are—great hearts, great minds, noble souls. On a boat, one opens the heart and reveals the inner soul. It's a pity that we have to rush and hustle and worry so much on land that we neither have time to find out other folks nor to reveal to them our own inner feelings. It is different out at sea. Somehow, the boundless sea gives one an impression and a taste of eternity. It takes one out of the world and faces one with boundless emotions, infinite aspirations, divine longings. Smith has made this trip across the ocean simply to see me home in safety and because I asked him to. I want him to return when he lands me safely, for the great sea speaks to him and tells him wonderful things. He knows everybody on this boat and everybody on the boat admires and esteems him. He wins at their games, charms them with his conversation, and fascinates them with his honest and benevolent heart. He and Dr. Coffin have had a great time meeting and mingling with the people, and I have had a still greater time meeting and mingling with them and having them tell me the best they had learned from the folks. The fact is, about half the passengers are envying me, any way, because my tea and breakfast are served in bed and they have to get up and go to theirs. It has been a glorious trip and under most favorable and happy circumstances.

At 12:30 I am seated out on deck, and the sea is blinking with one eye, blinking as far as one can see—not enough of a surge to make a whitecap, so it makes a cute and cunning eye at you. The people are jovial, happy and gleeful today. We are going to see land and pull into harbor at New York in the early hour of tonight. At 3:45 P. M., by the ship's log, we had come 3,173 miles and yet had 88 miles to go. The fog hangs out around the shore-line and prevents us seeing land, but we are headed in the right direction and are happy. The last day out at sea is one of partings, regrets and good-bys. Faces that have become familiar will soon depart and go to their several homes and we shall see them, many of them, no more forever. "Tipping" on a boat is a custom you have to follow. The average "tip" is about $7.00. Of course, many go three times that amount; some far below it. But on a ship with a thousand passengers, it is a conservative estimate to say that $7,000 to $8,000 are given away in "tips" to those who serve in the dining-rooms and in the various other departments. I see from the papers that Ex-President Coolidge estimates that the people of the United States are spending, and will spend, at least $500,000,000 in Europe and on the continent traveling this summer. I do not doubt it. The single item of "tips" will run up into millions, for when people begin to travel they prepare to be liberal.

At 6:30 P. M. we have our last dinner on our good ship, and the captain tells us he expects to tie up at his dock in New York by or before 9 P. M. It has been a wonderful trip across the seas, and I shall carry the memory of it like a pleasant dream, now and then troubled by uncertain sounds and feelings, but, nevertheless, a pleasant and a happy dream. Whether it shall fall to my lot to come this way again, I know not, and, of course, there is some disappointment that I did not get to see Switzerland and Italy, and France and Germany, and the many other places on the program of this trip. Possibly it was best that I should not, even when the prize seemed within my grasp, for I am happy now as I return to my native land and feel grateful beyond words that so many blessings, bounties and benefits have come to me during these days out at sea and over in a London hospital. I am thinking of my dear doctor, the splendid nurses, of the beautiful roses that gladdened my room sent there by strangers, and of a hundred other blessings that will linger in memory to be called up in days of recollections and reminiscence in the years to be. Landing at 9 tonight, I plan to catch a 11 P. M. train going South, and by tomorrow I hope to be with familiar faces and with loved ones. And now, to my diary, good-by. J. O. A.

(NOTE: It has been a very pleasing experience to copy from my diary during these weeks the pages that I have given to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I have been amazed at the letters and messages of appreciation and pleasure from those who have patiently followed my diary. I only wish I had more of it, since it was easy to write while one could do little else, and a real joy to go back over the memory of those pleasant days, while I copied for the printer the pages from the diary hurriedly written in pencil. If the diary has been a source of helpfulness to any, I am glad, for it has been a genuine pleasure to keep and to write it.—J. O. A.)

UNEMPLOYMENT, THEN AND NOW.

Many still living haven't forgotten 1896-'97. There was depression then. It was felt everywhere. Business of every kind was on a drag, prices were low, unemployment was widespread and general. In cities one could get a tolerable meal for ten or fifteen cents. But thousands were out of work and did not have that sum with which to buy bread.

There is this difference, however. Thirty-three years ago capital, industry and even government felt more or less snug, complacent and irresponsible. Today there is no such feeling prevalent. Industry and the "captains of industry" feel anxious, concerned and more or less responsible. Capital and capitalists are not so complacent and indifferent. And governments, State and national, feel that they must do something about it, and are making appropriations running into multiplied millions to help relieve the situation, and give those who want to work and have only their work to sell, something to do.

It is heartening. Everybody is concerned. All are talking about unemployment and expressing solicitude for the unemployed. Evidently the leaven of the gospel of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God has been and is leavening the lump. The world, as well as the pulpit and the pew, has learned that we are our brother's keeper, and that if one member suffers, all suffer with it. The world has come a long way in economics, morals and religion since '96 and '97. J. O. A.

WHY PEOPLE CONTINUE TO LIVE.

There seems to be a desire in every life to continue to live. That desire is to live in eternity, which some religious philosophers accept as a proof of the immortality of the soul. But the desire to continue to live is not confined to that of the soul living throughout eternity, but there is a general desire on the part of humanity to live in the hearts and minds of men.

There are different ways by which we may live. The ancient people, especially the Jews, hoped to live by and through their male heirs. But this is a matter of impossibility, for in a few generations the line may run out or all the children in a given family may be girls. There are two outstanding ways that people may continue to live on the earth. The first is by service, even though it be in a small way. The second is by giving of material substance.

Living through service in a small way lies within the reach of every normal individual. Christ set the example for this mode of living. He took the basin and towel and rendered the small service of washing the disciples' feet. He gave us the assurance that even a cup of cold water, given in His name, should receive a reward. The little things that are faithfully and willingly done amount to large things in the end. They give a continued memory of those who have lived and served. It is the little things that one does in daily life that determine the character of that individual. Just as the little things help to determine the character of an individual, so the little things help to determine the length of time he shall live in the minds of men. William Booth will continue to live in the minds of men as long as there is a civilized nation, because he served in little things. But these little things grew into a world service. The Salvation Army has extended its borders practically all over the earth. Wherever this organization serves humanity, the name of its founder is being perpetuated. D. L. Moody is a world-known character and will continue to live. He will live because he served humanity in a small way long before he preached his great sermons. There are characters who are not so widely known as these who will continue to live in the hearts of men because they served their fellow-man in a smaller way. The individual who fails to serve in the little things of life, but rather waits to do some great deed, will soon be forgotten.

The second group that is of interest are those individuals who give to worthy causes. Some give in large amounts and others in small amounts. But the purpose for which it is given is what counts. Seventy-five years ago, George Peabody was a name that stood out in the business world just as Henry Ford or other leading business men today. But Peabody is still living because he gave of his means to establish an institution that would bless humanity. From Peabody College at Nashville, Tenn., there goes a number of graduates each year all over this land of ours to help keep his name living; all because Mr. Peabody gave of his means. Few people know him as a wizard in the mercantile business. But he is known to the world today as the founder of this institution.

Leland Stanford, Jr., the founder of Stanford University, lives in a large way because he founded this institution in honor of his son. People do not know him today as a man who headed a particular business, but they know him as a founder of a great institution. On the other hand, we read and know of people who inherit large estates, but spend it all for their own enjoyment. Such people desire to live, too, but will soon be forgotten because their labors will not let them be remembered. If one would find his life, he must lose. If one would live with men, he must give to men.

J. E. M.

The trouble is that too many are trying to live the Christian life on the wrong side of Pentecost. They are trying to live the divine life with no resources but those that are purely human, and the great promise of Jesus Christ to humanity is this, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you!" The omnipotence of the Spirit shall be the measure of your strength.—Samuel Chadwick.

REPLY TO "DRY HYPOCRISY EXPOSED."

By Dr. Thomas C. Amick.

In the November, 1930, issue of the Psychology Magazine, there appeared a very excellent article by Henry Knight Miller on the subject mentioned at the head of this article. This is a very strong article, and one which all persons, whether in favor of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act or not, should read with care.

Henry Knight Miller is a thinker and writer of ability, and whatever comes from his pen is worthy of the consideration of all thinking people. As a psychologist, he has accomplished many notable things in his field; and as an editor, he has built up a wonderful magazine that fills a field unoccupied previous to this time.

In the article referred to, Mr. Miller devotes a page and a half to enumerating his movements as a member of the Anti-Saloon League of America. From childhood to years of maturity, Mr. Miller devoted his life and energies to the advancement of the purposes of the league and he made quite a notable reputation as a leader in this work. Not only so, but he served some of the better Churches of some of our cities, and he has accomplished much good as a minister of the gospel and a leader in religious work. And as editor of one of the growing magazines of the country, Mr. Miller's name has become one of the familiar names in psychological circles.

But we regret to record that, in the middle of the first column on page 17 of this article, Mr. Miller confesses that his former faith in the efficacy of the prohibition laws has been shipwrecked, and that he has been forced to turn his back on those ideas and ideals that motivated his conduct when in the prime of youth and manhood, and that he has joined in word, faith, and act that small and noisy minority who would abolish the advance in civilization made by the eighteenth amendment, and that he would fling into the dust that "noble experiment" of the best and noblest souls of our country, and he would consign to everlasting disgrace those aspirations of the heroic idealists of our time and age.

Mr. Miller tells us that, as an Anti-Saloon crusader, he made promises that the world would be renovated and rejuvinated; that poverty would be banished; that crime would be forever crushed, and that numerous others of the ills of the human race would be cured, if we would but adopt prohibition. In the next paragraph he reminds us that he has lived to see every one of these promises fail of fulfillment. Might we not ask here, in reply, whether or not Mr. Miller did not promise too much? Whoever dreamed that the eighteenth amendment would be a panacea for all our ills? If Mr. Miller promises too much, the fault is in him and in his short-sightedness, and not in prohibition. Has any law, or set of laws, no matter how wise they were, or has even the Constitution of our country, cured the ills of society? If those who first favored the law against murder, when the enactment of such a law was first agitated, had promised that the law would abolish all murder and cure all the ills to which the human race is heir, the passage of this law would not have prevented all murder, and those visionary souls would have been doomed to disappointment. Because murder has not been entirely abolished, is the law to blame? If Mr. Miller's reasoning is correct, are not the laws against murder, theft, prostitution, and the like just as responsible for the murder, the crimes, and the prostitution that he speaks of as the prohibition acts? These crimes are certainly committed against these other laws of our land. We should have these laws on our statute books; otherwise, civilization would be hanging in the balances, but the laws do not make the crimes: they are incentives to all reasoning and fair-minded men to avoid these acts. And these laws are warning voices to the depraved and criminally minded, and they are pointing such persons to the paths of rectitude and right doing.

In the last paragraph of column 1 and the first paragraph of column 2, page 17, of this article, Mr. Miller indicates that lawlessness has increased, crime has flourished, and violence goes merrily on, and all because of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act. Here we would lay down the proposition that the law is not responsible for the crime. The law, in every case, is the result of the desire of the good people of a community or State, or nation, to have certain forms of crime abolished. When the crimes resulting from the liquor traffic exasperated the people of our country and defied high heaven, then the people rose in their indignation and the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act were the result. These came as a response to the outraged feelings of the people of our country and to their regard for decency and order. And the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act are no more responsible for the crime, violence and bloodshed of which Mr. Miller speaks than the Bible is responsible for all the crime for the last nineteen hundred years of the history of the human race. The sins and evils that surround us on every hand are as sternly denounced by the Word of God as ever any amendment or law on our statute books has ever denounced any crime which has taken place in our country. Very few of us would be so simple as to say that the legal document that denounces a crime is the cause of the crime denounced.

Further, may there not have been other causes of this bacchanal of crime mentioned in these paragraphs? In this post-war period, when people have become somewhat lax as to morals, when extravagance has become rampant in our country, when family and home discipline have become relaxed, and the young have been allowed to follow the devices of their own minds, in this day of the movie, when the sex-appeal has been unduly emphasized, in this day of the new psychology where we are taught by some psychologist that it is God's will that His children shall have the utmost of their heart's desire, whether the person works for the desired end or not, in this day when civilization seems in a state of flux, can any fair-minded person attribute all the crime, evil and sin to the eighteenth amendment? It belittles a person's intellect for him to do so.

But, are these the facts in the case? Is there more crime in our country today than ever before, according to population?

After a thorough investigation by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, we find that they report that the trend of alcoholism among the fathers of the children included in this study is "similar to that which appears in families known to the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Prior to national prohibition, intemperance was present in 47.7 per cent of the homes of the families known to this society; in 1921 it had dropped to 18.9 per cent. This means fewer drunken fathers and fewer delinquent and criminal youth under prohibition. We quote from Dr. Kirchwey, who, referring to the reports on crime of the Census Bureau of Washington, says, in the New York Times of May 26, 1929:

"Let us take courage from the official record, covering the eighteen years from 1910 to 1927, inclusive, which shows a marked decline of 35 to 40 per cent in the general crime rate in the

ELON LETTER.

Anthropologists picture the primitive life of man as beset with manifold fears. Out of efforts to find peace and harmony, orientation and adjustment in the midst of these fears, the pursuit of truth has been a constant objective of the human race. It is literally true that the truth has freed men, freed them from fears, freed them from superstition, freed them from a sense of weakness, freed them from a sense of inadequacy. It is equally demonstrable that the truth has yielded freedom in a positive direction by releasing the powers of man and bringing to him satisfaction of life in place of dread of circumstance. The discovery of new truth in the midst of the uncertainties and problematic situations of life has the same exhilarating effect upon man's spiritual powers as the release of adrenalin has upon the physical powers when the adrenal glands inject this inspiriting substance into the veins of a man who is in sore distress because of fear or exhaustion or some crisis that bids fair to annihilate him. Truth is, comparably speaking, a glandular secretion of the spiritual nature.

And yet, despite the beneficent service of truth in the lives and experiences of men, there is a disposition to disagree and inability to comprehend just what truth is, what its nature is, what its characteristics are. I have no doubt that some of the readers of the Elon Letter are as perplexed as was Pilate when he faced the unperturbed Nazarene, and that with Pilate they are themselves asking, if not in an open way, at least in their inmost hearts, "What is truth?" In order that we may have some understanding as to this issue, it would not be amiss if we undertake to describe truth through a consideration of some of its major characteristics.

Perhaps the first characteristic we should undertake to describe is what I may call the desire of truth-seekers for accuracy. Note that I did not say "finality." It will be necessary that we recur to this mistaken notion as to truth constantly. It is sufficient now for us to say that truth should supply a working hypothesis for life, a hypothesis that promises definite and accurate and dependable outcomes, but that it need not necessarily be thought of as ultimate or final. It is necessary that we should have a foundation for any type of structure which it may be our desire to erect whether this superstructure be a material building, a mental ideal, or a spiritual aspiration. This foundation requirement is the characteristic of truth which I have described as accurate.

Accuracy in the scientific sense of truth connotes also the sense of inclusiveness. It takes into account all the known differentiated facts involved in any situation. It does not close its eyes to any source of information. There was a time, astronomically speaking, when men thought that the earth was the center of the universe, and proceeded on that basis. Copernicus found facts in his study of the physical world which could not be reconciled with this view, and so he enunciated the theory that the sun is the center of the solar system, by which he meant the center of the universe. Astronomers do not know where the center of the universe is, though they are satisfied that Copernicus was right and accurate in his theory that the sun is the center of our solar system. Being convinced that a certain view or explanation of known facts is accurate and inclusive, men make use of the truth in constructing programs and procedures for their lives. The accuracy and dependability of truth are fundamental in any effort to construct life, institutions, or civilization. Systems of philosophy and of religion are likewise dependent upon accurate, inclusive, and dependable conceptions of truth.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

The distinctive features of Piedmont Junior College are hereby presented for your consideration:

1. The inculcation and practice of the tenets of the Christian religion as they are accepted by our evangelical denominations without regard to sectarian alignments.

2. The teaching and application of the principles of true American citizenship, using as a basis the Constitution of our great national Commonwealth and the Declaration of American Independence.

These two ideas will stand out in all the instruction in this institution, every subject having its relationship to them made plain. Christianity has a vital relation to all true knowledge and to education of the highest and truest type. All of the subjects taught in the college have their bearing either directly or indirectly on the development of citizenship. Our American civilization is a Christian civilization and should be recognized and emphasized.

Some scientists profess to believe that science is out of accord with the Bible, and likewise out of harmony with the tents of the Christian religion. We teach that true science is in harmony with the statements and revelations of the Scriptures and with the teachings of Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

The history of the world is strewn with the wrecks of nations that forgot God and neglected the fundamentals of citizenship on which the stability of the State depends.

Many of the textbooks and much of the teaching of the present in our schools are tainted with false science and unwholesome humanitarianism, leading ultimately to a corrupt and degenerate citizenship.

Piedmont Junior College is committed with all earnestness to the development of Christian citizenship of the highest type. Therefore, our creed includes:

1. Christianity, the basis of our national ideals.
2. Religious freedom to individuals.
3. Complete separation of Church and State.
4. The U. S. Constitution as the permanent foundation of our government, and a jealous guarding of its principles.
5. Democracy in education, and freedom and liberty for educational institutions.
6. Teaching these principles without fear or favor.

The stress of modern life and vicissitudes of fortune prevent thousands from availing themselves of instruction in college, so Piedmont College is an institution which affords an open door for an education of those of very limited means.

CHRIST AS "LORD OF CONDUCT."

Sometimes an expressive phrase is more forceful in emphasizing a truth than a whole paragraph. In his interesting book, "If I Had Not Come," Bishop Hendrix says: "The supreme claim of Christ is as 'Lord of conduct,' and the idea of life must be sought in conduct to meet His approval." Here is a profitable subject for meditation at this season, for, above everything else, Jesus Christ is "Lord of conduct." Five times in succession in the sermon on the mount He makes this assertion: "Ye have heard that it was said . . . but I say unto you . . ." The Cambridge Bible notes that the phrase, "I say unto you," is a "most emphatic formula, which implies the authority of a law-giver." After hearing this wonderful discourse concerning righteousness (right conduct) and the kingdom of God, no wonder His hearers were astonished at His teaching and declared that He taught as one having authority, and not as the scribes. He is Lord of conduct because He is the Son and speaks with authority.

Christ is Lord of conduct in another sense. He is the inspirer of God-like conduct. His influence upon the disciples and the early Christians is ample evidence of this. What a miracle of transformed conduct is shown in Pliny's letter to the Emperor Trajan, when Christianity was in its infancy. The only fault to be found with these early Christians just emerged from paganism was that "they had been accustomed on a stated day to meet before light and recite among themselves in turn a hymn to Christus as God, and to bind themselves by an oath, not to any crime, but not to commit thefts, robberies or adulteries, not to break their word, etc. With this picture before us, how appropriate the phrase, "Christ, the Lord of conduct."

The principles of conduct which Jesus Christ taught are being acknowledged more and more as the loftiest code of ethics in existence, but unless His teachings find expression in daily conduct, they are valueless. Some years ago a little book appeared with this title, "In His Steps, or What Would Jesus Do?" It gained almost instant popularity and millions of copies were circulated. Why? It was a simple little story without pretension to originality of thought or literary excellence, but it forcibly conveyed a great truth—that the world would be transformed if every professing Christian would take the teachings of Jesus Christ seriously, and make it a matter of conscience so to conduct himself as to win His approval. No man ever goes astray who conscientiously seeks to conform his life to the teachings of the Man of Galilee.

Conduct is the acid test of the Christian, and the Master was ever applying this test. "By their fruits, ye shall know them." "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

At this sacred season we shall often think of Christ as our Saviour but it will avail us nothing to call him Lord, Lord, unless we do the things which He commands. If we would be assured that He is our Saviour, we must see that He is the Lord of our conduct. The much-needed revival will come when we turn to Him with all our hearts and let Him be, in deed and in truth, "the Lord of our conduct."

"I WAS A STRANGER—"

A certain young graduate student, at work for his master's degree in education and psychology in an American university, and already acquiring distinction in his chosen field as a student and as a man, was traveling about among students and young people's conferences as a speaker and member of the faculty. Wherever he went, he was made welcome for his own winsome personality, his great good humor, and his ability. Repeatedly leaders of the conferences wrote to his friends to express gratitude and appreciation for the fineness of his feeling and his great spiritual influence, as well as his intellectual contribution to the life of the conference. As one delegate said, "We are somehow better for having known him; to be his friend is to know how to grow as he grows in mind and spirit."

He was an East Indian, brought up in a land where there were restrictions of caste that shut off one group from another. But he was also a Christian, and he learned to count on a Christian spirit as a dissolver of those caste distinctions and a force to break down barriers.

One night he arrived late, nearly midnight, in a certain northern city. The railroad station was closed. The boat by which he was to leave for his next appointment would not go until morning. He had taken precaution, however, to wire ahead to the only person of his acquaintance in the city. He had no reason to know that the friend was away, so he took the first taxi that came to hand at the railroad station and gave the address in confidence. When he arrived at the home of his American friend he found, to his consternation, the telegram sticking in the door, obviously not received. What to do next? A hotel, of course He had money. He was perfectly able to pay his way, and he was a traveler, lecturing by invitation. So, without hesitation, he told the driver to take him to a hotel. His anxiety, as well as his irritation, grew as hotel after hotel refused him admittance—four in all. The driver, after the fourth refused, spoke up:

"I know a nigger who might take you in."

"Why?" said the young East Indian; "I am not a negro; why should I be under obligation to a negro family?"

"Right you are: why should you?" said the driver. "There's another place where you would be safe and have a bed, and that's the police station."

"Very well," said the student; "I am not proud, and I want to sleep."

So to the police headquarters they went. The policeman in charge at the desk said, "Yes, I have a bed. You can have it if you want it. It's in a cell with another man, but it's a bed."

He led the young stranger to the only cell in which there was a vacant bed. Breathing heavily, obviously drunk, and obviously for some time very sick, the other occupant lay close by on the second bed in the cell. There was no window and the foul air was enough to sicken anybody.

"I am sorry," said the young East Indian; "I think I would rather walk the streets than be here, if you don't mind. I just couldn't stand this."

"That's quite all right," said the policeman.

"Thank you for being willing to entertain me," was the answer, and again he went out to the street with his baggage. There by the curb was the taxi, still waiting.

"I thought you mightn't like it so well," said the taxi driver, a bit self-consciously, "so I waited. I've been thinking. You could go to my boarding-house. I'm going to be on duty all night, but I've got a bed and you could sleep in it, if you want to. I'd just as soon you'd have it as not."

"You certainly would be a good Samaritan," said the other.

"All right, hop in!" said the driver. In a few moments they were in a little boarding-house bedroom, where the driver, with embarrassed courtesy, made his guest welcome. Then he departed. The next morning he came early and took his guest to breakfast. Not one cent would he accept for either room or meal. He had obviously been doing some good thinking. When he deposited his guest at the boat, bag and baggage, the latter said to him with feeling, after he had expressed his gratitude, "You certainly are a good Samaritan!"

"Say, listen!" said the driver; "that's twice you have said that. What do you mean by it?"

"Do you not know the story of the good Samaritan?" asked the East Indian student.

"No," said the driver. Whereupon he listened to the story, simply told by one to whom it was old and familiar. The white driver listened with interest, frequently looking surprised at unexpected developments, and finally said, "That's a good story. Where did you get it?"

"If I send you a book with it marked, will you read it?" asked his new friend.

"Sure I will," replied the driver; "I'd like to have it."

And so a traveling stranger from India, who perhaps had learned the meaning of the good Samaritan story for the first time in his life by actual experience, sent a marked New Testament to a taxi driver in an American city, a citizen of "a Christian country."—Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

A PRAYER.

Dear Jesus, Prince of God, all hail! Thou, whom the Father didst send, of whom the angels sang, whom now we worship and adore, gifts to Thee we bring, gifts for use. Ability, time, means, self, we lay upon Thy altar of love. O make them Thine, we pray. Love only, Father, brought to earth Thy Son, the Holy Babe in manger laid. Bow our heads, bend our knees, lift our hearts, loose our tongues, that, to Him, the Prince of Peace, the conquering King, the lowly Saviour, universally and eternally shall ascend the honor and homage and praise and thanksgiving due His holy name. For His sake. Amen.

RELIGIOUS FESTIVAL IN INDIA.

While I was in India in 1928, I visited Allahabad at the time of the great seven-year mela, or gathering of the pilgrims. They were there from all over India and Burma to bathe religiously in the water where the Ganges and the Jumna Rivers join. Perhaps this is the most sacred place for Hindus in the world, especially once in seven years. It was estimated that from one to two million people came there during the days of that religious festival. As one stood on an eminence overlooking the Ganges Valley and looked across that marvelous multitude camped below, as far as the eye could reach it was nothing but people. In the early morning, when the people had built their little breakfast fires of dried cow-dung to cook their food religiously, it seemed that one could see the smoke of a hundred thousand camp fires. Thousands had come on the trains, thousands in motor lorries, thousands in oxcarts, and still greater thousands on foot. Formerly many measured their length or rolled long distances to reach the sacred spot to fulfill some vow. In these degenerate days, the trains and motor cars carry the larger number. They were there for one purpose —to try to secure some merit for the future life or some thousands less of rebirths, by bathing at just the right time and in the right way in the sacred waters.

As one stood there, the thought came, "What would Christ thing if He stood here with me and could see what I see?" Then the realization came that He was there and He did see, and not only so, but that He sees all the people of all nations of the world in their need, and He has told us how He feels about it. He sees them as sheep not having a shepherd. We all need that vision before we can have the true missionary passion. We need also the vision of Christ answering those unmeasured needs.—"The Preacher and His Missionary Message," by Stephen J. Corey.

SHARING.

The impulse "to share" was named the underlying motive of Congregational and Christian missions today by the Rev. Charles C. Merrill, D. D., senior secretary of the denomination's Commission on Missions. He spoke at historic Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, where Henry Ward Beecher was pastor forty years, in a sermon preliminary to the annual "Every Member Enlistment" which will be conducted at Plymouth Church and most other Congregational and Christian Churches throughout the country next Sunday. In connection with the "enlistment" will be pledged the larger part of the more than $25,500,000 which will be contributed to the Churches next year, including $4,000,000 for missions and other benevolences.

"The guiding principle for all our missionary work," Dr. Merrill said, "springs out of the inevitable impulse to share which lies at the heart of personal Christian experience. The deepest expression of this impulse is to share Christ; He means so much to us that we cannot help witnessing to Him and desiring others to know of our experience. A local Church cannot remain Christian, cannot develop those Christian virtues which enable it to do its own work within its own particular sphere unless it expresses this sharing impulse beyond its own constituency and its own community. A Church must be deeply missionary in order to be Christian.

"It is indeed true that the 9,300 men and women who in rural districts, towns and cities in this State and in the nation and around the world, constitute the staff of Congregational and Christian missions, do a vast service in simple human ministration. The work is certainly a great philanthropic enterprise. There are, for example, eighty-three hospitals and dispensaries rendering over 600,000 treatments a year. The work is a great educational enterprise, with 1,400 schools and 97,000 pupils of all grades from kindergarten to college senior. But not as a philanthropic or educational enterprise mainly are we supporting the work. Through these hospitals and schools and social settlements, as well as through organized mission Churches and evangelistic workers, we are sharing Christ with our fellows everywhere.

"In foreign countries, the principle is observed that all our work must be conducted entirely without any racial or any dogmatic religious superiority. Moreover, increasing control of the work in foreign lands is being given into the hands of the nationals and in each country the nationals are being given constant help and encouragement to develop an indigenous Christian Church through which, in the last analysis, the life of any nation must be Christianized.

"In a rapidly changing world, missionary work must change; in every part of the world, acute problems have arisen and must continually arise, calling for the wisest missionary statesmanship. It has been a distinguishing characteristic of our mission boards, the first in America and organized as pioneer and progressive undertakings, that progressive policies must always be followed and continued. In the realm of foreign missions, of Church extension in this country, of religious education, of negro education, and of pensions for ministers, forward-looking plans are in operation. But with a view to even greater improvement, they will be placed under close examination by a newly appointed committee on strategy. The committee will begin its work coincident with the completion of the merger of the missionary work of the Congregational and Christian Churches. The broadening and deepening influence of this merger, we hope, is a precursor of far greater union in missionary enterprises among all denominations.

"We are endeavoring to do our work in a nonsectarian way. Our missionaries the world over have standing orders to engage in union enterprises, and as a body they are in the forefront among those who are striving for a united Church."—News Bulletin, N. Y., Nov. 30.

United States, and this notwithstanding the immense number of 'new crimes' resulting from liquor, drug, and traffic laws enacted since 1910. That, in this period of 'lawlessness' and 'demoralization' incident to the attempted enforcement of the prohibition law, the offences of assault, fraud, vagrancy, prostitution and larceny, the last the most common of serious offences, should fall off by 50 per cent or more, and burglary by 10 per cent or more, should give pause to our modern Jeremiahs."

Mr. Kirchway further says: "Robbery is less impressive statistically than it is in effect on the public mind, as the ratio of hold-ups, even now, is only one to three burglaries and one to eight cases of larceny. It is the more sensational way in which robbery is performed nowadays, and the attention which it received from the newspapers that have given it its evil eminence. Without the new style robber, equipped with the automatic and his high-powered car, and the still more modern 'racketeer' with his machine gun and bomb, there would have been no crime wave and no despair as to the fate of the republic."

The above quotations of facts from the statistics of our country as a whole speak loudly for themselves. To accuse the prohibition laws of the new criminal with his new methods of crime and to blame all the crime in our country to prohibition is not the part of a candid, unprejudiced mind. Taking all crime into consideration, the table compiled by the United States Census Bureau shows that, under prohibition, there has been a decrease of 37.7 per cent.

The fault, where crime is on the increase, as it doubtless is in some cities of our country, is not with the law, but it is with the officers who fail to enforce the law. Were the officers to enforce the law rigorously, the speakeasies, and the crime of which Mr. Miller complains, would all be quickly nipped in the bud. Had Mr. Miller directed his tirade against the venal officers who accept bribes and who are bought and do not enforce the law, then he would have hit the correct mark. Let the sworn officers uphold the Constitution which they take an oath to uphold, protect and obey, and we will find crime dwindling to very small proportions indeed.

Further along in his article, Mr. Miller speaks of the increase of poverty and blamed the prohibition law for this trouble. When we put the facts to the acid test of statistics, we find Mr. Miller again wrong. Taking the United States as a whole, the statistics give the following percentages of dependents in the United States for the years mentioned:

In 1912, 14.8 per cent of our people were dependents; in 1916, 16.5 per cent were dependents; in 1917, 16.5 per cent was again the number of dependents; now, coming to the prohibition period, we find in 1921 3.3 per cent were dependents; in 1925, 8 per cent were dependents, and in 1929, 9.2 per cent only are dependents. This statement of statistical facts shows that, on an average, the percentage of dependents has been halved since the prohibition period came in. Does this show a great increase in poverty? During this time also the amount of savings banks' deposits have increased many-fold, and we can give statistics to prove the statement, the people of our country live better and have more of the comforts and luxuries of life, and our country has been in the best financial condition that it has been in since the establishment of our government. We have no report yet for the year 1930, but even in the period of depression through which we are passing, our people are better off than in the pre-war period under liquor. We will always have the feeble and the shiftless with us, and we can never expect to have poverty absolutely eliminated.

In the next place, Mr. Miller tells us how the drink bill has mounted by leaps and bounds, but he fails to give any statistics or authority for his statements.

On page 285 of Prof. Irving Fisher's book, "The Noble Experiment," in table 32, we have an estimate of the consumption of distilled spirits in the United States based on data collected and checked and rechecked from all parts of the country from the years 1900 to 1928, inclusive. Commencing in the pre-prohibition period in 1904, the absolute alcohol content consumed in the United States was 60,543,693 gallons, or an average of 2.13 gallons for every person in the United States. The statistics show that the amount increases until it reached its peak in 1917, when the amount rose to 83,870,162 gallons, or 2.35 galgons per person. Under prohibition, this total has been reduced until in 1928 the total amount consumed was 13,547,503 gallons, or an average of one-third of a gallon per person. Between 1917, before prohibition and 1928, under prohibition, the amount consumed per individual has been reduced from 2.35 to one-third of a gallon for each person, or over 600 per cent. If Mr. Miller's estimate is correct, then those who are in a position to know and who have checked and rechecked the figures are positively wrong. The writer is inclined to side against Mr. Miller in favor of the statistics.

Mr. Miller again takes up the criminal aspect of the eighteenth amendment, and gives a rehash of what he had already said. We have already pointed out that statistics show that crime has decreased very materially, and under prohibition, and we will not add further comment here except to say that it is manifestly unfair to blame crime to the laws against crime, and also the man who denounces the laws of his land sides with crime and gives encouragement to the criminal class of our people. I doubt not but that the liquor and the criminal element will roll Mr. Miller's article like a sweet morsel under their tongues. We will have that element with us as long as the human heart is depraved, and the best we can do is to pass as many salutary laws as possible to safeguard society against this element, and to curb this element in their criminal course.

Mr. Miller also mentions the increase in the number of deaths from alcoholism since the passage of the eighteenth amendment. Let us here examine the facts in the case. According to the estimates of the wets themselves, the death rate in the United States from alcoholism in 1905 was 16.7 per thousand; in 1915, while still wet, the rate was 14 per thousand. In 1925, under prohibition, the rate fell to 11.7 per thousand. The wets themselves admit that death from alcoholism have materially decreased under prohibition. The figures compiled by the drys on the same subject correspond very closely with the calculation of the wets, and this shows that Mr. Miller is wrong or that he has juggled his figures.

Finally, Mr. Miller bursts out with the question, "What stands in the way of majority rule?" He then mentions the Literary Digest poll and the findings of the Literary Digest in favor of the wets. Let me ask the question in reply, Does not the majority rule? Did not the majority of our States vote the eighteenth amendment into our Constitution? Has not Mr. Miller found out that the Literary Digest poll was discredited long ago? And does not Mr. Miller know that when, two years ago, Al. Smith ran on an avowedly wet ticket and Herbert Hoover ran on a dry ticket the people of our country lined themselves up at the polls and gave Herbert Hoover the greatest and most overwhelming majority any candidate for the presidency had ever received in the United States? We know that Mr. Miller would suggest that other issues than prohibition were at stake, but we can assure Mr. Miller that the good people of our country will do this very same thing again if ever they have to face the issue fairly and squarely. That element of the people of our country who stand for decency and order, who are laboring for the highest good of our country and are doing their best to advance our civilization, will, if the issue is pressed, rise as a mighty giant and give to another dry man a vote so overwhelming that none but the most willful will question or gainsay. Party lines will again be flung to the winds, and those who stand for law and order will assert themselves in no misunderstood terms. Talk about the Literary Digest poll! The nation discredited this poll before it was born. To claim that the Literary Digest poll is conclusive evidence that the majority of our people oppose prohibition is to beg the question. The voice of the nation has been heard and the nation will speak again when necessary.

The remaining paragraphs of Mr. Miller's article are given to villifying the Anti-Saloon League, prohibition, and our dry senators and representatives. Villification does not get us anywhere. The facts are what count, and Mr. Miller can, by a little investigation, get the facts. When he writes another article along this line, he needs to fortify himself with the facts. Also, when this question comes to a show-down again, if such should ever be the case, Mr. Miller will have to reckon with the Church and with the faithful mothers of our country who will not bow the knee and worship the god of alcoholism and the god of gold.

When we consider that it was brought out in the hearings of the United States Senate Lobby Investigating Committee that this whole wet propaganda is confined to a few millionaires who are willing to debauch and prostitute their country and the youth of the country in order to feather their nest with gold, and that, in 1929, the wet group had only about ten thousand members, and that these claimed to be the majority of the people in our country, we can see how preposterous are their claims. This whole investigation and the utterly absurd claims of the wets may be found by referring to page 3895, et seq., of the hearings.

With these facts before us, we can but feel that Mr. Miller has been led by some weird, tempting voice to espouse the cause of the wets. We are sorry to see him prostitute his great power and energy to the work of debasing his country and its youth, when they might be so much more nobly spent in helping our country and her people to nobler and holier purposes and to a better and a happier way of living and to a nobler civilization than we now enjoy.

This writer is not a member of the Anti-Saloon League of America or of any of its affiliated organizations. He is a teacher upon whose heart has fallen the burden of encouraging and helping the young of this generation to live nobler and more heroic lives than otherwise they might have lived. He cannot submit to having temptations thrown athwart their pathways, and he, therefore, stands for the enforcement of the law, for removing temptations and allurements to vice and crime from the paths of the young, and so there is but one course open for him and that is to oppose with might and main all onslaughts of the enemy against the supreme law of our country.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson XIII—December 28, 1930.

Review.

Golden Text: "Have this mind in you, which was also in Christ Jesus."—Phil. 2:5.

"Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our instruction." The lives of the representative men and women whom we have been studying during the past quarter are the embodiment of truths that ought to be helpful to us in making our lives better and more useful. The summary of the lessons given below is an adaptation of the splendid summary given in Dr. Amos R. Well's little book, "A Daily Digest of the Sunday School Lessons."

Zacharias and Elizabeth.

John the Baptist was a man of God largely because his father and mother were people of God. His faith was born of their faith. We do not live wholly for ourselves, but also for those who come after us, our children and all whom we can influence. John the Baptist heralded Christ, but Zacharias and Elizabeth heralded John the Baptist.

Mary.

Why was Mary chosen for her great work of bringing the Son of God into the world and caring for Him during infancy and youth? Because of the purity of her character. Because of her simple, child-like trust. Because of her teachableness. Because of her steady faith. Those qualities will win for any one noble commissions from God.

Simeon and Anna.

Simeon and Anna were both looking for Jesus, and so they found Him. They were both longing for the better future, and so they received confirmation of it. They both meditated deeply on spiritual things, and so had spiritual insight. Their quick knowledge of the Saviour was no accident, but the outgrowth of all their past.

Peter.

The one lesson that Peter needed to learn was steadiness. He could flash his mind into the truth, but needed to abide there. He could rise on wings of faith, but the first storm sent him to earth again. He yielded easily to temptation, and never made sure progress in the Christian life until he placed his head under the same yoke with Jesus Christ. Then, how the plow shot through the globe!

Thomas.

We have just as good right to speak of "an inquiring Thomas" as of "a doubting Thomas," and just as good right to speak of "a courageous Thomas" as of either of the others. Thomas saw the dark side of things, but he went valiantly forward through the dark, and that is the main thing. We should be grateful to Thomas for his proof that our Lord does not disdian to give proof.

The Centurion.

Many of us are so eager to get something from Christ that we take no thought about getting it in the best way. The centurion might have said, "Now I will leave no stone unturned; I will insist on the presence of the Great Healer; I will run no risk." Instead, he took his opportunity in the largest spirit, made the most of it instead of the least, and gained one of the most glorious rewards.

The Ruler.

The rich young ruler was only rich in money, and that is to be poor indeed. He was poor in human sympathy, poor in unselfishness, poor in self-renunciation, poor in courage to do the right. He was offered the greatest opportunity in the world, and was too poor in insight to grasp it.

Zacchaeus.

Zacchaeus was also a rich man, but he was "poor in spirit" in the sense of the Beatitude, and so he became rich in heavenly treasure. He dared to give away his gold, as the rich young ruler did not dare, and at once took rank far ahead of the ruler.

Stephen.

Stephen "the crown," was crowned before he won the royal crown of Christian martyrdom. He was crowned with faith. He was crowned with grace and graciousness. He was crowned with courage. He was crowned with power. He was crowned with the gift of the Holy Spirit. These are the crowns that mean eternal sovereignty.

Saul.

Paul's contributions to Christianity were many. First of all, his theology, his superb, searching, comprehensive, revealing thoughts of God and Christ. Then his out-reaching enterprise, his glorious extension of the Christian Church over the world. And, then his personality, so winsome, so inspiring, so strengthening. How many Pauls would it take to win the world for Christ?

Timothy.

We are grateful to Timothy primarily for his example of friendship. No one can ever know how much he did to render effective over the world the great life of Paul. Helpers are rare, and Timothy was a prince of helpers, because the Holy Spirit worked with him and he had training of the Book.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, December 28, 1930.

Topic: "What This Year Has Taught Us."

Scripture: Deut. 8:1-6.

The program for this meeting may take one of several emphases. You may want to use the topic, "Things This Year Has Taught Us," in a personal way. In such a meeting the speakers would give personal messages on the things they have learned and accomplished during the year 1930. Such topics as "I Have Learned that it Pays to Be Patient," "Being Cheerful Helps," "L Not Judge Others," "Self-Control Is Needed," The Value of Personal Devotions," "My Greatest Experience in 1930," etc., might be discussed by members of the society.

The program committee may want to launch out into a little wider field and suggest the things that the society as a group has learned. Some of the topics suggested in the above paragraph might be used in this treatment of the topic. Others might be added, as "What My Church Has Done for Me This Year," "The Good I Have Received from Christian Endeavor This Year," "The Most Worth-while Programs Our Society Has Had This Year," "The Best Thing Our Society Has Done This Year."

It is also possible to discuss world events under this topic. In doing this, the outstanding religious, educational and political events and developments should be presented and discussed.

Which ever of the plans is used will furnish plenty of material for a lively meeting if time and thought is put upon the preparations.

A good closing thought for either of these suggestions is to have a talk on "Unfinished Tasks." Perhaps you will want to secure an outside speaker for this talk; but even if this is done, this talk should not be the only item on the program. This talk will deal with some of the things every person desires, such as an education, health, friendships, good reading, and Christ-like living.

At the close of the old year, it is well to hear "The Call of the New Year," as it is given in this poem:

"Quit you like men, be strong:
There's a burden to bear,
There's a grief to share,
There's a heart that breaks 'neath a load of care—
But fare ye forth with a song.

"Quit you like men, be strong:
There's a battle to fight,
There's a wrong to right,
There's a God who blesses the good with might—
So fare ye forth with a song.

"Quit you like men, be strong:
There's a work to do,
There's a world to make new,
There's a call for men who are brave and true—
On! on with a song!

"Quit you like men, be strong:
There's a year of grace,
There's a God to face,
There's another heat in the great world race—
Speed! speed with a song!"

YOUTH GATHERING AT ELON COLLEGE.

Dreams of happiness cluster around Christmas. Every one wants to be happy, and especially at Christmas time. It is the time of song for the little children and the blending of voices in praise to God for the wonders He has revealed unto His people.

Christmas, 1930, will be a time of especial happiness to a group of Christian Church people. First among those to whom Christmas, 1930, will bring happiness will be the thirty or forty young people of the Christian and Congregational Churches in the Southeast who will meet at Elon College on December 29-31 for a conference on the work of young people in our United Church in the Southeast. Then, a second group to whom happiness will come because of this youth meeting will be the men and women in all of our Churches who have been longing for the day when our young people would join in a larger program of service for the Church of Chrsit. Such a time this meeting promises to be. Dreams will be coming true at this Christmas meeting!

For two full days young people representing each of our Christian Church Conferences and each of the Congregational Associations in the Scutheast will discuss ways and means by which they may render larger service in the Church. Theirs will be truly spirits seeking for high adventure in the service of the King. Prayers in their behalf and in behalf of the group of young people's workers who will meet and counsel with

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION. By Lindsay and Holland. Macmillan; $2.50; pp. 666.

The authors really write their book with two purposes in view—to justify State institutions of higher learning on a free tuition basis and to enter a plea for the centralization of control of our institutions of higher learning in the president's office. The book is particularly weak in two particulars—its treatment of personnel work in the modern college and of the place and influence of the alumni in college affairs. The citations to the literature are exceedingly abundant and reliable. It is an eminently worth-while book and as a sort of pioneer in its field, does its job commendably.

SEVEN GREAT BIBLES. By Alfred W. Martin. Frederick A. Stokes Co. $2.50; pp. 277.

Dr. Martin has two purposes in his book—to beget appreciation for the ethical, moral and religious values in all religions—a unity in the midst of diversity, and to achieve both purposes by citations from the sacred books of the religions themselves. He treats the bibles of Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Zoroastrianism, Mohammedanism, Judaism and Christianity. The book achieves its first purpose quite admirably. Many will doubt the possibility of its second purpose and certainly will not be convinced that it has been done in the book. You will, however, greatly profit by reading this volume.

GREAT THEMES OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH. Arranged by Chas. W. Fergusson. Richard R. Smith, Inc.; $2; pp. 204.

Fifteen sermons by such men as G. Campbell Morgan, Ralph W. Sockman, C. G. Chappell and J. H. Jowett. Throughout the entire volume will be found an undercurrent of positive conviction and definite faith. The men who have contributed to its pages are men who have something to say to a needy world, and while the book does not pose as an anthology of the world's best sermons, its average is extraordinarily high.

With the one exception of Dr. Jowett, all of the sermons are by living ministers, and they have written from experiences in the active ministry. The result is a book of exceptional spiritual force, highly suggestive because of the various approaches it offers, and rich in illustrations and diction. Well worth reading by the layman, it should be of especial value to ministers who, during the course of a year, must touch repeatedly upon the themes it contains. K.

RELIGION IN A CHANGING WORLD. By Rabbi A. H. Silver, D. D., Litt.D. Richard R. Smith, Inc.; $2; pp. 204.

Written by a Jew, it is a book well worth reading by the Christian. In a time when religious forces, both orthodox and liberal, are finding themselves attacked by materialism and atheism, it sounds a clarion call to the religious leaders of the world. Setting himself squarely against the tendencies of the day, Rabbi Silver contends that the function of religion is to resist precipitate change, to distinguish critically between the novel and the new, and to conserve at all costs the rich spiritual heritage of the past. He rightly contends that "the need of God is as real a need of human life as the need of food. It may not be as immediate, but for the realization of life's highest possibilities . . . it is indispensable."

In regard to tolerance in religion, he has this to say: "For an unbelieving Jew and an unbelieving non-Jew to be tolerant of each other's nonbelief is no achievement. It is when a believing Jew, who is profoundly moved by his faith, and a believing Christian, who is profoundly moved by his, discover a common basis for good will, that a significant event is consummated." them, by those who are interested, will mean much in the accomplishment of the task before them.

As a befitting close to this youth conference, there will be a rally program for young people at the Burlington Christian Church no the evening of December 31st. This program will begin at 7:30 o'clock. It will be in charge of youth leaders of the conference, with Herman Truitt, president of the Young People's Department of Christian and Congregational Churches in the Southeast, presiding. A brief report of the work of the conference will be made at the rally. A worship program will precede the addresses of the evening. Miss Graham Rowland, former missionary worker among the Navajo Indians at Fort Apache, Ariz., and director of religious education at the Burlington Christian Church, will speak on the subject, "Youth on the March." Miss Rowland is a convincing speaker and well worth hearing. Her address will be followed by an address by Prof. A. R. Van Cleave, of Elon College. Prof. Van Cleave is an outstanding speaker. He is known and loved by the students of Elon College, and has a deep understanding and appreciation of youth.

The young people from Christian and Congregational Churches surrounding Burlington are invited and expected to attend this rally. Recognition will be given groups from the various Churches. A full house is expected.

CHRISTMAS WEEK.

MONDAY.

A MEANING OF CHRISTMAS.

As if to meet the understanding of the simplest mind, the Christmas story is told in simple, comprehensible terms. In Christmas thought, all minds meet on the level of the Babe. But Jesus came a Messenger of heaven for all people for all time in the form of a little child.

However simple and baby-like, the meaning extends to the loftiest outreach of the spirit of man, and carries with it the supreme expression of the Divine will and character. His name is Emmanuel, which means "God with us," and it embraces in human form all of the nature of Deity that mortal mind can grasp. The greatness of God is shown in Him more than by the establishment and ordered maintenance of the universe.

We wonder if the world is not growing more Christmasy all the time. There appears to be a growing sense of brotherhood, and of loving-kindness of God. There are more Christmas gifts, more Christmas greetings sent, more celebrations held, more charity given than ever before. As for the message of "Peace on Earth," there is a mighty struggle in the world for peace.

It would be fine for every sober-minded person to do a little real thinking this Christmas upon the sublime truth of the necessity for a revelation of God. If God is all that it is said he is, He must reveal Himself to each of us, and how much better could it be than in the universal appeal of an innocent, humble, obedient and loving babe.

Christmas means that the infinite God condescended to meet the comprehension of man in terms of a little Child, who should represent the loving Father nature of the eternal.

Prayer.—We praise Thee, O God, that Thou hast given such grace and power to men. No other honor and glory is to be compared to this of receiving Thee. Come into our hearts, Eternal Father, and abide! Through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

TUESDAY.

CHRISTMAS EXPECTATION.

"There was a gentle hostler
(And blessed be his name),
He opened up the stable
The night our lady came.
Our lady and St. Joseph,
He gave them food and bed,
And Jesus Christ has given him
A glory 'round his head.
So let the gate swing open,
However poor the yard,
Lest weary people visit you
And find their passage barred.
Unlatch the door at midnight
And let your lantern's glow
Shine out to guide the traveler's feet
To you across the snow.

"There was a courteous hostler
(He is in heaven tonight);
He held our lady's bridle
And helped her to alight;
He spread clean straw before her
Whereon she might lie down,
And Jesus Christ has given him
An everlasting crown.
Unlock the door this evening,
And let your gate swing wide;
Let all who ask for shelter
Come speedily inside.
What if your yard be narrow?
What if your house be small?
There is a Guest, who's coming
Will glorify it all.

"There was a joyous hostler,
Who knelt on Christmas morn
Beside the radiant manger,
Wherein his Lord was born.
His heart was full of laughter,
His soul was full of bliss
When Jesus, on His mother's lap,
Gave him His hand to kiss.
Unbar your heart this evening,
And keep no stranger out;
Take from your soul's great portals
The barrier of doubt.
To humble folks and weary,
Give hearty welcoming—
Your breast shall be tomorrow
The cradle of a King."

WEDNESDAY.

THE JOY-STAR.

"When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy."—Matt. 2:1-10.

Rightly were those men of the East called magi, or wise men. They hitched their wagon to a star. They had learned that star-gazing is the most profitable of human occupations. They discovered that heaven has richer gifts than earth.

What the Christmas star was, whether it was a new sun or a comet or a remarkable conjunction of planets, matters not; it was a divine signal in the sky, a sure token to the wise men of God's wonder-working on earth. They were glad and eager to drop all their secular business and make it their one business to discover God's meaning in the sign.

Therefore, the star became to them a joy-star, though to others it was nothing but an astronomical phenomenon, a mere event up above them. It passed over their heads and their hearts as well. They gazed, but the wise men rejoiced. And if we are truly wise, we shall look at the Christmas star after the fashion of the magi. We shall read in it God's handwriting, a personal message for us. It is the message so often on the lips of Jesus Christ, "Come, and follow me." It beckons, it allures, it commands, it goes before, and we walk where it leads. Ah, blessed is such following, the one supremely blessed act of our mortal life!

Prayer.—Messiah of the holy star, Thou accredited of heaven, be our Guide through life, our Leader through eternity! All earthly lights are but the flickering and illusory gleams of the marshes. Thou alone art the Light of life. Show us the way, Thou Star of stars. Amen.

THURSDAY—CHRISTMAS DAY.

MAGNIFYING GOD.

"My soul doth magnify the Lord."—Luke 1:46-55.

What a daring sentence is this which opens Mary's "Magnificat," so-called from its opening word in the Latin translation! Think of magnifying God, making God great, increasing the infinite one! Surely this is a tremendous thought to put into Christmas.

And yet it is a very true thought, for God has given to man the terrible power of shutting God out of his life, and every such exclusion narrows God; at the same time, God has given man the glorious power of admitting Him to his life, and every such admission enlarges God, magnifies Him.

Let us keep Christmas by taking the Lord into our lives, even as Christ was taken into Mary's life from the brooding of the Holy Spirit, and as Christ came into the life of the world through the Bethlehem birth. Nothing can so magnify us as thus magnifying the Lord, and nothing can so magnify the world.

No one can enter into the real spirit of Christmas that does not enter into the real spirit of the atonement. If we see in Christ the loving Father coming close to men and bearing their burdens, most of all their heaviest burden of sin, then we know what His coming meant, and we truly interpret Christmas.

The Christmas Street.

"Red of holly, swirl of snow,
Scurry of passing feet,
Jumble of people, high and low—
This is the Christmas street.
White man, black man, bishop, Jew—
Christ was born for all of you!

"Cherished children, a hungry tot,
Sad little face and eye;
Chinaman, negro, polyglot,
Tramps and tramping by;
Rich man, poor, beggar man, too—
Christ has died for all of you!

"Santa Claus, and mistletoe,
Newsboy, fakir, cheat,
Drab and virgin, on they go—
This is the Christmas street.
Pass and pass, O motley crew,
Christ He lives in all of you!"

—Margaret P. Montague.

Prayer.—

"O Holy Child of Bethlehem,
Descend on us, we pray;
Cast out our sin and enter in,
Be born in us today.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell:
O come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel."

FRIDAY.

THE WORD AMONG US.

"And the Word became flesh, and dwelt among us."—John 1:1-14.

"Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for it is He that shall save His people from their sins."—Matt. 1:18-23.

Jesus Christ was and is the Voice of God. He is God's Speech—His articulate, breathing Speech.

What a marvelous privilege is this into which the world came at Christmas! We call the radio perhaps the most important, as it certainly is the most surprising of all the advances of science; but what is it when compared with that Word of God which has been speaking to us now for nearly two thousand years? Straight out of heaven it came, and its message is not of commerce or politics or art or literature, but of eternal life and endless peace and joy and power.

Jesus, "God of Salvation"—the most significant and blessed of all names! Named by a messenger of God. Shall He not also receive the same name from us? For we cannot call His name Jesus unless we receive Him as the one who shall save us from our sins.

Prayer.—Thou art our salvation, blessed Jesus. Thou hast given us the gift of gifts, freedom from the evil that has had dominion over us, entrance unto the light and liberty of the children of God. For this we bless and praise Thee, world without end. Amen.

FRIENDSHIP OF PAUL AND TIMOTHY.

The Bible is largely a book of friendship. In the Old Testament we read with sympathetic delight the close relationship that existed between Ruth and Naomi, and also the friendship between Jonathan and David. In the New Testament the first great series of friendships existed between the Master and His disciples. The friendship between Jesus and the household of Mary and Martha was also very rich. But the friendship that is attractive to us today is that which grew out of the acquaintance of Paul with Timothy.

Before there can be a close friendship between two persons there must be sympathetic understanding and mutual love. These two characteristics of friendship are most evident in the lives of Paul and Timothy. Both hearts seemed to beat in unison. Each man knew the common bond that united them, for Jesus Christ was the same Saviour to both men. The conversion of the apostle on the Damascus road was an experience never to be forgotten by him who heard the voice and saw the vision of the risen Lord. His heart was quickened and he developed a passion to share this joy with another.

Timothy was one of the first listeners who heard of Paul's marvelous experience and conversion. So earnest was the passion of the apostle that Timothy decided to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and do His will. Because of the fact that he was one of Paul's first converts, he loved him. He often refers to him as his faithful son, and his child in Christ. Paul was very anxious to have Timothy keep himself uppermost in the sight of God. He wanted him to be a successful preacher and devout minister of the gospel. To that end, he wrote him letters in which he charges him as to his Church administration and his personal living.

The First Epistle of Paul to Timothy was for the purpose of directing him in the right choice of officials for the Church at Ephesus. He discusses the right use of the law. He exhorts him to give thanks for all of his laborers; writes about the question of how women should be attired, and as to their position in the Church. Paul has much to say on the question of the duties of bishops, deacons and elders. These and many other matters are laid before the young preacher by the aged apostle, who is personally interested in his welfare and is desirous of seeing the kingdom of God come on earth. The nine outstanding charges in this first epistle deal more largely with the Church and its mission than with the personal life and growth of the young man himself. It was unfortunate that these two good friends had to be separated so much of the time, and yet it may have been a blessing, in that Timothy had to depend upon God for the solution of problems that otherwise he might have entrusted to Paul. Their friendship was perpetuated and enriched by correspondence. In those days the writing of letters was a lengthy task. Today, when letters may be written on a typewriter in a short period, people greatly neglect the old fashion of friendly letters. They wire, phone, cable or send brief postal picture cards. But not so in the day when Paul and Timothy lived. Their friendship was bound together by mutual correspondence.

Paul's second letter to Timothy was personal. It was written from Rome during the imprisonment of the apostle. In these lonely hours at his disposal he thought much of his beloved friend Timothy and longed for his presence as he (Paul) sat, bound in stocks, awaiting execution. "I am now ready to be offered, for the time of my departure is at hand." Of the numerous charges made unto Timothy, we turn to four that are most outstanding. These we select from the four chapters composing the second epistle.

1. "Be not thou, therefore, ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me His prisoner" (2 Tim. 1.8).

The apostle begins this chapter by referring to the time when he assisted in the ordination of the young preacher. He speaks of the laying on of hands and of the glory of Jesus Christ and admonishes that he never be ashamed of Him. Paul himself had stated in his letter to the Romans the testimony which he wanted Timothy to always bear, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith" (Rom. 1:16).

Instead of bowing in shame, Paul charged Timothy to be proud of the gospel. The testimony of the Lord was his foundation. Upon the Lord's promises he was to go forth and testify. The Lord was the one all-sufficiency for every need of human-kind. Paul wanted Timothy to know with him that there was everything in the gospel that one should be proud to possess. It contained messages for every need and care. It was love to the depressed, strength to the weak, instruction to the unlearned, and joy to the downcast. Rejoice in the Lord. Be not ashamed of the testimonies of the Lord.

As for me, I am God's prisoner. I am in stocks and bonds; but gladly have I suffered affliction for the gospel's sake, and I trust that you will not be ashamed to own me as your friend. I exhort you, Timothy, to willingly suffer with me. Jesus our Saviour has suffered for us. He has preceded us to the cross. I am now ready to be offered up. Be proud of me. All Christians have to suffer. Let none of us shun its claim upon us. Let none of us be ashamed of the suffering servant, but, like him, gladly rejoice in tribulations and persecutions. Paul calls attention to the fact that all sinful men may be saved by that power of God which was revealed in His Son Jesus Christ. Of it, let us be proud.

2. "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15).

In this verse, one friend is charging another friend with kind advice. He is endeavoring to stir within him the gift of gathering knowledge and Christian growth. Every workman ought to do his best work at all times. Preachers need especially to work, to study and to grow. It is very easy for us to get into ruts, and when once there we find it hard to get out. It is embarrassing to be found ignorant of certain great principles and doctrines of the Word. One needs to study hard and thus win the favor of fellow-man and Heavenly Father. He who does not study may some day feel ashamed to stand before those who are counting on him. Paul was particularly anxious to have Timothy make good. He wanted him to grow in knowledge and wisdom, and to pattern his life after the great Master. He was therefore charged to study the Word. Learn its divisions and discover its truths and cures. This was a most solemn charge, and one to be considered with uttermost thought. He who does not study does not grow. One must pay the price for an education, and one must pay the price for spiritual growth. Sacrifice and service are a part

Dear Friends:

Our special Thanksgiving offerings are starting off very nicely, and many of our Churches and Sunday Schools are taking quite an interest in it. Our Durham Church and Sunday School has sent us more than four hundred dollars as a Thanksgiving offering, and hope to make it $500 by the end of the year. Rosemont Church and Sunday School, Eastern Virginia Conference, sent us a check for $616 for a Thanksgiving offering this year. Our Rosemont people are a working people, too. I have been informed that they will soon have their beautiful Church completed and ready to be dedicated and paid for. With a new Church building program on and make a Thanksgiving offering of $616 to the Orphanage—isn't that great? This should be an inspiration to many other Churches.

We are looking forward to splendid offerings from Burlington, Suffolk, Greensboro and many other Churches to help us reach our goal. Our Thanksgiving offerings so far this year amounted to $4,474.40. We still have $5,525.60 to raise to reach the ten thousand dollars.

Now, let everybody—pastors, Sunday School superintendents, teachers, officers and friends—as a great army, come to our rescue and help us reach our goal. We need your help and we need it now. See to it that your Church takes the offering and mail it in before the end of the year. Let every reader of THE SUN read the Orphanage letter from week to week, and we will keep you informed from week to week; and if you see that we need more help to climb to the goal, won't you help us?

As I write this letter, I am informed that ninety thousand people in New York are attending a football game. I could hear over the radio the deafening roar of thousands cheering the team of their choice, and the hearts of the players are made glad. We are very quiet at our desk writing this letter, and you are too far away to shout a word of cheer, but if your Church and Sunday School, or you personally, will mail us a check to help clothe, feed and care for these little fatherless children, your check will make us happy, too.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3⅜x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

FRIENDSHIP OF PAUL AND TIMOTHY.

of life's demands, and they come not without labor and effort.

Paul was further thoughtful of Timothy in this same connection and chapter when he charged him to flee from youthful lusts and follow righteousness, faith, charity, and peace. He assured him that such would enable him to develop a pure heart. He advised that he avoid foolish and unlearned questioners, such as would gladly lead him into strife. He tells him that with his learning he must be apt to teach and be always gentle and meek. In meekness he must instruct those who oppose themselves to the acknowledgment of the truth.

3. "Preach the Word; be instant in season and out of season" (2 Tim. 4:2).

In the final chapter of this second epistle, Paul admonishes Timothy, as a preacher, to always preach the Word. At all times he is charged to adhere to this command which was the basic principle of Paul. The Word of God is our sufficiency. Nothing that is man-made can be its substitute. Both in season and out of season, preach the word. It is the balm for every wound, and the source of inspiration for every task. The notions and fancies of your own are not to be discussed. The Word is to be your textbook and guide through all of life.

There will come times when men will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall heap to themselves teacher who have itching ears. These shall turn away their ears for the truth to fables. They shall want you to be popular, as they call it; but remember me and your commission to Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel. As you preach, you must reprove and rebuke many who need sound doctrine. In all things you must watch and endure afflictions. Do always the work of an evangelist and make full proof of thy ministry. Always bear in remembrance the fact that I, your friend and co-laborer, have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, and have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them also that love His appearing." And may the Lord Jesus Christ be with Thy Spirit. Grace be unto you. Amen.

THE YOUTH PROBLEM.

The longer I live and the more I acquaint myself with the conditions under which the youth of the South are forced to accumulate their ideas of life, the more I am made conscious of the appalling insufficiency of adult preparation for righteous child training. Only a few days ago I saw a father—a business man—setting an example for his seventeen-year-old son that will be damnable to a finish to that boy if he follows suit. Not long ago I overheard a mother condoling her daughter into going with a young man who was not worthy of the esteem of a pure Christian girl, and the daughter knew it, but you see this chap has a wealthy old father, and that was the catch for the eyes of this inconsiderate, mammonized mother. Poor girl! What a pity that she is so unfortunate in the gift of a mother! I have heard the youth problem almost every day during the last ten years in several different States, but I have learned, to my entire conviction, that it is the adult problem that is accentuating the perverseness of our youth.

I tell you, it's the grown-ups who are furnishing the delusionments for youth. So, before asking, what's the matter with youth, please ask, what's the matter with adults. Even adults with hoard heads! Face thousands of young people in the different States for ten years and have them bring you their problems (handicapping sorrows, perplexities, and the like), and you will find the rock-bottom in the youth problem. If they are bad, they are bad because they have found more of bad than good. Their wrong attitudes, ideas and objectives are contributions left them by their predecessors. They are our making, and the sooner we wake up to this fact, the sooner the youth problem will find its best solution.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE
of the
CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

FREEMAN.

Hiram Freeman was born January 12, 1850, and died November 11, 1930; age 80 years, 9 months, and 29 days. He was married to Nancy Jane Canon on November 4, 1869. They lived together 61 years. To this union were born eight children—six sons and two daughters. Four of the children preceded him to the grave. He leaves to mourn his going a wife and four children. He professed faith in Christ in early life and united with the Christian Church. He was faithful to his Church in every way and attended its services as long as he was able to get to the Church. He put his Church first.

He was buried at the Ether Christian Church, with service conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Jordan, a Baptist minister. He was a man whom the public knew well and loved. He was a justice of the peace for a long time and held positions of trust and confidence. There was a large congregation at the funeral, and he was placed beneath a mound of beautiful flowers. May God bless the widow, children and relatives.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY.

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

COMMUNITY CHESTS.—

Cleveland, Ohio, contributed this year for the community chest at Thanksgiving $5,418,000—the largest sum ever raised by any city at one time for the current expenses of charitable and welfare organizations. Of this amount, $4,667,000 was for the "regular" fund, and $751,000 for an emergency fund to tide the relief agencies through the present winter of unemployment and unparalleled distress.

MISSIONARY MUSEUM OPENED.—

Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, professor of the history of religion and Christian missions at Princeton University, has recently opened the missionary museum, the plans for which was announced last summer. The museum is intended for study rather than for observation and exhibition purposes, and will constitute a laboratory in the field of missions. Dr. Zwemer worked as missionary among the Mohammedans for a number of years and will be able to do great things in the preparation of young missionaries for the foreign field.

DR. MOTT HONORED.—

Dr. John R. Mott, one of the greatest missionary laymen in the world, has had the "Order of the White Lion" conferred upon him by President Thomas G. Masaryk, of Czechoslovakia, this honor being given in recognition of Dr. Mott's work as chairman of the World Student Christian Federation. His work is to be further honored in the presentation to him of a portrait of himself painted by Sir William Orpen, foremost portrait painter of England. More than a thousand pounds has been contributed for this purpose by friends of Dr. Mott.

DR. W. E. BARTON PASSES.—

Dr. Barton, who has been ill since August from heart trouble, followed by bronchial pneumonia, passed to his reward December 7th at Long Island College Hospital. He had been compelled to resign his position in Vanderbilt University as professor and also his pastorate of the Collegeside Church, Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Barton was a minister of the Congregational Church, and had served Churches at Boston, Chicago, and other city Churches with great success. He was an author of note and wide fame. He was an authority on the life and work of Abraham Lincoln. He wrote "The Life of Clara Barton" and other works of note.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S AGE.—

The Baptist Young People's Union of Texas recently held a convention of its annual meeting, and there were 45,000 registered delegates. Three auditoriums were necessary to accommodate the throngs in the simultaneous sessions. The young people of the Church hold the future of Christianity in their grasp, and that Church, local or national, which neglects the young people is doomed to die. Christian education in our colleges may prepare a few leaders in young people's work, but unless the multitudes of young people who never take courses in Christian education in college are trained in and for Christian service, the work of the kingdom will wane and fail of its great purpose.

Who But God?

BY ALBERT JOHN MURPHY.

When on the background of the centuries,
Dim with the dusk of ages, God began
To paint a picture equal to the years,
He chose the theme of mother-love, and then
He framed it with the beauty of the skies.
With shades of earth and lights of heaven,
He wrought
The art which shames the wisdom of the wise.
Below, a Babe to make a woman cry;
Above, the glory of the Eastern Stars!

And then God touched the golden strings of sound,
And up from out the heart of all the world,
Like mystic messengers from other realms,
Came angel voices prophesying peace.
So far they sound, and yet so near, they seem
To be lost voices of the human heart,
Lost dreams of hope, too fair, too frail for earth,
Come back, like echoes down the centuries.

Immortal scene that only God could paint—
The Child, the stablestraw, the starry light;
The song of angels singing down the years;
The spirit in the heart that bids us rise
To fairer heights of love, and hope, and peace:
This is God's poem-song.
For who but God could think of Christmas!

LIFE ADJUSTMENT.—

Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., has won fame by its achievements through its life-adjustment center, with a staff of twenty-six physicians and psychiatrists, working with the minister of the Church, all under the guidance of a trained director. Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, associate minister at Broadway Tabernacle, New York City, since 1927, has accepted a call to this Church as pastor, and the work of life adjustment will continue to apply psychiatry to neurotics, mentally disturbed, and neuresthenics for restoring them to normal life under the direction of Christianity. Christ healed many who had functional troubles and taught His disciples to carry on the work of healing and the new psychology is doing wonderful things in this field since the World War.

HOME MISSION CONFERENCE.—

Babling voices and conflicting philosophies were in evidence at the Washington, D. C., Congress of Home Missions, held at Washington, December 1-5. Opinion ranged from a stalwart defense of the present denominational order to an outright statement of the goal of a united Protestantism. The congress discussion revealed the fact that many communities are over-churched and that much could be saved for the extension of the kingdom by a better distribution of effort. "Statistical and research experts have declared that too great a per cent of home mission money goes into fields of 1,000 population or less that have more than one Protestant Church, and that each of the denominations represented in the Home Mission Congress participates in such duplication."

IMMORTALITY.—

Dean Shailer Matthews, speaking for the theologians, in last month's issue of the University of Chicago magazine, held that "there is no use in talking about what a particular form of matter will do or won't do before you know what matter is; there is no use in being dogmatic about anything you don't know." "Religion did not invent itself in the continuance of life after death. That came out of the urge of life itself, and this is practically universal. Millions of people in all grades of culture have believed themselves immortal. The belief was due to the deeper belief that what had produced personal values was still at work producing personal values. Primative man thought in terms of soul and spirit, and modern man is coming to think of God as personality working in creative love."

COUNTRY CHURCH COST $450,000.—

Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church was built as a country Church in the environs of Philadelphia. The city has grown out to meet the Church in the country, and has entirely enveloped it with lovely homes. The pastor, Rev. Edward C. McCown, is assisted by Rev. Donald Spencer; other workers are the pastor's secretary, a financial secretary, and a trained Sunday School director. The total membership is said to be approximately 2,300, of whom 2,000 are contributors. If this is true, it is certainly unusual. The exact enrollment of the Sunday School is 1,876, and three weeks ago the attendance was 1,176. A new Church was dedicated three years ago at a cost of $450,000. It stands on a hill and its two towers remind one of the Durham Cathedral. The Church seats 1,400 people and is frequently in the morning well filled with worshipers.

NOTES-PERSONALS

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all CHRISTIAN SUN readers.

"Thou shalt call His name Jesus: for He shall save His people from their sins" (Matt. 1:21).

There will be no CHRISTIAN SUN next week. Printers and editors will join the rest of the world in observing Christmas.

Here is wishing for all CHRISTIAN SUN readers a Happy Christmas, and that during the season we may often think of Him who gave us the day and the season of joy and gladness.

"Fear not: for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10-11).

Let God admonish your souls today. "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report: if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Paul).

Dr. A. B. Kendall, North Girard, Pa., has accepted the pastorate of the Hopewell Christian Church and plans to move to Hopewell and begin the work at the earliest possible date. Hopewell is to be congratulated, as is Dr. Kendall, on the opportunity and outlook for real service to the Church and the kingdom.

It is still not too late to give your pastor a copy of Doran's Ministers' Manual for 1931. He will appreciate it beyond most anything you could give. Compiled by Dr. G. B. F. Hallock, it is chocked full of illustrations, ideas, seed thoughts and suggestions that will make his life easier during the coming year. Order a copy now from THE SUN office. It contains 625 pages, and the price is only $2.50.

A recent visit by THE SUN editor to Piedmont Junior College, Wadley, Ala., found President Beougher and his faculty busy and happy in their work. Much work has been done recently in completing the handsome and commodious administration building, in installing a larger and more adequate central heating plant, and in improving the grounds about the buildings. Quite an increase in number of students is promised after January 1st, President Beougher informed us. Dr. Jenkins resides a La Grange, Ga., and is giving all his time to financial and field work for the college.

One hundred and two persons—the largest number recorded in a single month since records have been kept—were killed by automobiles in North Carolina in November. There were 330 automobile accidents, resulting in 404 injuries and 102 fatalities. During the eleven months of 1930, ending with November, there were 690 fatalities in the State, the exact total of the new high record for the year of 1929, of which number 68 occurred in December, '29. Despite warning, signs and experience, automobile accidents and fatalities continue to mount higher and higher by the month and the year.

The Burlington News, December 16th, carries this item of pleasing interest about one of our well-known and beloved members: "The name of Dr. P. H. Fleming, minister, superintendent of the public welfare department of Alamance County, with complete biographical data, appears in the first edition of "Who's Who in Government," by the Biographical Research Bureau, Inc., 460 West Thirty-fourth Street, N. Y. The book contains 800 pages, 700 of them being required to give the data on prominent citizens of the entire United States who, in the opinion of the publishers, should be listed by such a work. The sketch on Dr. Fleming reveals his record as unusually active in Church, educational and welfare work."

It is very gratifying to report that Rev. R. Lee House, as pastor, also chairman of the home mission committee, Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference, has engaged to preach at Franklinton, N. C., second and fourth Sundays the present Conference year, with the hope and purpose of reviving and reorganizing the Christian Church at that place. Bro. House held his first service at Franklinton Sunday evening, December 14th,

THE VOICE OF CHRISTMAS.

I cannot put His presence by, I meet Him everywhere:
I meet Him in the country town, the busy market Square.
The mansion and the tenement attest His presence there,
Upon the funneled ships at sea he sets his shining feet,
The distant ends of empire not in vain His name repeat.
And like the presence of a rose, He makes the whole world sweet.
He comes to break the barriers down raised up by barren creeds.
About the globe from zone to zone like sunlight He proceeds;
He comes to give the world's starved heart the perfect love it needs.
The Christ, whose friends have played Him false, whom dogmas have belied,
Still speaking to the hearts of men, though shamed and crucified, and reports a very good attendance with an encouraging outlook. Some repairs have been made and the place of worship put in condition for services. We should have had a strong Christian Church at Franklinton years ago, and there is hope now, with one of their own as champion and leader, that the good work will go forward.
The Master of the centuries, who will not be denied! —Harry Kemp.

Rev. S. E. Madren, writing from Fancy Gap, Va., December 12th, says: "We had a wonderful meeting (evangelistic) at Rocky Ford Church this fall. It closed a short time ago, after running for about four weeks, with about fifteen professions and several reconsecrations. Nine united with the Church and were baptized. The meeting was a spiritual awakening for the Church, and it meant much to the community. We now have the Rocky Ford Church painted (two coats), at a total cost of $125.85. It took more paint than it would have if it had been painted when it was built. We, the local community, are raising half of the above amount, with the hope and understanding that others will donate the other half, and thus meet the bill."

The following reported in the daily press from the proceedings of the recent annual session of the North Carolina Conference M. E., South, is of general interest: "The conference also adopted a resolution to unite with the Western North Carolina Conference in a joint effort to raise $100,000 by February 1, 1931, to liquidate the debts on the Methodist Church at Chapel Hill and College Place Church, Greensboro, where hundreds of Methodist girls at North Carolina College for Women attend. The conference was told early in the week that Chapel Hill Church was in danger of being sold under mortgage unless an immediate settlement was made on the debt. A resolution was also adopted by unanimous vote indorsing the proposed merger with the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina, and providing for appointment of a committee to work out the details. A similar resolution was passed a few weeks ago by both the Western North Carolina Conference and the Methodist Protestant Conference."

Mr. W. E. MacClenny, Suffolk, Va., a member of the committee on memorials at the Lebanon site, Surry County, Va., and on the campus at Elon College (O'Kelly Memorial), being officially advised that the memorials were now erected, dedicated and paid for, under date of December 19th, writes: "I am glad that the two monuments are erected and paid for. Little did I think when my first report was made as Historian of the Southern Christian Convention at the Christian Temple, in Norfolk, that these two markers would have been erected and paid for by this time. They will stand, no doubt, for ages to point the youth of the Church to the facts they commemorate. As a Church, we now need one other thing, and that is a complete and full history of the Christian Church in the South, prepared by some scholar, and put in the ministerial course at the college, so that the coming men of the Church will be posted on our denomination and that for which it stands. This should be prepared by a member of the faculty of the college as most of the material is there at hand and only has to be studied out to get it."

I wonder whether we are willing to face seriously and thoroughly the fact of Christ. A few years ago a volume of sermons appeared, with these opening sentences: "What exactly has Christ done for you? What is there in your life that needs Christ to explain it, and that apart from Him simply could not have been there at all? We have come to such familiarity with Jesus Christ and His words that we just assume that we know His meaning and the significance of His teaching and that we are making of Him and His teaching all that we ought. But is either assumption vitally true in our lives? What is there in our lives and conduct, beliefs and habits, views and dispositions that is so Christ-like that it requires Jesus Christ to account for it in us? Just what is there that would not be there, what beauty or nobility or excellence, what strength or patience or courage, what kindness or generosity or sympathy—what is there that simply would not be there at all if he had not come? Or what is there that would not continue for a day but for His continuing influence within us?" Christmas cannot be an experience unless Jesus Christ is born in us. It cannot be permanent unless He abides with us and in us. If His birth is simply an event, it has only the value of an event. Unless it is also an experience for us, it does not mean what it should.—Wm. Fraser McDowell.

INTERDENOMINATIONAL SCHOOLS.

Interdenominational leadership training schools have the day in Florida now, with Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, our Congregational extension worker, and other educational representatives of the Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal, South, the Presbyterian U. S., Presbyterian U. S. A., and Disciples of Christ Churches. These schools have been the outgrowth of the finest and most natural kind of interdenominational co-operation—a feeling on the part of the six Churches that they can do together a much more thorough and effective piece of leadership training than any one of them can do separately, and that in this united effort each worker multiplies his, or her, work by six. So these representatives have first of all become friends, and out of this friendship and an earnest desire to help the teachers and officers of the various Churches to better prepare themselves for finer work, have grown these schools in the larger centers of Florida.

The first school of the fall series was held in Daytona Beach, November 9-14, and Miss Coghill served as dean of the school and taught a course in young people's materials and methods. Ormond Community Congregational Church, seven miles away, sent five of its teachers and officers each evening that week, and Dr. Lincoln, pastor of the Daytona Beach Congregational Church, had a large part in planning the school, and conducted the worship service between classes each evening in a splendid manner.

Other schools held for a week in close succession—one day between each—were Miami, where we have five Congregational Churches in the vicinity; St. Petersburg, where the Lutheran Church entered the school, too, and its minister served as chairman of the board of managers; and Jacksonville, where the Episcopal Church was well represented. The worship services of the Jacksonville school were held in the Taliferro Memorial Chapel of the St. John's Episcopal Church, and the classes in the educational building of the First Methodist Church. Miss Coghill taught the course, "Training in Worship and the Devotional Life," in each of these schools.

Schools have been planned for the winter and spring months in the following places:

Lake Worth—February 22-27.
Orlando, Winter Park—March 1-6.
Tampa—March 8-13.
Sanford—March 15-20.
Fort Myers—March 22-27.
Key West—(Date to be decided).

Miss Coghill will teach in these schools and serve as dean of several of them.

Another effort toward co-operation educationally is a series of one and two-day rallies held in places where it is impossible to hold schools for a while. The first of this series was held in Eustis, December 7-8th, for the Churches of Eustis, Mt. Dora, Tavrees, and Umatilla. As a part of the program for the two days, a number of conferences on departmental work in the Church school were conducted, and Miss Coghill, in her group on young people's work, had representatives of nine different denominations. Similar rallies will be held at New Smyrna, Crescent City, and other places.

The fine interest in these schools has led us to believe that leadership training and missionary education should be our chief emphasis educationally in all of the Florida Churches this year. Toward this end, a series of classes will be conducted in a number of Churches where interdenominational work is not done, with classes one night each week in five different Churches for five weeks. This has an advantage in that it will mean that each Church is in training for a longer period of time, has more time for study, and an opportunity to apply the teaching on Sundays between sessions and to report results, and will give the field worker an opportunity to get into each Church for one Sunday during the five weeks.

LET'S PUT IT OVER.

There are only two weeks left in which to bring the apportionment giving for 1930 up to 100 per cent. All moneys to be counted on the apportionment must be mailed by January 10th, the day on which the books close. Any thing mailed on the 10th will be credited, even though it does not reach the receiving office for a day or two. All Church treasurers and treasurers of auxiliary organizations should make every effort to send their checks by that date. Those in Florida should send them to Edwin C. Gillette, 117 West Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.; others in the Southeast should send their checks to Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, 528 Victor Building, Washington, D. C. May we not make every effort to make our giving for this year as large as possible.

This year was to be the year of advance, it being the hope that the giving of the Churches would be increased 20 per cent this year. Some of our Churches have reached this 20 per cent advance. For others that may be impossible, but can we not make it a full apportionment. When the plan of advance was proposed, there was little anticipation of the financial disaster that has struck the country. With the disaster has come increased demands for help all along the line of missionary endeavor, not only in this country but also on the foreign field. The condition is world-wide. We must not let our missionaries or our missionary work suffer if we can help it. Let us give to the boards, that they in turn may see that the missionary pastors receive their salaries and that the work goes forward. Every dollar contributed now will have unusual value, as the need is unusually great. Send your contributions by January 10th.

TRIBUTES FROM "THE CENTURY."

The Christian Century, that outspoken, independent Christian journal, in a recent issue carried a splendid tribute as an editorial to Dr. Wm. E. Barton, and also reprinted that rarely beautiful tribute which Dr. Barton, writing as "Safed the Sage," paid to his wife after her death five years ago. We quote these words from the editorial:

"The death of Dr. William E. Barton comes to the Christian Century as a stunning blow. Who can take the place of 'Safed the Sage?' Or from whom can there come articles with equal clarity of viewpoint, audacity of thought, trenchancy of style, and directness of purpose? It was the stuff of life with which Dr. Barton dealt, and the pulse and tang of life ran easily from his pen onto these pages. Probably this triumphant humanness showed most plainly in the parables which he contributed for years to these and other pages. As commentaries on the ever-changing, yet changeless comedie humaine, those parables have been unsurpassed. The man had elements of genius in him, and the root of that genius was his understanding of human foibles and forces. Few men have left more solid accomplishment behind them."

The Christian Century also, when commenting upon the departure of Dr. Jason Noble Pierce from Washington, had these fine things to say about him:

"For ten years Dr. Pierce's influence and ministry have blessed Washington. He leaves this city with the love and esteem of all his brother-pastors. His has been an influence of inestimable value, and he will be sorely missed."

NEW SECRETARY FOR BOARD.

Rev. Hugh Vernon White, of Stockton, Calif., has just accepted a call from the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Boston, Mass., to a secretaryship in its home department, beginning his official duties about the first of March, with offices at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Mr. White, in coming to Boston, concludes a successful pastorate of seven and a half years in the Stockton First Congregational Church.

"I consider that this offer is one of the biggest and most important opportunities in a world crisis for developing better understanding and for interpreting Christianity at home and abroad," says Mr. White.

Hugh Vernon White was born in Kern County, Calif., graduated from the University of California, B. A., 1917, and the Pacific School of Religion, S. T. B., with an S. T. M. from Harvard Divinity School, which he earned while carrying a pastorate in the Smith Memorial Church, Hillsboro, N. H. Mr. White served several years (1919-1923) as a pastor and teacher in the Hawaiian Islands, being minister during that period of the Kahului Union Church and the First Christian Church of Honolulu, as well as an instructor in the Hamakuapoki High School.

Mr. White's work in the home department of the American Board, which is the oldest foreign missionary society in the United States and directs the overseas service of the Congregational and Christian Churches of America, will be primarily along educational rather than financial lines, interpreting the spirit of modern missions to the Churches and the public.

MISSIONARY STUDY BOOKLETS.

A few days ago there came to the desk of the extension worker four booklets which look most interesting—"India Today," by Genevieve Sargeant Phillips; "Yesterday and Today in Puerto Rico," by Mrs. Manley F. Allbright; "Our Common Social Problems," by Hubert C. Herring and Katharine Terrell; "Why a Woman's Society in the Local Church," by Elsie Gaugh Higgins.

Each of these booklets contains four programs written especially for the adult group that must have enough material for a meeting given under one cover. Additional suggestions for further study are also given. These booklets may be secured for 10 cents each from any office of the Commission on Missions, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.; 287 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; 19 S. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill. Priscilla Chase.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS.

(Matthew 2:1-11.)

Now, when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the King, behold! there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying, Where is He that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen His Star in the East, and are come to worship Him.

When Herod the King had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea; for thus it is written by the prophet, And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judea, art not the least among the princes of Juda, for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel.

Then Herod, when he had finally called the wise men, enquired of them diligently what time the Star appeared.

And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young Child, and when ye have found Him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship Him also.

When they had heard the King, they departed; and lo, the Star, which they saw in the East, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young Child was.

When they saw the Star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

And when they were come into the house, they saw the young Child with Mary, His mother, and fell down and worshiped Him; and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto Him gifts: gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

A CHILD IS BORN.

"For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon His shoulder: and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end . . . from henceforth, even forever." (The prophecy of Isaiah, chapter 9, verses 6 and 7.)

Writing some seven hundred and fifty years before the event occurred, the prophet speaks as if the incident related had already taken place. With such certainty and assurance did the prophets write. This is the unmistakable sign and proof of divine inspiration and revelation. Only a mind living in and illuminated by the clear light of Deity could describe, with accuracy and detail, an event as if it had already taken place which was to take place seven and a half centuries later.

What the prophet saw and said, by revelation, would take place, we know by history, fact and experience now did take place. And the Child has more than lived up to the prophecy. From the moment He was cradled in the manger till this good hour, the increase of His government has been sure, unmistakable, steadfast. Against odds, evils, injustice, oppression, selfishness and greed, that government of judgment, justice and peace has been and still is on the increase. It spread out from Bethlehem, Jerusalem, Palestine till it now touches and, in greater or less measure, influences every government, nation and peoples on this earth. Even in the pagan or non-Christian lands today 29,188 ambassadors (missionaries) for Christ are supported by the Church to proclaim the "Good News" of the Child that was born in Bethlehem nineteen hundred and thirty years ago. In addition, 151,735 natives converted to the way and the life are likewise supported by the Church, so that they, too, may give all their time, talent, strength to testifying of Him on whose shoulder the government rests; 36,246 Churches and 3,614,154 communicants represent and testify of Christ with their lives even in "the darkness of the non-Christian world."

But this tells little of the story. This government has struck downward as well as outward. It penetrates conduct, character and society to their depths. "Big business," as well as little individuals, must reckon with the Child. No agency or activity in society, save the gangster and the outlaw, can ignore the life, the moral standards and the way of the Man of Galilee. He lived a life and established ideals that cannot be ignored. Millions of dollars have been spent, and will be, in gifts by friends to friends, gifts of good cheer and good will. Every business and every person is more or less affected by the Christmas season and spirit.

And in millions of homes there will be, and are today, glad family reunions, joyous greetings and good cheer, because "unto us a Child is born: of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end forever." J. O. A.

The Bethlehem Inkeeper Speaks.

The inn was full. There was no room.
And yet, of course, I might have made
Arrangement. But the evening gloom
Came on—a man must keep his trade—
The guests were in—they all had paid.

There was no room. The inn was full,
And it had been a busy day;
So many vexing questions pull
A landlord's heart. All can not stay—
The late ones must be turned away.

The inn was full. There was no room,
But certainly I could have done
Something if I had known for whom—
Ah, that my door should be the one
To shut out Mary and her Son!

—B. Y. Williams.

HOME THE CENTER.

Christmas puts home at the center. Motherhood, childhood, the family circle and fireside—these come into their own at Christmas. For family life was cemented and motherhood eternally glorified when the Babe of Bethlehem was born. This was the beginning of Christmas, now the most enjoyed, and the most observed of all holidays or holy days.

One of the greatest Christmas songs ever written and sung is "O Little Town of Bethlehem." This song brings vividly to mind a picture of a family with all its anxieties, hopes, fears, joys. And this is one of the most valuable contributions Christmas makes to the world and to each of us. It "takes us home, or keeps us home, and makes us realize that the home may be the center of life's richest joys."

The mother instinct is the strongest and most fundamental of human endowments. And the home instinct comes next. Whatever prevents the one or destroys the other, brings disappointment, sorrow, separation, loneliness. Many a heart with a sundered home walks the weary way of life with a sorrow and loneliness that can only be explained by blasted hopes, unfulfilled dreams, frustrated ideals and aspirations. But often God ordains it so that through sorrow and loneliness we may become better acquainted with the Man of Galilee, the gift of whose sorrow, suffering and loneliness is Christmas with all its joy.

Home life is the center of our civilization, and our native instincts and endowments as well. Because Christmas brings us home and revives the sweetest and most sacred memories and instincts of our minds and nature, we make it the most joyful of all seasons. J. O. A.

SCHOLARSHIP AND BUSINESS.

The man of business may also be a scholar and a patron of learning. Such is J. Pierpont Morgan, of New York, upon whom Oxford, a foremost university of Europe, recently conferred the honorary degree of doctor of civil law—the highest honor this venerable university can confer. It is reported in the press that this high honor was paid to an American business man in recognition of three outstanding traits. First, because he has busied himself, at the expense of time and fortune, in securing many rare and valuable books for the British Museum; second, even before America went into the World War, Morgan was generously aiding the English in their struggle against Germany; third, he has shown for years a keen appreciation of country life and out-of-doors pursuits which the English, as a nation, greatly value.

While Mr. Morgan gives much time to his business interests, which are almost world-wide, he has not neglected, either, his pursuit of knowledge, and has kept up a deep interest in and loyalty to the Church.

Not a few men in business feel that they must and should give all their time and energy to their financial affairs. Fact is, the pursuit of learning regular attendance at Church, and a deep interest in religion do not hinder, but always help, a man or woman in achieving success in the business world. J. O. A.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.

The First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., celebrated the anniversary of its foundation and commencement with appropriate service at the Church on November 30, 1930. Twenty-nine years ago a small group of people dedicated themselves to the high and holy task of beginning a work for Christ in the city of Portsmouth which has grown with the passing years. Believing that the principles of the Christian Church afforded for them an opportunity of service for Christ and humanity, they founded the first Christian Church ever established in the city. Under the leadership of Rev. J. W. Harrell, they commenced a work which has progressed throughout the twenty-nine years of the Church's history. Worshiping first together in rented quarters, this group eventually built a mission building located on the corner of Effingham and High Streets. After some years the dream of these founders was consummated with the completion of the splendid and thoroughly modern Church home which they now occupy on Washington Street.

However, the physical accomplishments of these twenty-nine years do not constitute real occasion of thanksgiving and celebration services, much though they may be, for this Church group possesses properly valued at $100,000, a splendid membership which is constantly increasing in numbers, together with many other physical evaluations, but, in the opinion of its pastor and membership, the real occasion of thanksgiving and engagement in anniversary program is attributable to the spiritual accomplishments and values which have, and now do, constitute its supreme possessions.

During the years of the past, many people have passed across its threshold hungry of heart, undone, unsaved and lost and have found at its sacred altars the blessing of an eternal salvation wrought through the Book of God, the shed blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, and through its teaching built upon a firm and unshaken belief in the eternal word of God these have grown in grace, in the knowledge of God and have made their contribution to Jesus Christ and civic righteousness. The Elm Avenue Christian Church was organized and established a few years ago by virtue of the First Church, and this Church has grown wondrously with the years, evidencing the divine benediction of God.

The Sabbath School of the First Church has been a splendid factor in developing the growth of the Church, having had that leadership which reckoned only in spiritual realities, for the past several years. W. H. Lee, who holds a high and important position with the U. S. government, being attached to the Navy Yard, has acted as superintendent of the school, assisted by a faithful corps of teachers. The school has developed in a most phenomenal manner.

The auxiliaries of the Church, in their faithful and loyal sacrificial services, have made that contribution toward its character and growth which can never be measured by human standards or described in words. The present pastor, Rev. H. C. Caviness, came to the Church pastorate four years ago. He was acting as evangelist of the Southern Christian Convention at that time, having conducted campaigns in many sections of the country, occupying some of the largest pulpits in America, unusual spiritual results had attended his work wherever he preached, devoid of sensational attraction, concerned only in the souls of men and not in the silver they possessed, preaching a plain, simple gospel message, built only upon the verities of God's Word. Mr. Caviness has been peculiarly prepared for the ministry. Graduating from the University of North Carolina at the age of twenty-one years and licensed to practice law immediately thereafter, he engaged in his profession for some fourteen years, having a large and lucrative practice practically from the beginning. At the age of thirty-five years, he was converted, almost immediately entering the ministry, turned aside from a brilliant and promising career to preach the gospel.

Since Mr. Caviness has been pastor here, the First Church has had a splendid growth, its membership having increased over two hundred per cent. It has just closed the most successful year in every way in the history of the organization.

Attendant upon the anniversary services were many leaders of the Church, who took part in the program of the day. The Rev. W. W. Staley spoke at the 11 o'clock hour from the text, "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Christ Jesus" (1 Cor. 3:11). A service which invoked universal congregational consciousness that Christ Jesus is in deed and truth the only Foundation on which a Church can build. Dr. Staley has kindly consented to furnish us with a copy of the sermon, which will appear at a later date in THE SUN. Preceding the morning service, Mr. C. D. West, trustee of Elon College, N. C., resident of Newport News, Va., presented, in a strikingly impressive manner, the needs of our Orphanage at the Sabbath School hour.

At the afternoon service, a splendid musical program was rendered by the Church choir, an organ solo by Mrs. George D. Eastes, wife of a former pastor of the Church, now deceased. The unique feature of the program was the singing on the part of the Cockes brothers, who assisted in the organization of the Church, now residents of Elberon, Surry County, Va., assisted by the choir of the New Lebanon Christian Church. This feature was the outstanding musical event of the program.

Rev. J. W. Harrell, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., the founder and organizer of the Church, was present and spoke to a great congregation concerning the work of organization attendant upon the Church's beginning, giving a splendid but brief history of the years he ministered here. Others speaking on the afternoon program, giving splendid yet very brief addresses were Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, president of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference; Rev. T. N. Lowe, pastor of Elm Avenue Christian Church, Portsmouth, a Church which was organized under the auspices of First Church; Rev. C. E. Sheldon, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Portsmouth; Rev. W. W. Staley, member of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention; Mrs. R. T. Bradford, president of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Association, and Rev. H. W. Dunkley, president of the Portsmouth Ministerial Union, conveyed to the Church the expressions of regard from this body for the spiritual accomplishments of the membership and the hope of greater achievements in the future.

Rev. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention and pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, closed the afternoon program after delivering a great gospel message on the subject of "Evangelism." The pastor, Rev. H. C. Caviness, closed the program of the day by preaching at the night service from the text, "Be thou faithful unto death" (Rev. 2:16). This brought to an end the greatest day in the history of the Church, and as this Church and its pastor face the future with enlarged vision and bigger program for the coming year, they ask your prayers, that these objectives shall be realized.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

HISTORY OF NORFOLK MISSION OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

First Meeting.

During the annual session of the Eastern Virginia Conference, held at Holy Neck Church, in 1889, an informal meeting was held at the residence of Capt. P. H. Lee, in Nansemond County, to consider the question of establishing a Christian Church in the city of Norfolk. This meeting was on October 31, 1889, and the following persons were present: Revs. J. P. Barrett, M. L. Hurley, W. S. Long, J. W. Wellons, C. J. Jones, W. W. Staley, and Col. A. Savage, Capt. P. H. Lee, W. J. Lee, A. M. Eley, John C. Haynes, W. T. Duke, I. W. Everett, E. S. Norfleet, R. A. Hyslop, and Frank Portlock. It was decided to hold a subsequent meeting in Norfolk on November 11, 1889.

Second Meeting.

The second meeting was held at the residence of Mrs. A. L. Hill, November 11, 1889, fifteen persons being present. After a pleasant conference, a finance committee was appointed, composed of W. W. Staley, M. L. Hurley, A. Savage, A. M. Eley and J. C. Haynes. A subscription for current expenses of $700 was reported, and an appropriation of $800 by the Home Mission Board of the American Christian Convention. This was considered a safe basis to begin the work, and a call was extended to Rev. C. J. Jones, who at that time was "general evangelist." W. W. Staley was instructed to telegraph Dr. Jones and explain by letter all that had been done. A. Savage was elected treasurer; T. A. Jones, secretary; A. M. Eley, collector. T. A. Jones and A. M. Eley were made a committee to secure a place for holding services, and to appoint a meeting, after hearing from Dr. Jones. Dates of correspondence between Staley and Jones were November 12th and 16, 1889.

Third Meeting.

Dr. Jones came to Norfolk early in December and a small meeting was held at the residence of Col. Savage, on Boush Street. The committee on place of worship reported the purchase of a chapel on Charlotte Street for $3,250 for temporary use. This action was approved.

Fourth Meeting.

A meeting was held in the chapel March 17, 1890, at which Rev. R. A. Ricks was present. The subject of organization for the prosecution of the enterprise was considered and forty charter workers enrolled.

Fifth Meeting.

At a meeting on April 5, 1890, twelve names were added, making fifty-two in all. Many of these were members at other places and meant only to support the work in Norfolk.

Sixth Meeting.

At a meeting held May 29, 1890, officers were elected as follows: deacons—A. Savage, A. M. Eley and S. A. Etheridge; treasurer, A. Savage; secretary, T. A. Jones; ushers, P. H. Savage and James A. Eley.

The reunion of the Christian Church, North and South, at Marion, Ind., October, 1890, suggested the idea of making this a memorial Church. On that occasion the subject of erecting a memorial Church in Norfolk was decided and the work placed under the direction of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference.

On January 14, 1891, a committee was appointed to sell the chapel on Charlotte Street and purchase a new location. The property was sold and a lot purchased in Brambleton upon which was erected a plank chapel at a cost of $1,080. This was occupied from March 15, 1891, to March 11, 1894. Then a brick Church, known as Memorial Temple, was erected at a total cost for lot and building of $22,540. Norfolk paid $9,040; the South, $5,500, and the North, $2,800, covering a balance of debt, $5,200. All was paid before the dedication. Total expended: property, $22,540, and current expenses, $11,245, making a total of $33,785. Of this, Norfolk had paid $16,120; South, $7,865; North, $4,600, leaving a balance unpaid of $5,200, but all was paid before and at the dedication. This hisory is the childhood of the Christian Temple, in Norfolk, and the child grew by faith and Christian co-operation.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

Last week in the Elon Letter I cited the fact that truth, for practical purposes as we prefer to understand it, is not to be looked upon as final or ultimate. Such a conception of truth would fetter rather than free men. Always the experience of the human race has been that truth has extended the sphere of man's freedom. The second characteristic of truth, equally important with its accuracy, is, therefore, its progressiveness. Upon a superficial glance at the matter, it would appear that truth as accuracy and truth as progressiveness are inconsistent with each other. But a thorough-going consideration of these matters convinces that there is no conflict between these two characteristics. Truth should be regarded as a highway to be constructed toward a flying goal. The accuracy with which we accredit truth corresponds to the hotels or other places for refreshment along this highway; and what is more, each of these hotels and places of rest along this highway represents an increasing mastery of the facts and the discoveries that have been gathered by experience as the journey along the highway has lengthened out.

Take an illustration from chemistry. There was a time when the alchemists felt that the baser metals could be transmuted into gold. Their efforts to effect this transmutation led to the discovery of about ninety-two chemical elements over a period of some twelve centuries. During this period of discovery, the theory of the alchemists was discredited, but strange to say, the modern chemist knows that it is possible to change any element into gold, since all the elements are composed of protons and electrons, as constituent elements of what was once regarded as the ultimate form of the physical world, the atom. During all this process of discovery, chemists have made use of such facts as they thought they possessed in making their science serviceable to the life of man, but at the same time they have recognized that new truth might at any minute burst from the laboratories of patient investigators with revolutionary effect upon the theory and the practice which they considered accurate, inclusive and dependable.

Mankind's approach to the discovery of new truth is remarkable for its common sense. Whenever some investigator thinks that he has discovered some new truth, men have not discarded the good they have previously enjoyed until the better has been indisputably demonstrated. The discovery of new truth, in other words, has not demolished the edifice of the past, but has utilized that edifice as a framework of a larger and more serviceable structure. Sometimes the discovery of new truth has made it necessary, so to speak, to jack up the structure already thought to be complete, and to place a new and stronger foundation under it, much as engineers oftentimes find it necessary when a skyscraper has been erected to drive piles and pour in concrete in order to render a building already built safe for the use of man.

Truth in its progressiveness is not intended to exclude former concepts of truth, but rather is looked upon as pyramidal, as supplemental, as a more reasonable explanation for all the facts involved. Truth is not interested in change for the sake of change. Prof. Millikan makes this very clear, writing as a scientist in the February, 1930, issue of Scribner's: "Science knows no such thing as change for the sake of change. The method of science is not to discard the past, but always to build upon it, to incorporate the great bulk of it into the framework of the present; the verified laws of the past must remain the laws of the future for the whole range of phenomena for which their correctness has been tested." The whole strength of investigation and discovery which has so benefited and blessed the human race is, therefore, dependent upon the conception of truth as progress.

The world owes an unpayable debt of gratitude to what I may describe as the honest doubter, or better still, the informed theorizer, to the man who, facing all the facts, becomes dissatisfied with the explanation so far given with reference to their meaning, and heroically challenges the prejudices as well as the conclusions of previous thinkers. All the martyrs to the truth have not been in the field of religion, though the supreme instance is Jesus of Nazareth. The pathway of human progress has been thickly strewn with the bones of martyrs in the discovery of truth in every realm of human experience. But these brave doubters, these heroic free thinkers, these incisive prophets and seers through their sufferings and through their deaths have purchased an expanding freedom for their fellows. We do well to build monuments to their memory, though these very monuments stand as a witness to the smallness of soul, the unfriendliness to truth of our forefathers.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

The prerequisite to individual and group progress is education. To contribute to any genuine advancement, the education must be of a kind that stimulates to reflective thinking. The faculty of Piedmont is interested in encouraging original thought and in developing the inquiring attitude of mind.

Constructive thinking requires a background upon which to construct. It involves a knowledge of the peoples of the past and of what they have sought to accomplish. Our courses in the history of civilization are a systematic beginning in acquiring this knowledge. Intellectual advancement demands minds which are liberal, minds striving constantly to free themselves from bondage to prejudices and from passionate reassertion to preconceptions. For rational judgments a college must supply a criterion of truth, as well as to discipline its students in the business of thinking. Those who organized this institution believe that the forces which cause and explain our thinking, and our environment, are spiritual influences; also they believed that we can best understand the significance of the arts and sciences if we judge them from the standpoint of their usefulness to the spiritual development of mankind. Piedmont Junior College believes that this point of view toward life and outlook which is fundamentally religious, is the fullest guarantee to free and constructive thinking.

The junior college ages are times when many young people are in especial need of personal attention from wise teachers. The freshman and sophomore years provide the students own foundation for his later specialized interests. They in particular are the years when he develops his own ideals for life and his background of general knowledge. Because of the peculiar needs of young people at this phase of their education, the small junior college has the support of the large institutions of learning which realize how often, in the crowded conditions of their own underclasses, students cannot get the individual consideration they need for these purposes. The junior college also meets the growing demand for general college work on the part of students who do not wish a full course leading to a degree in some major study.

The effort in Piedmont Junior College is to have education center in the student's life, not in subject-matter taught, and be the means of opening him to fully life, with nobler and richer satisfactions. We deplore the disposition, so often found in the name of education, to be content with training students in the conventional or professional modes of action and thought. Such schooling tends to make a closed mind, whereas real education is a process of growth which never can be exhausted; it is life, that life which is perpetually more abundant.

The spring semester opens January 22, 1931. for catalog and full particulars, address the president—

TURNER'S CHAPEL.

Turner's Chapel Christian Church wishes to give notice to the many friends of the late Rev. J. D. Wicker and Hon. A. W. Wicker, brother of J. D. Wicker, of a project began as a memorial to these men in the form of a building.

The Church at Turner's Chapel, because of its growth and increased attendance, is in need of additional rooms. The Church voted to build these rooms as a memorial to these men who were the founders and to a very great extent responsible for the maintenance of the same.

Rev. J. D. Wicker was for a number of years pastor of the Church, receiving for his services a very small salary. He served the Church at a sacrifice because of the interest and faith he had in God and the people at Turner's Chapel. As long as he lived he manifested a very great interest at this place.

The Hon. A. W. Wicker served the Church as deacon, superintendent and as a Church leader as long as he lived, and was no less interested in the Church than his brother. As we think of the faithfulness of these good men, not only at Turner's Chapel but in the cause of Christ and righteousness from the standpoint of the Church and government, we feel sure that something should be done to memorialize them.

There will be about the above-mentioned building some marker to show that these rooms were built as a memorial to these men. The building will cost approximately $1.000. Turner's Chapel feels that there are many friends both in and out of the Christian Church who will want to have a part in this work. Those wishing to make any contribution will please send same to the treasurer of this fund, Mrs. R. L. Ross, Route 5, Sanford, N. C. The Church wishes to do this work within the next few weeks, and your early response will be appreciated.

J. A. DENTON, Pastor.

POUNDED.

The members of Lowell Christian and Methodist Churches, together with many other friends, gave us a very pleasant surprise on Wednesday evening, the 26th, about 2:30 o'clock. There was an alarm at the door, and when I attended it, I discovered Bro. R. L. Dudley, a steward of the M. E. Church, South, with his big car all laden with all kinds of good things which it takes to fill an empty pantry; so many things, I will not try to enumerate them, and besides all these great blessings, the ladies of the Missionary Society of the Christian Church presented us with a nice new quilt, which we prize very highly. I shall not forget to mention one other great deed of kindness by Bro. H. Enloe, superintendent of W. A. Handley Manufacturing Company, at Roanoke, Ala., who a few weeks ago sent me out five tons of coal, which will be sufficient for this winter.

We take this means of thanking every one who contributed, together with the contribution for your kind thoughts of us. May God bless you daily. My family and I are sending to our dearly beloved editor of THE SUN and the entire force here's for a Merry Christmas and Very Happy New Year, and greetings to all SUN readers.

Yours for service first and always.

W. T. MEACHAM,
Roanoke, Ala. Pastor.

The trustees of the Ohio Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches have made an interesting innovation in naming Vincent H. Percy, organist of the Euclid Avenue Congregational Church, as consulting architect and engineer in the field of pipe organs for Churches of the State. When the ordinary Church starts out to purchase an organ, the committee in charge is usually a stranger in a strange land—and quite frequently gets "taken in." The purpose of this appointment is to give the Churches the advantage of skilled advice in their dealings with organ builders. Mr. Percy is a specialist in the field of organ building as well as an excellent organist.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(December.)

Dear Jesus, Prince of God, all hail! Thou, whom the Father didst send, of whom the angels sang, whom now we worship and adore, gifts to Thee we bring, gifts for use. Ability, time, means, self, we lay upon Thy altar of love. O make them Thine, we pray. Love only, Father, brought to earth Thy Son, the Holy Babe in manger laid. Bow our heads, bend our knees, lift our hearts, loose our tongues, that, to Him, the Prince of Peace, the conquering King, the lowly Saviour, universally and eternally shall ascend the honor and homage and praise and thanksgiving due His holy name. For His sake. Amen.

THE GIST OF THE MATTER IN MISSIONS.

If you have a vital Christianity, you will have the impulse to share it. That impulse will be its own justification. It cannot be resisted. It will not be denied. It expresses itself in the words of Peter, "We ought to obey God rather than men." It may seem to be presumptuous to some people. It always has. It may arouse opposition. It always has. But it proceeds about the task of communicating itself to others in obedience to a very humble and yet an imperial command from within itself.

The question comes down to this: Is Christianity (a knowledge of and a relationship with Christ) a good thing? Do we know it to be the supreme good in our lives? Are we conscious of benefits that have come to us so that we find a new light and a new courage for life? The whole matter is just as simple as this, believe it or not. The matter of our eagerness to share the Christian faith with somebody else is just a matter of how good it seems to us.

What we all need is to get back to the primary goal of Christianity as it is expressed in such words as "I am come that they might have life." It is only when people are absorbed in the secondary goals of religions that they do those things that are unkind and bewildering to those whom they serve. The spirit of the primary goal is a simple and friendly thing. It is entirely free from jealousy or any superiority complex. It has no mean spirit of exclusiveness. It has no fear of a rival. It is inconceivable that any man who has at heart such a primary goal as was exemplified in Jesus will ever have anything less than an eager interest to add to his discoveries anything that is good as found in other lives.

The closer we come to what was essential in the mission of Jesus, the more we will find ourselves caught up in the movement that in genuine love for mankind seeks to bring all into a knowledge of God in Christ.—Dr. A. D. Leavitt, in The American Board, Madison, Wis.

THE CHRISTIAN WHO DOUBTS.

In recent years there has been less presentation of the appeal of the last command of our Lord, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." There should be a revival of preaching on the great commission, but the call should not simply be based upon the divine imperative. Christ gave this command because its substance was the dearest desire of His heart. We do not go simply because He commanded it, but because this command was the expression of His own soul's love. If Jesus Christ is what we have accepted Him to be, then the world mission of the Church is imperative because of our love for Christ Himself. If we take Christ seriously, this enterprise is unassailable.

The Christian man who doubts, doubts Christ's spirit and program. The Christian man who opposes does not oppose some mission board, but his quarrel is with his Lord and Saviour. The man who thinks missions absurd and follows such thought to its logical conclusion would end in raising questions about Jesus Himself, for did He not say, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" He is bound up eternally with the missionary spirit. To destroy that spirit is to deny Christ's Lordship over one's soul and bring corrosion of spiritual insight and power as well as to eclipse the radiance of one's faith. How pitifully presumptuous for a Christian man to veto the missionary command of Jesus! It is Jesus who vetoes the denial of that call.—From The Preacher and His Missionary Message, by Stephen J. Corey.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Among other objectives and aims for the development and growth of this group, there are three outstanding things which this Church is attempting this year which promise much for the glory of Christ Jesus. First, each third Sabbath the mission challenge of Jesus Christ is presented to the entire Sabbath School as it assembles in its auditorium, an offering received therefor; however, the chief objective of this program is not so much the money that is gathered, but that the cause of missions may be impressed upon minds of the children as well as adults, a wonderfully splendid and impressive program is being presented. Second, two cottage prayer services are conducted in different sections of the city each Friday evening at 8 o'clock, led by the laity of the Church, which has brought a number to Christ and occasioned many additions to membership, and has proven a distinctive spiritual victory.

Third, on the second Sabbath of each month an offering is received for Jewish missions, a work nearer the heart of God than all others, this the evangelization of the Jew, God's chosen people, His gospel being, "first to the Jew, then to the Gentile." A work which has been so sadly neglected, occasioning a failure of gospel ministry for which the Gentile Church shall answer before the judgment seat of Jesus Christ in that day.

Brethren, pray for us (Rom. 15:30).

PROGRAM COMMITTEE.
First Church, Portsmouth, Va.

TWO-YEAR BAN ON IMMIGRATION.

The barring for two years, beginning next July 1st, of all quota immigration except the immediate relatives of persons already in the United States was proposed as an unemployment remedy by Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, a member of the Senate Immigration Committee, according to an Associated Press dispatch. The senator said that he would introduce a resolution to this effect at the coming session of Congress and predicted that it would pass "almost unanimously."

The proposal bears the endorsement of former Secretary of Labor Davis, who resigned his Cabinet position to become the junior senator of Pennsylvania. After reading the Reed resolution, the former Labor Secretary said: "That is good. I tried to get Congress to do that very thing last winter, and I am for it."

The resolution would exclude Filipinos as well as Europeans and others. Unlimited entry of Filipinos, Senator Reed said, would "offset all we have done and propose to do in restricting the entry of Europeans and persons from Central and South America."

The senator, in speaking of the proposed measure, said further: "To some extent, this will tend to prevent the spread of unemployment in this country. The welfare of our people must take precedence over the desire of aliens to enter the United States. Every arriving alien who comes here to earn a living in times like the present either displaces some one now at work or becomes in some degree a public charge. To permit new immigrants to enter the country at this time is unfair to both our own workers and to those who come expecting to find work.

This is a problem that touches every American. To suspend immigration will not in any way modify the permanent solution of our immigration policy as embodied in the immigration act of 1924, nor weaken the national origins principle on which it is built. The present quotas would continue to govern the admission of relatives described in the present law as non-quota and quota-preference immigrants.

"This group includes unmarried children under twenty-one years of age, husbands and wives of American citizens and parents of American citizens, subject to the general restriction of the immigration act relating to illiteracy and mental, moral and physical health."

Labor Department figures show 241,700 immigrants were admitted to this country in the year ended last June 30th for permanent residence. Senator Reed's resolution would affect only these, and would not bar non-immigrant or temporary visitor aliens of which there were 70,823 last year.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson I—January 4, 1931.

The Birth of John the Baptist.

Lesson: Luke 1:8-17, 80.

The lessons for this quarter are to be found in the gospel according to Luke. They offer a splendid opportunity for becoming acquainted with the life of Christ and with much of His teaching, for Luke has written a little more fully, and in some ways a little better than the other evangelists. Those who reverently and earnestly study the lessons for this quarter will be richly rewarded and spiritually quickened.

A Childless Home.

Here was a man and a woman, past the flowerhood of life, without children. It is not the ideal of family life. The family never comes to its fullest significance unless there are children in the home. Of course, there are circumstances when, in the providence of God, there can be no children. In that case, the adoption of children, or the expression of the mother and father instinct in practical ways toward other children helps. But, alas! for that home in which deliberately and usually from selfish motives, children are denied a place. It might be remarked in passing that it is a mistake to think in terms simply of what parents do for children. Children do as much for parents in a way as parents do for children. It takes both to bring each to fullest development.

In this particular case, it was all the more tragic, for the parents seemed so well qualified to bear children. They were of sturdy stock, humble, God-fearing people. One of the problems of modern life is the fact that in so many homes in which there are so many splendid factors which would minister unto childhood, there are few if any children, while many families in the more straitened circumstances of life, and especially those which belong to the physically and mentally deficient group, have large numbers of children.

A Staggering Promise.

"Thy wife, Elizabeth, shall bear thee a son." It seemed almost like a rude and crude joke, a taunt to the old man and his wife, who through all the years had yearned and prayed for a child in their home. It was not at all in keeping with ordinary run of human affairs for a child to be born into a home at that late date. It is simply another instance of the revelation of workings of a God who holds all things within His hands. There are many things which, to unregenerate and even to regenerate men, seem impossible. But, with God, all things are possible. Alas! for us that so many times, because of our lack of faith, He can do nothing for us or through us.

It is interesting to note, too, that in spite of the fact that the old man had been praying for a long time, he was not prepared for an answer to his prayer. When he heard the statement that he was to have a son in answer to his prayer, he could hardly believe it to be true. We pray, and many times either do not expect an answer to our prayer or else are not prepared for an answer.

An Open Line of Divine Communication.

"I am Gabriel that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings." There is an open line of communication between the Father and His children. It is a private line, and it is never "busy." We should avail ourselves constantly of this means of grace, not only to make our requests known unto Him, but in order that He may make His requests known unto us. The modern radio should speak to us in a very practical way about the illimitable resources and possibilities of prayer.

A Preacher's Son Who Did Not Turn Out Bad.

"And thou shalt have joy and gladness," and many shall rejoice at his birth, for he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God." All preachers' or religious workers' children do not "turn out bad." As a matter of fact, the children of ministers and religious workers usually achieve goals of character and success above their fellow-men. "Who's Who" bears testimony to this fact.

Young people should realize that they have an unpayable debt to their parents. And the only way in which children can begin to make any adequate return to parents is by leading such lives as will reflect honor and credit upon their parents. There are so many young people who do not bring "joy and gladness" to their parents because of their waywardness and their indifference to the ideals of their parents.

A Sign.

"And behold, thou shalt be dumb and not able to speak, until the day these things shall be performed." This is not to say that a man can decide all the problems of life by "throwing dice" or by opening a book at a certain page. But it does mean that those who set themselves to walk in the way of righteousness shall find confirmation of the wisdom of their choice. He that makes up his mind to do the thing that is right shall increasingly come to know, and have power to do the right.

Years of Silence.

"And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his showing." He was out in the country; out in the "sticks," as some folks would say. But there he was getting that strength of body and that strength of character and that knowledge of God which made him immortal and which won from the Master Himself the eulogy that among them that were born of women there had not arisen a greater prophet than John the Baptist. Let every young person take heed to what is called preparation for life, for it is as a matter-of-fact life itself.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sundays, January 4 & 11, 1931.

Topic for Jan. 4: "How to Keep on the Upgrade."

Scripture Reading: Phil. 3:12-16.

Keeping on the upgrade is important. We must do that if we are to grow and become what we ought to be.

Youth needs to give time and energy to guiding itself. After years have passed and habits have been formed, it will be hard to form new ones, even if we desire to change our old ones. The danger is that we may not even want to change them.

When Theodore Roosevelt—as just a boy of twelve—found out that he had a hard fight if he was to have a strong body, he went to work. So faithfully did he labor that he was known for his physical strength and endurance. Health is an essential if one is to keep on the upgrade. The best that we can do is limited by our bodies. Keep well.

There's a "romance of labor"! Work is not all drudgery. It is what we make it. Tackling the job in the right way means a great deal in the accomplishment of the task. Then, too, the reason for doing the work counts. If it's for the contributoin we make, and if it's our doing what we want to do most—and it can be just that—it is immensely worth while. Work in the right spirit.

Keeping happy means a lot to one who is trying to keep on the upgrade. For some people, keeping happy is no trouble at all. But for others it is a real task. To be really and truly happy in everything we do pays in health, wealth and friends. Be happy.

Prayer helps keep one on the upgrade. Use this storehouse of power. Ask the one who is in charge of the "Comrades of the Quiet Hour" to review briefly the values of the daily meditation in the early morning hours.

The following qualities will help one to keep on the upgrade: earnestness, interest in the thing one is doing, will power, endurance, order in what we do, dependableness, responsibility, unselfishness, and readiness to sacrifice.

Quiet Hour Meditations for the Week.

Monday: Matt. 7:7-14.
Tuesday: Matt. 6:33, 34.
Wednesday: 1 Cor. 9:24-27.
Thursday: Heb. 13:7, 8.
Friday: Heb. 12:1, 2.
Saturday: Matt. 26:41.

Topic for Jan. 11: "My Idea of What a Young Man Ought to Be."

Scripture Reading: Ex. 2:16-20.

Have each member of the society write out his and her own ideas on the topic, "My Ideas of What a Young Man Ought to Be." These may be unsigned, and should be written very frankly. Have these "ideals" read by the secretary of the society, and then discuss them.

Let two young men and two young ladies each discuss for one minute each, "What I Admire Most in a Young Man."

Make this meeting informal and just as helpful as it can be. Do not permit "cheap" ideas to be brought into the discussions. This is really a topic for serious discussion and may have real benefits.

Quiet Hour Meditations for the Week.

Monday: Luke 2:41-52.
Tuesday: 2 Tim. 3:14-17.
Wednesday: 2 Tim. 2:22.
Thursday: Daniel 6:10.
Friday: 2 Tim. 2:24-26.
Saturday: Prov. 4:1-8.

Dear brother pastor, if some one does not give you a Doran's Ministers' Manual for Christmas, then be sure to order it yourself immediately. Less than 5 cents a week for over six hundred pages of the most valuable helps imaginable—and arranged by Sundays, too. The Sun office will be glad to supply you. Price, $2.50.

PATHWAYS TO A HAPPY CHRISTMAS.

(A Christmas Meditation.)

By Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein.

There are two clear-cut, open pathways leading straight to a happy Christmas.

First is the pathway of appreciation. There is no one who reads these lines who is so poor but what he could be poorer; no one so "bad off" but what he could be "worse off"; no one so unfortunate but what he could be more unfortunate. Appreciation for what one has is an open pathway to a happy Christmas. The gospel of comparison is an antidote to gloom and dissatisfaction. Think of the people who have less than you. Think of the people who have more troubles than you, and you do not have to look far to find them by the dozens. Think of the people who would be glad to trade places with you. And when you thus compare your lot with theirs, it will not only make you happy in the thought of what you have to be thankful for, but it will also make you ashamed that you ever complain.

The poorly clad and hungry twelve-year-old boy who, with his widowed mother and three younger sisters had been ejected from their humble home on a cold Christmas Eve by a heartless, selfish landlord because they were unable to pay their rent, had learned this pathway to happiness. Wandering down the alley of the lonely city for fear of being seen by the police officers, they found an empty piano box on a back corner of a vacant lot. Huddling close together in the box while the winter wind was whistling outside, the little lad, in deep meditation, said to his mother, "I was just thinking how thankful we ought to be that we found this box, and how much better off we are than some other folks who don't have a box like this to keep out the wind." That mother had a spiritual wealth in having a lad with such an attitude toward life, and in having her children with her, even in the direst poverty—a wealth far superior, far greater than the wealth possessed by some who live in a palace with every material luxury, but whose children have no appreciation of their comforts and no love for their parents.

Would you find the pathway to a merry Christmas? Then "Count your blessings: name them one by one; and it will surprise you what the Lord hath done." All of us can travel this pathway of appreciation in the journey of a happy Christmas.

The second pathway to a happy Christmas is the pathway of service, and this pathway leads not only to a happy Christmas but to a happier Christmas. Certainly there is happiness in receiving gifts and remembrances from friends and loved ones in expression of the Christmas joy they wish for us. But such happiness is incomplete unless it is supplemented by similarly remembering our friends and loved ones. And such happiness is raised to still greater heights if it is also supplemented by doing something for those even outside our circle of friends and acquaintances, remembering those who otherwise would be forgotten, giving to those in need not because they are our friends, but because they are our God's children.

Our own fireside will burn the brighter this Christmas season if we add fuel to the fire of some needy brother. Our own food will taste the sweeter if we provide food for some needy family. Our own home will be the happier if we take happiness to another home. The one whose birth Christmas celebrates gave voice to that never-failing principle of life, "It is more blessed to give than to receive"; in other words, "a person is happier in giving than in getting." The happiest man of the first century was the Man of Galilee, because He gave the most for His fellow-men—He gave His love and His life. The happiest people in this twentieth century are those who, in proportion to their ability, are doing the most and giving the most in the interest of their fellowmen.

Your happiness this Christmas will be determined by the thought you give in planning for the happiness of others, in providing for the happiness of others, in providing for their needs and their welfare.

Some call these days through which we are passing, "days of depression," but they are also "days for expression"—days when the real humanity in men and women must be expressed, else that humanity will itself die within the soul, and those who thus neglect to give such expression will become the selfish beasts of the jungle. For people who think only of self and selfish indulgences live on the same social plain as the dog which thinks only of getting his own bone and his own place near to the fire.

These are days when men's hearts should be and are touched by the needs of their fellow-men; days when no person who claims to be respectable can be indifferent to the call of those in distress; days when people who have plenty are finding their greatest happiness in sharing it with those who have nothing; days when those who are rich are pouring out their resources to serve their fellow-men; days when the foul weeds of selfishness are blighting in thousands of lives and the flowers of charity blossoming there as never before. Men and women who have been content in their own economic security, and indifferent to the needs of their fellow-men have come into a new understanding of their responsibility and opportunity during these days of economic depression, and realize that "every man is his brother's keeper."

Because of this fact—the fact that thousands of people are realizing as never before how despicable it is to be selfish, to be content in enjoying their wealth, oblivious of those who suffer from want of the bare necessities of life; and because they are learning how joyful and delightful it is to be generous in helping others, because of this rising tide of brotherly kindness that is sweeping over our nation by reason of the economic depression, thousands of such people will this year enjoy the happiest Christmas of their lives, for they are walking the pathway of service which leads invariably to the happier Christmas.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"What I have written, I have written."—Pilate.

We stand with Pilate today. For 1930, the book is closed. "What I have written I have written."

Has the year been disastrous to your plans? Has it brushed the hand of death across your brow? Has it witnessed the wrecking of cherished ambitions and the loss of trusted friends? Has it overwhelmed you or yours with physical pain or mental anguish, or has the year brought joy and triumph to your door?

At any rate, 1930 is gone beyond recall. "What I have written, I have written."

But even as the books have closed, new books have opened. I may write again! Merchants are making inventories and taking account of stock. We are all planning in a more or less definite way our program of work and pleasure for 1931.

Against the background of the immediate past, our preparation may seem futile. We may do our best, honor our clearest judgments; but how utterly impossible it is to anticipate the happenings of a new cycle of time.

What the books shall hold at the end of this year I cannot see, but I shall write! I may not know, but I shall hope—hope with the hope that "springs eternal in the human breast"; hope with the faith that casts its anchor behind God; hope with the spirit that sends men and women forth to dare the great adventures; hope with the love that claims the comradeship of Jesus Christ.—D. A. P.

Prayer.—Our Father, we have received a thousand benefits from Thee. We confess our neglect of Thee, and that we have not employed our time as well as we should, we have left undone much that we could have done. We pray for Thy mercy and forgiveness, and to give us a new life for the New Year. May we carry no debt of sin into the New Year, but help us to carry a consecration of heart and a determination to do our tasks well, and when we are called from this world, we may pass in the peace of a beautiful sunset when the evening of life comes. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE INFLUENCE OF OUR FAILURES.

"Go, sell what thou hast."—Matt 19:21.

"Buy the truth, and sell it not."—Prov. 23:23.

The young ruler had just been told of some of his failures, but at the same time he had been told how to succeed. To put it in common parlance, Jesus told him to get rid of what kept him from succeeding. The young man could not see it, so he went away. He has never been heard of since.

To look at our past is discouraging, especially when it is compared with the ideals of Jesus. Perfection is not necessarily a finished state. It is the spirit of the soul that "looks unto the high calling." The perfection of the flower consists in its sweetness as well as its beauty. Character is measured not only by what we are ready to do, but also by what we are not ready to do. In addition to this, when we recall that it is through a realization of what we lack—our failures—that we must come to a determination to make good, we shall realize that it is through this very channel that perfection comes. If we are strong to do this, we can thank God for some failures.

Prayer.—Our Father, our days fly so fast! The pleasures of life are so soon gone. As we contemplate the past, its fortunes, failures and misfortunes, humble us in deepest humility and contrition. So enable us to meet the demands of the New Year that every concern of ours may rest in Thee. And in Thy strength, may we live and labor through the year. Help us, O Divine Power, to make Jesus the gateway to our every problem and be guided by Him into all righteousness. Cleanse Thou Thy people from every wrong, and make the earth Thy footstool. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SATISFY.

"Oh, satisfy us in the morning with Thy loving kindness, that we may rejoice and be glad all our days."—Psa. 90:10-17.

This is "Old Year's Day," the last day of the year. With it we look backward; tomorrow we shall look forward. And yet it is with a morning prayer that we begin this old year's day, for we shall not look backward alone, but we shall insist upon the daily look ahead.

As we cast our eyes behind us, how quickly we turn them away with shame! We have done so much that we should not have done, and we have so often failed to do what we should have done, "there is no health in us."

No health of our own, O strong and pure one, but Thy health is in us, and with it Thy hope. Even in this sad and ashamed last morning of the old year, so full of disgrace, we can be satisfied with Thy grace, we can exult in Thy lovingkindness, we can rejoice and be glad all our days.

Prayer.—For Thou, O God, art a conquering God. Thou art a satisfying God. Thou art a God who fillest out every lack, and makest every old year new. Do that for us, O God, we ask in the name of Thy Son. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A NEW YEAR PRAYER.

As the Old Year seeks the shadows
That lie black beyond the hill,
Where the summer twilight listened
To a plaintive whip-poor-will,
My glad heart is softly praying,
"Though I walk with joy or run,
Let me have the strength to labor
At the lot God would have me do!"

While the bells fling jubilations
Through the reaches of the skies,
In my heart a prayer is lifting,
"Let me be both kind and wise,
As I give myself for others,
As I lean to them and share
All the anguish and the burdens,
That their souls and flesh must bear!"

As the New Year comes with singing
Through the wind-stripped orchard trees,
Where ripe apples spill their fragrance,
Lo! I do not ask for ease,
But my heart is humbly praying,
"As I walk life's crowded way,
God, let each tomorrow find me
More like Jesus than today!"

—Edgar Daniel Kramer.

FRIDAY.

THE BACKWARD AND FORWARD LOOK.

One thing I do: Forgetting the things that are behind, and stretching forward to those things which are before, I press on . . ."—Phil. 3:14.

If we would look forward joyfully, we must be able to look backward peacefully. A peaceful retrospect depends upon having done our best. It depends upon a tremendous will to let no failure of the past hinder our future efforts. It depends upon a faith in God, "who doeth all things well." It depends upon an aggressive spirit like the soldier of whom it is said, "he threw his helmet forward into the thick of the enemy and then fought his way to recover it."

Standing within the threshold of the New Year, let the past be a vanishing road, a part of which lies before us full of opportunities for success. Make every point of the journey each day a place where the time pours out its treasures and where opportunity offers a peaceful tomorrow. He is foolish who will trifle with today. To do so means to bring torment to future memories.

Prayer.—Dear Father of all life, we lift our hearts to Thee in gratitude for the riches of the past. As we look back, we realize that some of these we have happily taken advantage of. Some we have missed. We pray for the New Year—that it may be rich with a sense of work well done and of a world made happier in some manner by our presence. Amen.

SATURDAY.

FELLOW-WORKERS WITH GOD.

"For we are fellow-workers with God."—1 Cor. 3:9.

This is a new vision of life. It is powerful enough to lift up the depraved nature of a man's soul and boost him on upon a larger life that promises never to shut one in by limitations.

Two men live outwardly alike. To one, labor is endurance; to the other, it is inspiration. To one, circumstances depress; to the other, they are a challenge. To one, limitations are amazing and confining; to the other, they offer penetration, enlargement and exhilaration.

If one works for a few paltry dollars, it is irksome. If one works for others, it is inspiring. Jesus Christ came to love and serve and to teach us to do the same. Love is the remedy for every evil. A happy world consists in making one another happy. That is Christ's work, and it is the Christian's work. The New Year challenges us to see that God has chosen us to do this work with Him, and "it is God that worketh in us, both to will and to do His good pleasure."

Prayer.—Dear Father, as the busy activities of the New Year come upon us, with the reawakening of spring and life, reawaken our souls to meet every golden opportunity. Give us the faith to understand that the silent and sombre places in our lives may be as blessed as the days of singing and of sunshine. In that faith help us to go forward in the New Year with the same hope and courage with which we enter the fresh joys of life's experiences. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE GOD OF HOPE.

"The God of hope fill you with all joy and peace."—Rom. 15:1-3.

January is a month of beginnings. The most hardened cannot cross the threshold without some sense of wonder and hope. It is some relief to know that the Old Year has gone—that its failures, sorrows and disappointments have been gathered into the past. The mere fact that they belong to 1930, and we now belong to 1931, sets a gulf between the two. Our hope in the new promises offer us better and brighter days. Let us step forth bravely with renewed trust in the light, the love, the truth of heaven. "The God of such hope fill you with joy in peace."

Prayer.—Dear Father, shine Thou upon our new way through the simplest movements and the humblest gifts. Teach us to ever remember that we can be more than conquerors through Him that loved us. Amen.

NO ROOM IN THE INN.

BY WENDELL P. KEELER.

"There was no room for them in the inn."
—Luke 2:7.

This is not difficult to understand. It was the busy season in Jerusalem and its suburbs. Crowds were going up to the capital, and hotel accommodations were in demand. It was like Washington the day before a presidential inauguration, or New London before the boat race, or Atlantic City at Easter time. All rooms could be rented at top prices. To be sure, the Mary for whom Joseph sought a lodging might have appealed for considerate treatment because of her condition. But Joseph and Mary could not pay the prices, and after all the innkeeper was not conducting the inn for his health. He was out for the money return, and this was his harvest time, and he must make the most of it. Looked at from a common-sense, commercial standpoint, there was clearly no room for Joseph and Mary at the inn.

There was likewise a social reason why there was no room for them. The Bethlehem inn was well situated at a convenient distance from Jerusalem, and the innkeeper, being a clever fellow and knowing how to get ahead in the world, was building up a select clientele. He looked forward to the time when the inn register would be a small edition of "Who's Who in Galilee." Travelers would stop there not only because of the food, but because they would meet the right king of people. That would be something worth while. But Joseph and Mary were not the sort of travelers to advertise the inn from this standpoint. When we look at the master paintings of the Madonna —when for example we look at Corregio's picture in the Uffizi gallery, that picture with the delicate beauty of Mary's face and the unforgetable color of her robes, we wonder how any inkeeper could have turned her away. But Mary did not look like that to the Bethlehem innkeeper. He saw only a drab peasant woman and standing beside her a carpenter from an insignificant village, with rough hands and rough clothes. Clearly, from the standpoint of making his inn a social success, there was no room for such people.

The Glory of Meekness.

There was a third reason why the innkeeper could not take them in. It was a reason in the back of his mind which perhaps he never clearly enunciated even to himself, but which any innkeeper would understand. Perhaps he had one room left or there was his own room which he sometimes turned out of in an emergency. But he must have one room that he could give to the kind of people who knew how to demand it. There are people who go along a highway, and go through the world, getting what they want, because—well, because they know how to elbow other people out of the way and get what they want. Joseph and Mary were not this kind. One can scarcely picture the parents of Jesus as go-getters. They would not make a fuss. If there was no room in the inn, and they were too weary to travel farther, they would go to the stable and be grateful for a manger. The innkeeper could see this at a glance and this makes his refusal of a room all the clearer.

I say we can easily understand the situation. One reads comments on this incident in old books and sermons and finds expressions of amazement that the mother of Jesus was shut out, so that the Son of God was born perforce in a stable. But we of this age are not amazed. We can easily apprehend the commercial and social and prudential reasons why the innkeeper acted as he did. We understand it all perfectly.

Commercialism.

I wonder whether we understand it too perfectly. Can it be that the spirit of our time makes it quite natural to shut out the Christ-child—almost inevitable indeed? Do our commercial, and social, and ethical standards make it difficult for us to find a genuine and openly recognized place for the Babe of Bethlehem and all that He stands for?

By way of a concrete test: How much place is there for the Christ-child in the very celebration of His birth? How widely and how sincerely and how devoutly will we as a people seek to place Christ in the midst of it all? We know how large a place commercialism claims in the Christmas celebration. At least four-fifths of the daily papers are now occupied in advertisements of Christmas gifts. We know how great a place social festivities claim. There are not days enough nor hours enough to provide for them all. Very well —we do not mean to decry either Christmas-giving nor Christmas pleasures. Jesus, who was one of the most social of men, would wish us to celebrate His birthday happily with as many friends as possible. And surely the giving of gifts is entirely in keeping with the festival. It was a gift that began it. But what I am asking is, whether we are really keeping a place for Christ? Can it be that like the innkeeper of old we are giving commercialism half the rooms and social festivities the other half, and relegating Christ to an inconspicuous spot in the stable? This is a nominally Christian country and Christmas is presumably a religious festival. Would a Hindu guess from the daily papers or from chance conversation that we are preparing devoutly to celebrate the birth of our Lord?

Christ and Christmas.

There is a way, of course, of giving Jesus a real place in the popular aspects of the Christmas celebration. If our social life is kept clean and wholesome, and considerate and kindly, for his sake; if our giving to our friends and dear ones is in his spirit, especially if our giving includes those to whom we would not give but for His sake—the underprivileged, the sick, the destitute, the lonely, the despairing; if, instead of being irritated by the multiplicity of appeals, we welcome chances to bring cheer and helpfulness, remembering that this was precisely what Jesus Himself did—if we do all this, then of course we place Him in the midst. If, in our homes, the children are frequently reminded that at this time we are rejoicing in the Saviour's birth, and if they also are truly inspired with the spirit of Jesus in their giving and their joys, then we are bringing the Christ-child into the center of our Christmas hospitality. It is not impossible, of course. One likes to believe that it is widely done. But let us recognize that it does not do itself in this age in which we live. If we make no effort to save a place for the Christ-child, he will be shut out from his own festival.

Now, the way we celebrate Christmas illustrates a trend of the time which constitutes a real and serious menace to our spiritual life. I do not say to our religious life—although that is included. I mean the larger thing—all our life in the realm of the spirit. The danger is that by our absorption in interests that are comparatively crude and superficial, we may shut out the finer things that make for genuine character and enriched personality and the peace of heart that the world can neither give nor take away.

Shutting Out Humility.

What was it that the Bethlehem innkeeper really shut out when he closed the door in the face of Mary, the mother of Jesus? What were the qualities of heart that Mary embodied and carried with her to the stable, as over against the qualities embodied by some blustering, bejeweled merchant from Capernaum whom the innkeeper eagerly admitted? One of these qualities was humility. Mary knew in her heart that her Child was destined to unexampled greatness. But this did not seem to her to be a reason for demanding a place in the inn. She preferred that her Baby should be born in a manger surrounded only by those who loved Him, rather than that He should be born in a room won by contention. She was great enough to be humble. And this quality, shown on Christmas Eve, was one of the beautiful characteristics of her life. After her boy grew to be a man and spake as never man spake, and wrought such deeds as drew great crowds about Him, who followed Him from place to place, Mary never intruded herself. She remained at home and prayed. Only at the end, when she learned that

THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

HOPEWELL, VA.

Complaints have been heard from many quarters lately because THE CHRISTIAN SUN has had no letter from Hopewell printed in its columns for such a long time. In fact, one has said that when she had looked through THE SUN and found nothing about Hopewell, she just laid the paper aside and did not read anything. So for the sake of the complainants, and for the sake of the many good things to be found in THE SUN, I do now take my pen in hand, unauthorized and unofficially, to set down a few of the happenings of the Hopewell Christian Church.

First of all, I must speak about the regret with which we read the final installment of Dr. Atkinson's diary, written while on his recent trip. Many of our members have read it with much pleasure and profit; and, like all such delightful articles, we wish it might continue on indefinitely.

The last Hopewell letter printed in the March 20th issue of THE SUN told of the resignation of the Rev. J. W. Barrett, who had been our pastor for about a year and a half. We still feel our loss. He very kindly came and supplied the pulpit a number of times after he moved from here. Since then, we have had the pulpit supplied by ministers of our own and other denominations. Early in June a young minister, Rev. C. T. Rice, a member of the Conference of the Free Will Baptist Church, was asked to supply the pulpit which he did until the last of October when he accepted a pastorate in his own denomination. Since that time, with the assistance of Dr. W. W. Staley and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, we have been trying to find a full-time pastor. One has been called to the pastorate, but has not made a definite reply as yet. We hope to receive a favorable reply in the near future. We do thank the Mission Board for the help which they are giving us at this time, and we pray that the work will prosper here in Hopewell. On November 23rd, our Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, preached at the morning service. It was the second timei that he had visited us, and, as the one who introduced him said, we had not forgotten the first sermon he preached to us. He preached another one just as good, and we hope that he will come again soon. On the following Sunday night, Rev. C. C. Ryan, of the First Christian Church, Richmond, preached to a large and appreciative audience. Rev. D. D. Nash, of Hopewell, preached to Rev. Ryan's congregation on the same night.

At this time, students from the Theological Seminary, Richmond, are supplying the pulpit until a regular pastor is secured. Since the last letter, two of our charter members have been called from our midst to take up their abode in the heavenly land—Mr. W. T. Newman and Mr. W. V. White. We miss them as we gather to worship in the Church which they loved so well.

We look forward to the New Year with faith and hope, that our little Church will go forward in the work of the kingdom with the love of the Christ in our hearts showing forth in all that we do and say. Pray for us.

MRS. W. A. WARNER.

PALM STREET CHURCH.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Palm Street Church gave a short program in the Church Sunday night, November 30th. The title of the program was "Hitherto and Henceforth." There was a good number present, and very good collection. The ladies of the Palm Street Missionary Society met with Mrs. W. A. Apple at her home Tuesday, December 9, 1930. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. E. Smith. Mrs. A. H. Hinshaw led in prayer, after which the society sang "Abide With Me." The devotional reading was led by Mrs. A. H. Hinshaw, who read the fourth chapter of Mark. Prayer by Mrs. Z. V. Myrick. "Our Guest from Africa," a reading by Miss Fannie Gillis. A call to prayer read by Miss Ophelia Norris. Then the roll was called and each member repeated a verse of Scripture at the call of her name.

The women are going to send a box of clothing to the mission Church at Fancy Gap, Va., next week. There being no further business, the meeting was closed by Mrs. J. L. Nease, after which the hostess served fruits.

MONTICELLO CHURCH.

Some more good news from Monticello Christian Church. Our good people have made considerable improvement recently on their Sunday School rooms, having painted each room with bright colors and also wired each room for electric lights. Mr. Eulin Cumbie has been elected Sunday School superintendent for the coming year. At our last quarterly conference we adopted the budget plan for this year and appointed a committee of six to see that the finance of the Church are raised monthly, Mr. W. F. Burton being the chairman. We also elected three new deacons, Bro. W. F. Burton, G. O. Dickey, and W. S. Rudd, and ordained them the following Sunday night. We are looking forward for another good year for the Master at Monticello.

Do not expect THE CHRISTIAN SUN next week. We are following an unbroken custom of taking a week for Christmas.

HE IS BECOME MY SONG. By Edith Anne Stewart Robertson. Macmillan; $2.25; pp. 275.

A poetic interpretation of the life of Christ, an interpretation of exquisite beauty and charm, awaits the fortunate reader of this volume. Mrs. Robertson knows her gospel narratives, historically and critically. But best of all, she knows her Master experientially. If you want a real thrill, read this book, depicting in verse and in various meters, the Matchless Life.

SILVER TRUMPET. By J. Wesley Ingles. Union Press; $1.50; pp. 359.

A young man who had spent four years in Princeton and without obtaining his degree, falls in love with a religious girl, a senior in an old-time Christian college. He decides to go to her college and make good. He does, as assistant coach, become converted, gives his life to coaching in his new-found alma mater instead of entering business as he had planned, and of course, marries the girl. It is a charming story of an impossible ideal of life. The conversion takes place under rather disgusing circumstances, but it was genuine. A college love story depicting the place of religion in actual life awaits yet the writing. This effort falls flat.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

her son was facing crucifixion and seemed to need her, did she make her way to Jerusalem and take her place at the foot of the cross. Surely Mary's true greatness of soul is seen in her very obscurity, in the gospel narrative.

"Blessed Are the Arrogant."

Humility is not a conspicuous twentieth century characteristic. When we repeat the beatitudes we pass rather hurriedly over the one that declares, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." The twentieth century mind cannot quite accept that. In this respect, at least, Nietzsche has more disciples than Jesus. Nietzsche's beatitude is "Blessed are the arrogant who, when they see what they want, take it." And yet we have a disturbing recollection that it was because a great nation followed that counsel and demanded a place in the sun and proceeded to go after it, that disaster followed. Perhaps Jesus was right. Perhaps it is better to deserve a place than to get it. Perhaps it is better to be great at heart than to be on the front page. At any rate, here is something that mothers may well have in mind as they read the Christmas story to their children.

No Room for Love.

Another thing the innkeeper shut out was love. He shut it out by his action, not only because Mary embodied love in its most beautiful and self-giving form, but also because, under the circumstances, the innkeeper must have been conscious that he was sacrificing human kindness to material gain. Unless his finer feelings had already been smothered, he must have heard a still small voice appealing to him for considerate treatment of Mary. But this voice was silenced by what seemed to be the inexorable demands of business. He had to choose between love and gold, and he chose gold and shut the door. Suppose that an impulse of generous warm-heartedness had won the day at that moment. Suppose he had provided for Mary and seen to it that she was cared for. Suppose he had taken a friendly interest in that little Babe born under his roof, and kept in touch with the family. Suppose he had welcomed them to his inn when, twelve years later, Joseph and Mary brought Jesus, now a handsome lad, to Jerusalem. Suppose the innkeeper had welcomed Jesus as a Guest when in the glory of His manhood Jesus had come with the words of life and salvation; can we picture what it would all have meant to that man?

There are flashes struck from midnights,
  There are fire-flames noondays kindle,
Whereby piled up honors perish,
  Whereby swollen ambitions dwindle;
While just this or that poor impulse,
  Which for once had play unstifled,
Seems the sole work of a lifetime,
  That away the rest have trifled.

The innkeeper made a mistake when he shut love out. Let us make room for love!

Have We Shut Out God?

And finally, the innkeeper shut out God. Perhaps he did this quite unconsciously. By shutting out humility and simplicity of heart, by shutting out love and kindliness, perhaps he shut out God without realizing what he was doing. Or perhaps he would have shut out God if he had known what he was doing. Business was good, his inn was filled with the right sort of people. He was getting on prosperously. What did he need of God? Last summer the archbishops of York and Canterbury issued a pastoral letter which included this sentence: "We are enclosed by a material civilization great in its achievements, confident in its self-sufficiency, in which no place is found for God or even for the spiritual life of man." That is a very solemnizing statement, but it is made by highly responsible men. Can it be true? Has our civilization grown so arrogant in its material achievements and its self-sufficiency that we no longer need God? Are we dispensing with God in the life of society at large? Are we dispensing with God in the life of our homes, or in the inner life of our souls? If so, how hollow life will become! How barren of valid hopes, or deep comfort, or adequate motive, or ultimate assurances of any sort! No, we cannot dispense with God. There have been times in history when nations have tried it and have been led by their experiences into a moral and spiritual desert, from which they have come back, in those great movements of religious revival which have indicated their dissatisfaction, their home-sickness of soul.

God has made us for Himself, and apart from Him we never can find the ultimate satisfaction of our hearts. Because we are spiritual personalities we are children of the Great Spirit and there is implanted in our hearts an instinctive need of the Father. Let us make room for God! We are busy people. Our lives, like the Bethlehem inn, are full, but we cannot shut out the best. We cannot exclude divinity. If, at this Christmas season, there is to be a Christmas glow in the inn, and a sound as of angels singing, it will be because we have thrown open the door and made a place for the Christ.—Christian Century Pulpit.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE
of the
CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

JERNIGAN.

W. H. Jernigan, aged 80 years, departed this life November 21, 1930. Mr. Jernigan was a member of the Holland Christian Church and in former years a very active member. Death was due to paralysis, from which he had been a sufferer for a number of years. He never regained consciousness after the last stroke and died the following day. His body was laid to rest in the Holland Cemetery. Funeral services were held at the Church, conducted by the writer and assisted by Dr. N. G. Newman.

Bro. Jernigan is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary E. Jernigan, who abides in the home near Holland; also two daughters, Mrs. J. M. Butler, formerly of Holland, Va., and Miss Maggie L. Jernigan, of Buckhorn, Va.; four sons—J. A. and H. T. Jernigan, of Buckhorn, and J. T. Jernigan, of Baltimore, Md., and A. L. Jernigan, of Alexandria, Va.; a brother, James Jernigan, of Newport News, Va.; a half-sister, Mrs. M. D. Whitfield, Weldon, N. C., and one half-brother, C. E. Jernigan, Franklin, R. F. D. May the Lord bless and be gracious unto those who mourn. W. M. JAY.

SMITH.

First Congregational-Christian Church, Newport News, Va., has lost one of her most loyal members in the passing of Mrs. R. L. Smith, age 52 years, wife of Deacon R. L. Smith. About nine months ago, Mrs. Smith suffered a paralytic stroke, and while she never completely recovered, she did recover enough to enable her to return to the worship services of the Church she loved and labored for so faithfully.

On November 15, 1930, she finished her earthly course, and the Lord took her. The memory of her beautiful life is a comfort to her husband; her sons, J. Arthur and Linwood L., and her daughter, Miss Elsie, and other relatives who survive. The funeral services were conducted from the Church in the presence of a large congregation of relatives and friends, the writer officiating.
